The role played by the Magyars in the Austrian oppression of the Jugo-Slavs deserves to be better known. The Magyars for a long time duped public opinion in Europe and America, representing themselves as a liberal and chivalrous people. In reality there is no nationality so unscrupulous in the oppression of others and so clever in concealing their true nature. The Magyars, like the god Janus, are double-faced; before foreigners they pose as a democratic and liberal nation, while at home it is admitted by Austrians that they are responsible for tyranny and denationalization. In considering the attitude of Hungary, it should be remembered that of its 19,254,600 inhabitants, there are not more than 8,742,300 Magyars, while there are 10,512,30 or over fifty-four per cent. non-Magyars. Yet the Magyars, in spite of this, affirm that their country is homogeneous and "national," and they do not recognize any nationality but their own. Even the democratic party of the well-known Michel Caroly! knows only the "Hungarians." Now, these Magyars, who hold in their power ten million non-Magyars, of whom there are six million Jugo-Slavs, have declared themselves ready to make any sacrifice in supporting the German plans in order to maintain their own domination. They have helped Germany and Austria to crush Serbia, and they are continuing their anti-Slav policy with the object of preventing Jugo-Slav unification, by which they would lose half of their present possessions.

The Best Habit In The World

is the habit of health. The way to get it is to train your bowels, through the liver, to act naturally, at a fixed time, every day.

Take one pill regularly (more only if necessary) until you succeed. Then you can stop taking them, without trouble or annoyance.

This has been the good-health rule for 50 years.

DOCTOR SAYS VINOL IS THE BEST TONIC

Honest Opinion Doctor Gave His Patient

Bedford, Ohio.—"I was in a pitiful condition, weak, nervous and run down so I could not do my housework. I had doctored for years and tried everything under the sun. A friend told me about Vinol. I asked my doctor about it, and he replied, 'It certainly is the best medicine that can be had today. I couldn't give you any better.' I took it, and today I am as well and strong as any woman could wish to be, and it was Vinol that saved me."—Mrs. Frank A. Horkey, Ash St., Bedford, Ohio.

THEY PAINT THE TOWN RED.

Curious Custom Still Obtains at Weddings in Bombay, India.

The rites and customs pertaining to the ceremony of marriage differ in various parts of the world. Everywhere the solemnization of the contract is attended with mirth and rejoicing, says the People's Home Journal. At a native wedding in Bombay, India, the wedding guests literally "paint the town red" by throwing on one another a kind of red powder until they are crimson from head to foot. Their disordered white draperies, the stains and splashes on their faces and hair and their unrestrained jollity give them the appearance of victims of a massacre.

In India, halls which may be secured for a small rental are provided for these ceremonies. But weddings are also celebrated in the Hindoo temples, with priests in attendance. In a Hindo temple a bride of 12 years of age must seat herself on a stone and be drenched with water by her bridesmaids. Behind her, her mother is subjected to a similar deluge, and at a short distance behind the bride's mother, the grandmother undergoes the same treatment, while in front of the dripping trio two priests sit beside a briskly burning wood fire mumbling the prescribed words for the ceremony. One casts a few grains of rice into the fire and the other, with a ladle, a few drops of oil. During these performances the bridegroom, seated in a carriage outside the temple, receives the congratulations of his friends. In the Far East the bridegroom would seem to be the member of the party most to be envied.

Heart Beat So Fast
Could Not Sleep
HAD TO SIT UP IN BED

Heart trouble has of late years become very prevalent. Sometimes a pain catches you in the region of the heart, now and then your heart skips beats, palpitates, throbs, or beats with such rapidity and violence you think it will burst. You have weak and dizzy spells, are nervous, irritable and depressed, and if you attempt to walk upstairs or any distance you get all out of breath.

There is no other remedy will do you so much good, restore your heart to a natural condition, build up your strength and give you back vigor and vitality as Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills.

Mrs. A. Russell, Niagara Falls, Ont., writes: "At nights I could not sleep, and had to sit up in bed, my heart would beast so fast.

"When I went to walk very far I would get all out of breath, and would have to sit down and rest before I could go any further. I was advised to get Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, and before I had used two boxes I could sleep and walk as far as I liked without any trouble."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50c per box at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

All Faced the Flag.

Justice Pendleton of the New York supreme court was examining applicants for citizenship recently when a band in the park began playing "The Star Spangled Banner." It was written by Francis Scott Key, Justice Pendleton's grandfather. The justice turned his head toward the window, and the hubbub in the court ceased. Then the justice rose to his feet, and the men who were seeking the right to take the flag as their own rose with him. Everybody faced the flag that was draped on the courtroom wall. Not a soul moved until the music ceased. Then the justice bowed and resumed his seat, and the work of making citizens went on again.

Made a Lock For the Key.

An old and curious key and lock are attached to the door of Temple church in Fleet street, London. The key weighs seven pounds, is eighteen inches long, and, unlike other keys, it was not made for the lock. On the contrary, the lock was made for it. Both key and lock have been in use since the crusades, the church itself having been built by the Knights Templars in 2485.—London Spectator.

Camels Have Been Used By the British Forces In Campaign Near Suez

ALONG the banks of the Suez Canal and thence along the old coast road to the east you will find to-day, between the endless series of British encampments, caravans of camels passing to and fro with their burdens or lying patiently at their mangers and chewing the cud with that tranquil expression of the beast which no stress of war can disturb.

There are more camels gathered here than ever were assembled in the bazaars of Cairo or Damascus. Though the defence of Egypt has been carried forward from the canal itself to the hills and dunes of the Sinai desert and to the land of promise beyond, the canal is still an integral part of the defensive scheme.

Roads and railways, it is true, run out here and there eastward from the bank, but there remains a vast hinterland unreclaimed from the desert waste in which our troops continually move. The riparian sands, if one may so call them, and the little Lancashires-in-the-desert which the loving sentiment of the north country Territorials has imagined, have become a network of roads and lines; and a motor-lorry will rattle you from Ballel to ——— (out away in the desert) as fast as a jaunting car on the roads of Connemara.

But ere long you will come to a region which car or locomotive has not yet defiled, and here the camel reigns supreme. Daily he carries the food and water for the men in the extreme line of trenches and at the outposts beyond, and on his back are loaded the posts and wires which daily extend "civilization."

He bears, too, the material with which the line of defence is being pushed forward; he is harnessed to guns in places where motors are baffled, and he carries the ambulance of the desert, in which two men are balanced on either side of his bump.

The Camel Transport Corps, although not exactly a fighting force, has been in action and received its baptism of fire. No shell or bullet can excite the stolid, contemplative animal; but it might have been expected that the camel drivers, fellaheen enrolled in the Egyptian villages, unarmed and untrained for war, would have run for it at the first sign of attack.

Yet, in fact, most of them responded admirably to the call of their British officers and stuck to their animals while bullets whizzed around. With characteristic simplicity, or it may be obstinacy, when told to bring in their camels to shelter they insisted on taking with them the blankets which are issued to every man, lest they should be stolen in their absence.

Some wanted to mount a hill under fire to get their money from their tents. The contempt which a Sudanese stalwart feels for the modern long-range fighting was expressed by one beadman — the more warlike Sudanese regularly act as headmen over the Egyptian fellaheen — who remarked, as the shells burst, that in his country they "fought it out with knives."

But another, who possessed the little knowledge of danger which is often so dangerous, when told to leave cover and fetch his camels, declined: "Me stoppa one Dardanelles; me no stoppa two."

The camel drivers themselves have placed a stigma on those who ran away, classing them as "Biats" (girls) who are not fit for the society of "Rigala" (men). And in some companies to-day the lines are divided between those who stayed and those who fled; and it is reward or punishment to be moved from the one to the other.

What makes life possible for the troops moving through the soft sand in the summer heat is that the sea is near and the bathing is splendid—like the bathing at Ostend in the days before the war. A broad and level beach which would make the fortune of any resort at home stretches eastward from Port Said mile on mile.

However still the day, the waves break in a continuous roll, and when the wind blows from the north the air is as fresh as on the Kent coast; nor is there wanting, as on that coast, "a certain liveliness" from occasional bombs.

To Increase Food Supplies.

The following migratory wild birds may now be killed in England and Wales with a view to increasing the food supply of the country:

Curlew, knot, whimbrel, golden plover, redshank, godwit, snipe, woodcock, teal, widgeon, mallard, shoveller, pochard, pintail, brent goose, pink-footed goose, white-fronted goose, barnacle goose, and grey lag goose.

The food controller has empowered the Board of Agriculture to authorize the taking of sea fish in the tidal or territorial waters of England and Wales by any method or appliance, and at any time or place, which is now unlawful; and to permit the sale of fish so taken.

What a "Tommy" Costs.

The weekly value of the state's expenditure on the infantry private with a wife and two children, corresponding to the wage payable in civil life, is approximately as follows:

Pay, 7s to 10s 6d, of which 3s 6d goes to the wife as compulsory allotment; clothing, 3s; board and lodging, 20s; separation allowance, 14s 6d to 21s (plus the man's 3s 6d allotment); civil liabilities grant, average 7s 6d, maximum 10s. Cost per week 47s 6d to 94s 6d.

For single soldiers the cost varies from 30s without civil grant to 73s 6d with the grant.

To Shock Shocks Away.

In a recent number of The Lancet Dr. W. J. Turrell describes various applications of electro-therapy at the Radcliffe Infirmary, Oxford, England. One interesting point is the treatment of unclean wounds by ionization, produced either by the application of salt solutions traversed by an electric current or by means of ultra-violet rays. As is well known, electric currents are now much used in treating certain varieties of rheumatism.

Of considerable importance is the application of mild electric "shocks" to stimulate the voluntary movements; the treatment is specially efficacious in those cases of nerve shock where the patient is under the delusion that he has lost the power of his limbs.

However, the application of electric methods to cases of "shell-shock" calls for discretion. In some such cases the patient is not at all benefited and, indeed, exhibits "electrophobia."

Why Roman Meal Is Superior To Other Foods

IT is a complete food. Every ingredient required by the body for perfect health must come from food. There is not one essential food element missing in Roman Meal; all are present in proper proportion. Roman Meal is thus a "balanced ration." This accounts for the sense of "wellness" following use of

Dr. Jackson's
Roman Meal

It is superior because:

First—It is the only balanced ration sold in package form being composed of wheat, rye, bran and flaxseed—the latter rendered odorless and tasteless by electricity.

Second—Our digestive canal was developed into a forty-foot tube of muscles because our ancestors lived upon food with more waste than nutrition, considered by bulk. This waste was largely grain waste. Without plenty of waste the digestive canal does not function properly, and constipation results. Roman Meal contains exactly the right amount of waste. Over-milled and over-refined foods contain none.

Third—Roman Meal contains 25% flaxseed. Flax is three times as nourishing as wheat, rye or oats. Therefore Roman Meal not only has the correct amount of waste, but it is very nourishing as well. Flax heals the irritation caused by bran, and prevents intestinal catarrh often resulting from bran used alone, or when mixed with white flour or refined cereals. Roman Meal relieves constipation or "money back."

Fourth—The excessive quantity of starch in white flour and refined cereals ferments and produces vegetable acids. These are absorbed into the blood, turning it acid. This acidity happens because the soluble alkalis which Nature provided in the dark parts of the grain to prevent this absorption are milled out and thrown away. Roman Meal contains the necessary amount of soluble alkalis to keep the blood non-acid.

Acid blood produced by the refined cereals induces disease in the organs. The alkalis in Roman Meal keep the blood fluid and "cool."

Try Roman Meal. Get it at your grocer's. Do not stir Roman Meal porridge except when mixing meal and water.

What Would It Be Worth to You To Be Free of Indigestion

INDIGESTION becomes a habit to a certain extent. Many of the conditions under which we live are artificial. We eat too much, take too little natural exercise, and have too much worry and anxiety. The digestive system does not get a chance.

The liver is usually first to get out of kilter, then the bowels become constipated, and the whole process of digestion is disorganized. Instead of being properly digested, the food ferments and causes sour stomach, belching of wind, pressure of gas about the heart, suffocating feelings and fainting spells.

Headaches, pains in the limbs and back, tired, depressed feelings, irritability and discouragement are other symptoms.

You may have tried stomach medicines and aids to digestion, until you have given up in despair.

And Rid of the Poisons Which Cause Pain, Tired Feelings?

Operation Avoided

Mrs. Annie Watkins, Glace Bay, New Harbor, N.S., writes: "I think it is time for me to give my experience with your wonderful Kidney-Liver Pills. For seven months I suffered with what the doctor called indigestion, but whatever it was, I suffered terribly. The pain would start under my left shoulder and pass down my side until it reached the pit of my stomach. It just seemed as if the flesh were being torn from the bone. At times I used to go without food from one morning until the next. I had no energy left for work at all. At last our doctor sent me to the hospital for a month. For four days and nights I never broke my fast except for a drink of water. After four weeks' treatment there I returned home, and was back only four days when the pain came back worse than ever. Then I was told I would have to undergo an operation, but I would not consent to that. At last I read about Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills and started to take them. At first I I did not notice much difference, but still I kept on using them, and by the time four boxes were used I was perfectly well again. That was in 1914, so you see I can safely say that I was cured. I shall always be grateful to Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, as they did more for me than four doctors."

But what would it be worth to you to be free of all this trouble, to feel again the old energy and vigor, and to enjoy healthful living?

Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills are not offered to you as an experiment. There is no question as to what they will do by way of awakening the action of the liver, kidneys and bowels, and removing the cause of indigestion and kindred ills.

Their curative powers have been proven in hundreds of thousands of cases, until they are established in the great majority of homes as the one family medicine which is indispensable.

It is for you to apply this treatment in your own case. It will only cost you a quarter to make the test, and we do not hesitate to predict that the results will surprise and delight you.

POLICEMAN'S SHOT AT FLEEING MAN SLAYS LITTLE GIRL

New York, Nov. 17. — Dorothy Ackerman, two years old, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Ackerman, of No. 146 Madeline avenue, Clifton, N. J., was instantly killed by a stray bullet in sight of her mother and scores of school children. Policeman Henry Prall, of the Clifton police force, was the unintentional slayer of the little girl.

Wm. J. Fox, of No. 123 Madeline avenue, Clifton, a storekeeper, telephoned the police headquarters that three men had been annoying him for several hours. Three weeks ago his store was robbed and he believed the strangers were the men who were responsible for the deed. Policeman Prall, accompanied by Thomas Van Orden, a constable, went to the Fox store, but by the time that they arrived the three men were standing in an abandoned quarry across the road. Prall and Van Orden demanded to know what they wanted there. One of the three ran while Constable Van Orden put handcuffs on the other two. Prall followed the fleeing man, who ran through the quarry in the direction of Public school No. 4, located on Sixth avenue. The policeman fired two shots into the air calling to the man to stop.

When his demand was not heeded, Prall fired two shots directly at the man who, observing, rushed up a hill and escaped. Outdistanced, Prall returned to aid Van Orden.

Mrs. Ackerman left her home with her daughter and her son, James, five years old, just about the time Fox telephoned for police protection. She was going shopping. They had reached a point alongside of the school, and paused a minute while the children of the lower grades, who were enjoying a recess, called and talked to little Dorothy.

Suddenly Dorothy fell to the ground—one of the bullets from the policeman's revolver having passed through her brain. Mrs. Ackerman carried her into the school. Dr. Robert Armstrong, county physician, was summoned. He declared that the bullet had passed completely through Dorothy's head. It was not until Pratt returned to police headquarters that he learned what he had done. He was so overwhelmed with grief that a physician had to be summoned.

At police headquarters the two men under arrest said they were Michael Ward, 23 years old, of No. 469 Main street, Patterson, and Alexander Matthews of No. 115 Lewis street, Paterson. Extra caps were found in their possession and on the spot where the arrest was made a revolver and a blackjack were picked up. Shortly after Ward was placed in a cell, he attempted suicide by hanging himself with his necktie.

Gave Life for Ten Others.

A thrilling story of self-sacrifice is recorded in the London Gazette announcement of the award of the Albert Medal of the First Class to Lance-Corp. Charles Henry Anderson, late of the 114th Battalion of the London Regiment, who lost his life in France in November last. The official narrative is as follows:

On Nov. 28, 1916, Lance-Corp. Anderson was in a hut in France with eleven other men, when, accidentally, the safety pin was withdrawn from a bomb. In the semi-darkness he shouted a warning to the men, rushed to the door, and endeavored to open it so as to throw the bomb into a field.

Failing to do this, when he judged that the five seconds during which the fuse was timed to burn had elapsed, he held the bomb as close to his body as possible with both hands in order to screen the other men in the hut.

Anderson himself and one other man were mortally wounded by the explosion, and five men were injured.

No "Undue Prominence."

The recent Colonial Office vote led to a varied debate in the Imperial Commons. Mr. Walter Long denied that undue prominence had been given to the deeds of Dominion soldiers—described the patience with which the Empire has borne the limitation of imports—emphasized the intense loyalty of native races, which asked to serve in France—and suggested that, since the word emigration implies exile, we should substitute "migration" for it. Many men and women will wish to "migrate," and they should be assisted and guided. The suggestions of the Imperial War Conference as to Indian labor in Crown colonies would not be "pigeon-holed" and forgotten. The other resolution about soldiers' graves has been acted upon, and these are as peaceful and beautiful as graveyards at home. The Imperial Conference had shown that the whole Empire was determined to secure a complete victory and a lasting peace.

Motor Barges Used.

A train of barges driven by motor traction recently reached the Regent's canal with loads of coal from the Midlands in England. These were the first motor barges to navigate the English canals for any distance, and the beginning of a development which the Board of Trade is watching with interest. In their journey of 150 miles from Cannock Chase to St. George's wharf, King's Cross, the motor barges navigated seven different canals, and managed all the locks with ease, leaving the horses on the towpath panting after them in vain. The motive power is a small motor driven by a mixture of paraffin and petrol. This is fixed to the stern, and can be transferred from one barge to another in a few minutes.

The Fan in England.

The fan appeared in England during the reign of Richard the Second, and found great favor with the higher classes in the reigns of Henry the Eighth and Queen Elizabeth. The Virgin-Queen was very fond of fans, which she declared were the only present a sovereign could accept from a subject. In a wardrobe-account of Elizabeth thirty fans of various kinds, many of them richly jewelled, are mentioned; and Shakespeare in several of his plays alludes to the costly fans of the period, which were suspended from the girdle by a golden chain.

Australian Lizards.

The Australian continent is abundantly supplied with lizards. Three hundred and ninety species are recorded, and they may be seen not only in woods and prairies and deserts, in the water, among rocks and in trees, but also in the less frequented city streets.

The Wettins of England.

If the king of England were to renounce the throne and resolve to become an ordinary citizen he would be called George Wettin. How does the name Wettin come to be the king's surname? This is the answer:

Queen Victoria married Albert, duke of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha, of the senior branch of the house of Saxony. The family name by which this house, dating from the middle of the tenth century, came to be known afterward was Wettin, and this was and is the surname of both branches—the Ernestine and Albertine—of the house of Saxony. The name comes from the castle of Wettin, near Magdeburg, which claimed Wittekind as the founder of the race.

The Apache of the High Seas.

The submarine is the veto power of the sea. It is purely obstructive and destructive. It contributes nothing to wealth or civilization. It is in a class apart from other craft. The other forms of water craft can be used and are used to make the world a better place to live in. They convey merchandise and passengers. They serve as a means of communication between nations and peoples. The submarine is a mere killer. It cannot even fight. It must kill furtively and secretly, like an assassin.—Edward G. Lowry in World's Work.

Not an American Proverb.

Homer sometimes nods, even nowadays. The Saturday Review is responsible for the statement that the proverb "Honesty is the best policy" was improved in the United States into "Make money—honestly if you can, but make it." Quintus Horatius Flaccus was not an American citizen and the great American republic was not thought of for a good many centuries after he penned his famous injunction, "Rem facere, recte si posses" (Do a thing, but do it right if possible).—London Globe.

Quartermain's Model.

If, in drawing Allan Quartermain, Sir Rider Haggard took as his model Capt. Selous, he at least did justice to one of the mighty hunter's most marked traits.

Capt. Selous was modesty personified, and could seldom be induced to talk even impersonally of his adventures. Quartermain always professes, in moments of emergency, to be in a state of pitiable fear; but, of course, nobody believes him, and when the time for action comes he bears himself as a hero.

Among the natives of Africa Capt. Selous was known as "the man who never told a lie." His fictional counterpart bears the title Macumazaha, which is the Kaffir equivalent for "the man who gets up in the middle of the night."

The Turk and the Crescent.

The crescent was not originally the emblem of the Turk. It was first used by the primitive Christians of Constantinople and the eastern provinces of the old Roman empire as an emblem of the growing influence of Christianity. It was not until about the year 1453, after the Turks had overrun Asia Minor and part of southern Europe and had captured Constantinople, that the Turks adopted the crescent as their national emblem. The Koran prohibits the use of images and symbols in the religious ceremonies of the strict Turks or the internal decoration of the temples and mosques, the rule being so strict as not to allow the martial or civic decoration of the greatest generals or pashas, successful commanders or other distinguished persons. The adoption of the crescent by the Turk as a national emblem is an oddity which has so far remained unexplained.

Inheritance Tax Argument

Inheritance taxes are very heavy. Unlike Fire hazard they are not merely possible, they are absolutely certain.

They deplete your estate at once, and to your heirs represent a specific and definite loss of money.

In New York a $250,000 estate would pay a combined Federal and state tax of about $12,000. If left to a friend or distant relative, about $22,000. The John Jacob Astor estate paid $3,150,000. J. P. Morgan has insured his life for $2,500,000 to cover a similar loss.

Thus the estate is provided promptly with the ready cash to pay this tax and other expenses without the need of hurriedly disposing of securities or other assets, perhaps at a loss, to meet such needs. The logic of the situation urges immediate action. Premium rates, however low, advance with age and so does the possibility of entering the physically impaired group and losing the opportunity to secure this protection.

Knowing that this loss is actually coming, it is simply a matter of ordinary business prudence to guard against it. The Sun Life Assurance Company of Canada offer you a plan to do so at very low cost.

HINDENBURG LINE IS SMASHED

A SPLENDID BRITISH VICTORY IN THE WEST

THE HINDENBURG LINE IS STORMED ON WIDE FRONT

Famous German Defence System Broken to a Depth of Four or Five Miles---Enemy Taken Completely By Surprise and British Under Sir Julian Byng, Former Commander of the Canadians Captured First and Second Systems of Defences ---A Glorious Victory.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, November 21.—The Hindenburg line has been broken to a depth of four to five miles, the War Office announces.

The British troops stormed the first system of the Hindenburg line defenses on the whole front between St. Quentin and the Scarpe River, a distance of thirty-two miles.

The attack was begun yesterday by the third army. There was no artillery preparation and the Germans were taken completely by surprise. The second system of German defenses captured by the British is known as the Hindenburg support line. The British captured Benavis, Lameau Wood, Lavaquerie, the defenses known as Welsh Ridge, and Ribecourt village, and their operations are continuing. The British infantry and tanks pressed on and captured the second system of defenses over a mile beyond.

The British also fought their way through Couillet Wood. Lieutenant-General Sir Julian Byng is in command of the attacking arm. Several thousand prisoners have been taken. The whole German line west of the Canal Du Nord to the Bapsume-Cambrai Road has been captured.

The announcement follows: "Yesterday morning the third army under command of General Hon. Sir Julian Byng, delivered a number of attacks between St. Quentin and the River Scarpe. These attacks were carried out without previous artillery preparation and in each case the enemy was completely surprised.

"Our troops have broken into the enemy's positions to a depth of between four and five miles on a wide front, and have captured several thousand prisoners, with a number of guns. Our operations are continuing.

"At the hour of assault on the principal front of the attack a large number of tanks moved forward in advance of the infantry and broke through successive belts of German wire which were of great depth and strength.

"Following through the gaps made by the tanks, English, Scottish and Irish regiments swept over the enemy's outposts and stormed the first defensive system of the Hindenburg line on the whole front.

"Our infantry and tanks swept on in accordance with the programme and captured the German second system of defense more than a mile beyond. This latter is known as the Hindenburg support line.

"In the course of this advance East County troops took the hamlet of Benavis and Lateu Wood after stiff fighting."

MOST AMBITIOUS YET.

The British movement in tis early phases gives appearance of being the most ambitious that has been undertaken by them on the western front since the creation of their new armies give them power to strike effective blows. The attack came almost without warning. The only premonitory symptoms being a series of somewhat elaborate trench raids. Even rather extensive operations in this sector reported last night by the British War Office, which the German staff announced it had taken measures to meet, gave hardly a hint that a push in any such force or over such a wide extent of front was in prospect. There has been little speculation over the possibility of a British attack in force on the western front this fall, other than in Flanders, where the main British effort was regarded as concentrated.

BERLIN ADMITS LOSSES.

BERLIN, November 21.—German reserves checked the British in rear positions after ground had been gained by the attackers, says to-day's official communication. The loss is announced of Marcoing, Graincourt and portions of permanently established works.

CANADIANS NOT ENGAGED.

OTTAWA, November 21.—Reports seem to indicate that Canadians were not very actively engaged in the present big British offensive as official statement of the War Office mentions English, Irish and Scotch brigades only. It is thought here the Canadians are in reserve camps at present.

LINE BROKEN IN MANY PLACES.

(By The Associated Press.)

BRITISH ARMY HEADQUARTERS IN FRANCE, Tuesday — The redoubtable Hindenburg line in the Cambrai sector was broken in many places to-day by the great force of British tanks and this afternoon the infantry which went through the gaps was still battling its way forward. The surprise attack was launched at dawn over a wide front. In the first few hours its progress was marked with evident success, and up to the latest reports received at this time, four p.m., had been moving along regularly, according to schedule. The prisoners captured were in the thousands. The casualties of the attacking forces thus far have been light. Great numbers of German dead lie before the main Hindenburg trench, where the bewildered enemy, taken unawares, made a half hearted attempt to stem the onrushing Britons. The battle was an innovation for the western front, for it was begun without any preliminary artillery work. Upon the army tanks rested the responsibility for victory or defeat, and they fulfilled all expectations. Iron giants went through tremendous lines of barbed wire entanglements in front of the main Hindenburg positions and on over trenches as though they were on parade.

FIVE THOUSAND PRISONERS TAKEN.

LONDON, November 21.—The British have taken five thousand prisoners in the present advance in France.

LONDON, November 21.—The towns of Havrncourt, Carcoing, Graincourt and Anneaux, and Neuf Wood, have been captured by the British.

COMPLAINTS AGAINST EXEMPTION BOARDS SENT TO PREMIER

In Reply Sir Robert Borden Writes That He Has Referred the Matter to the Military Service Council For Consideration

THE FARMERS PROTEST

There have been frequent complaints against the findings of the Exemption Boards in this district, chiefly from the farmers, who state that the farms are being denuded of men.

A petition is being circulated, and complaints have been made to Capt. J. H. Burnham, who has sent them on to Premier Borden. In reply Mr. Burnham has received the following letter from Sir Robert, and in this connection Mr. Burnham wishes it understood that while he conveyed the complaints to the Prime Minister, he himself offered no criticism:

Dear Mr. Burnham,—I am in receipt of your telegram concerning the tribunals which are dealing with exemption cases in your district, and I am referring the same to the Military Service Council for consideration.

Faithfully yours,
R. L. BORDEN.

Overheated Stove Caused Small Blaze

The Stock and building of the Toronto Ladies' Tailoring Company, 440 1-2 George street, were badly damaged by fire this morning at 8.35. The extent of the damage to the stock which is owned by A. Erkonets, was about $400, and to the building, which is owned by Mrs. Birdsall, about $25.

CAUSE OF THE FIRE.

The fire was caused by an over-heated Quebec heater, in the front of the store, in which the proprietor was burning some rubbish. When Mr. Erkonets became alarmed at the heat of the pipes he knocked the stove and pipes down and sustained a painfully burnt hand. The Fire Department was called from Fanning's store, and Chief Grange extinguished the blaze, which had gained considerable headway, with twenty gallons of chemical, and in this way saved damage by water.

MORE NAMES ON THE LIST

TO-DAY'S MILITARY NEWS

KILLED IN ACTION.

Pte. Chas. Phillip Powell, formerly of the 93rd Battalion.

Pte. Edward Maidment, Canadian Infantry.

Pte. Edward Wicker, formerly of the Canadian Beavers, son of Mr. E. Wicker, Mark street, East City.

Capt. Richard E. Russell, formerly of the De Laval.

WOUNDED.

Pte. R. Gadoua, formerly of the 93rd Battalion, Park Street.

GASSED.

Pte. Wm. James Wood, formerly of the 93rd Battalion.

MISSING.

Pte. Wm. John Slater, Infantry.

PTE. CHARLES PHILIP POWELL.

Pte. Charles Philip Powell, who enlisted in the 93rd Battalion, here, in March of 1916, and went overseas in July of the same year with the Peterborough County unit, is officially reported killed in action in the fighting at Paschendaele. Pte. Powell, whose relatives live in the Old Country, was transferred from the 93rd to another Canadian infantry battalion in France, and had been on the firing line since the autumn of last year. He had no relatives in Peterborough.

PTE. EDWARD MAIDMENT.

A message was received in Peterborough this morning for Miss Florence Maidment, formerly of the Margaret Cox Home for Girls, stating that her brother, Pte. Edward Maidment, Canadian Infantry, is officially reported killed in action. Pte. Maidment had been in France for some time and was wounded some time ago.

Miss Maidment is now living near St. Catharines, and the message has been sent to her.

PTE. EDWARD WICKER.

Pte. Edward Wicker, son of Mr. Edward Wicker, 317 Mark street, East City, is officially reported killed in action, according to word received from Ottawa this morning. Pte. Wicker enlisted in Toronto with the Beavers' Battalion, and after going overseas with that unit, was transferred to another Canadian battalion at the front. He was wounded some time ago, but returned to the firing line, only to meet death in the recent fighting. His brother, Pte. Fred Wicker, of the 93rd Battalion, was killed in action last January.

CAPT. RICHARD E. RUSSELL.

Mr. Charles Cook, of the Silo Department of the De Laval Co., received word this week that Captain Richard E. Russell had been killed in action on Nov. 6th." Captain Russell, who came to this city in 1913, was foreman of the Tin Department of the De Laval until 1914, when he enlisted with the 26th New Brunswick Battalion. For some time he was instructor at Shorncliffe and had been in France eighteen months when he fell.

PTE. ROY GADOUA.

Mrs. Gadoua, Park Street south, has received official word from Ottawa that her son, Pte. Roy Gadoua, formerly of the 93rd Battalion, is reported slightly wounded, but remaining on duty. Pte. Gadoua's brother.

Political Offensive Must Not Be Given Up By Allies

Arthur Henderson, Leader of the British Labour Party Says German High Command Are Trying to Prevent Their Military Failure From Leading to Political Upheaval at Home.

THE AIM OF THE ALLIES

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

LONDON, Nov. 21. — The Allies should not abandon their political offensive against Germany, according to Arthur Henderson, because in many respects it is the most dangerous offensive the House of Hohenzollern has to face. Henderson, as leader of the Labour party, has aligned with him some four and a half million voters through the coalition of his party and the co-operative movement.

"Look at this item in the paper," said the Labour leader. The item reported the address of the Crown Prince to the latest batch of German boys brought to the western front to join their fathers and brothers. "There are powers at work attempting to sow discord between the German people and their sovereign, knowing Germany otherwise is invincible," said the Crown Prince. "It is your work also to prevent this." And more of the same.

"Of course Germany is not "otherwise invincible," said Henderson. 'The Crown Prince pretends not to fear the Allies' military efforts, but he shows a great concern regarding their ability to make a wide breach by other means between the Kaiser and his people.

MILITARY PLANS FAIL.

"The real position is that the German people and the High Command realize that their military plans have failed. They are now at pains to prevent their military failure leading to a political unheaval at home.

"Military victory is not the final aim of the Allies. It is a means to an end. It is sought in order to enable them to achieve the sort of peace which they conceive to be essential to prevent any future recurrence of the present awful struggle, and to secure the end of the war for all time, a peace which will recognize the rights of peoples to dispose of themselves as they think best and will make the world safe for democracy, a peace which will solve all old grievance without creating new ones and which will secure just recompense for the innocent victims of the vast wrong perpetrated by German militarism during the war.

THE POLITICAL WEAPON.

"Those are broadly the aims of the Allies, and it seems to me that to supplement military effort by the political weapon in order to more quickly achieve such an honourable peace, would not weaken the Allies' position, but would strengthen it. "We are at war with the Kaiser and Kaiserism, and personally I do not want to see any peace made with Kaiserism. If the peace settlement is to have any prospect of durability it must be made with the German people and not with the Kaiser.

"President Wilson, who has a profound knowledge of real politics, and whose utterances come nearer to the ideals of democracy than those of any other Allied statesman, has seen the possibilities of the use of the political weapon in this war, and he has courageously defined the important differences between the German people and its autocratic rulers. In this differentiation I fully concur with President Wilson, and I strongly advocate a no-

ITALIANS INFLICT TERRIBLE CASUALTIES ON AUSTRO-GERMANS

Italian Troops Single-handedly Are Holding Firm But a Further Retirement May Be Necessary, According to Rome Despatches

MORALE IS GOOD

(Special to the Toronto Star and the Peterborough Examiner).

(By John Hearley).

ROME, Nov. 21.—Because of the disadvantageous battle ground offered along the Piave River, a further strategic retirement of Italian troops may be necessary, according to reliable information to-day. As yet none of the French and British reinforcements have gone into action.

The Italian troops, single-handed, are bearing the full burden of the Teutonic assault. They are holding firm and inflicting terrible casualties on the enemy. Their morale is the best probably it has ever been. So also is the spirit here in Rome. The public supports the war as never before. All the fruits of Italy's two years of strife have now been swept away; a dread enemy reaches ever forward, seeking her most treasured possessions of art and industry. But the internal dissension which Germany craftily hoped to start has never appeared.

The enemy won his first blow by treachery in the army and in the civilian population; then the sudden overwhelming spectacle of the perfectly equipped Teutonic armies made the Italian officers lose their heads. Germany played for a revolution in Italy, like that she aided in Russia. She will never attain that hope.

BURWASH PRISON CHARGES UNDER INVESTIGATION

Prisoner States That He Was Kicked and Beaten by Officials and Then Placed on the Machine and Flogged Although Under Doctors' Care

EVIDENCE IS DENIED

(Special to the Toronto Star and the Peterborough Examiner).

BURWASH, Ont., Nov. 21.—Judge Coatsworth yesterday began an investigation, at the request of the Provincial Government, into conditions at Burwash Prison Farm, particularly the alleged ill-treatment of prisoners.

One of the prisoners examined, who claimed cruel punishment, was a man who was convicted of theft in Hamilton in July last, and sent to the farm for two years, less one day. He stated that he was forced to work while under the doctor's care for stomach trouble. He had a fight with an Austrian fellow-prisoner, and in punishment was forced to wear a ball and chain for 15 days, during which time he had to sleep with his clothes on. At his request the ball and chain were removed, but the next day Sergeant Oliver attempted to put it on again. He resisted, and was severely beaten and kicked by the Sergeant, he said, the beating resulting in his being confined to bed for several days. After some days Supt. Neelands and Sergeant Oliver attempted to force him to rise, and he defended himself with a hammer. He was then placed on the machine and flogged. When he denied knowledge of the person who put the hammer

"Peterborough Presents Possibilities Unsurpassed."

WEDNESDAY, NOV. 21, 1917

THE GREAT PROBLEM.

The problems of increasing food products is attracting the attention of the Borden government organs. The Ottawa Journal-Press quotes Lord Rhonda, the British food controller, as saying:

"The harvests of the world will not meet the requirements of ourselves and our allies during the next twelve months unless our present rate of consumption is materially reduced."

And Lord Northcliffe recently made this statement:

"It is up to the North American continent to supply Great Britain and her allies with what food they require."

In the course of another address in order to stimulate more action on the part of producers, he said:

"There is a possibility that we might lose this war through a shortage of food."

In view of the importance placed upon food production by such positive statements by such high authorities, the Journal "views the situation with alarm;" and not without reason; and it thinks that such statements have done much to bring farmers to an understanding of the seriousness of the situation, and "the great responsibility that rests upon their shoulders."

This may be; but the same sense of responsibility has been brought to induce fit men to enlist; they fail to respond, and the government takes the extreme measure of conscription to enforce their services.

The government attaches supreme importance to the work of getting men to the front, and takes steps to provide that men are taken from the farms, where their services in the interests of greater production are absolutely essential.

The Journal, a strong conscription organ, makes plea for the exemption of farmers, a measure that will help the food production situation, but one that will militate against getting men for the ranks.

The Journal advocates the exemption of every man skilled in farm work—that street car men, largely drawn from the farms, who have passed for military service, "should be given the alternative of returning to the farm."

There exists no doubt that the feeling is growing that food production is becoming of more importance than even the enrolment of soldiers; yet the Borden government is centring all attention upon the principle and application of the Military Service Act. Everyone who dares to insist that there is something as important, is branded as traitorous and disloyal. The government organs are demanding that the government give greater attention to production at the risk of weakening the ranks of military service.

Something of an organized attempt should be made by the government. Under the Military Service Act many are placed in Class C, unfit for military service, but fit for home service. If this class were organized into a production brigade, and their services, under military rule, systematically utilized in farm production, a great want in the production campaign would be filled—and the shortage of labour somewhat remedied.

It is evident that to meet in any half adequate way the demand for meeting this most important need, the government must act. The responsibility rests upon it; it has the authority, and command of money to back a nation-wide, organized scheme of increased production. What we want is less politics, and more production.

Premier Borden is sure of election in King's—his nomination was endorsed by Mr. A. de Witt Foster, who had to resign his seat on account of the "great" army horse deals in which he figured.

BUY A VICTORY BOND.

BRITISH RESOURCEFULNESS.

For a time, Germany and German brag and self-assertion, fostered a pretty general belief in the superior organizing skill and executive capacity of Germany. There was a general belief that in the matter of organization her system was perfect and that, especially in military matters, no nation could hope to rival her. It is admitted that by forty years' preparation she placed a mighty army mightily equipped in all material ways upon a fighting basis. She entered the war armed cap-a-pie, and with the advantage of four or five decades of preparation she should have been invincible. England was unprepared, except upon the sea, where she has continued to rule and hold Germany's great navy harmless.

In 1914, the greatest expeditionary force Britain could muster for service on the continent, was 160,000 strong. Yet that "contemptible little army" was able to hold in check the hege hordes of Germany, and block the Hun route to Calais as the invading point of England. But Great Britain has shown herself as great in military resourcefulness as her handful of troops showed themselves great in battle.

In 1914, she had an army in the field of 160,000 men. Lloyd George, a day or two ago, declared that Britain's expeditionary forces engaged in actual warfare, numbered three million men—"probably the greatest feat of military organization in the world." Let the little Welsh Premier himself tell the story:

"It never could have been accomplished but for the heroism and self-sacrifice of the old armp. The old army, the finest body of troops in the world at that time, more highly trained, more disciplined, more perfect in physique—it saved Europe. (Cheers.) In the retreat from Mons it delayed overwhelming hordes of the enemy; at the Marne it helped to roll back the invaders; but, more than all, at the great first battle of Ypers—one of the decisive battles of the world, with unparalleled tenacity and sacrifice it held superior forces for weeks, and then held finally. The enem- superior in numberss and material; our troops short of heavy artillery and ammunition, with no reserves. Every man was put in, cavalrymen, cooks, drivers, servants, and through the individual effort of officers and men, iron discipline, and dogged determination the army held out to the last and saved us from disaster. (Cheers.) By the end of November France was saved, and Europe, and there was hardly a man left out of the old army. One division went into battle 12,000 strong. It came out 3,000. Of 400 officers, only 50 were left—in one battle. The old army is the army that gathered the spears of the Prussian legions into its breast, and in perishing saved Europe. (Cheers.) No sacrifice in the history of the world has had greater results, and those seven divisions have a unique position in history and in the annals of the war.

Here is one part of the answer of

Here is one part of the answer to the carpers that say Britain "soldiered," and let France do the fighting. Nor did Lloyd George tell the whole story in recounting the work of the "old army." Later history tells us how splendidly Canada came to the rescue, and "saved the situation" at Ypers in 1915; and Canadians are still doing nobly, but they are demanding that we send them reinforcements; and send them soon; and not only more men but more munitions, and more food, and that we produce more that we may send more.

The universal national support of the Victory Loan is one of the crucial condiitons of Canada adequately doing to the end her bit in winning the war.

SHOWS BIG FOOD SAVING.

Washington. — Introduction of "meatless Tuesdays" in hotels and restaurants had resulted in the saving by one great chain of restaurants of seven tons of meat weekly, reports to the food administrator show, this includes about 3,500 pounds of hog meat and 8,300 pounds of beef.

One New York hotel reports that during October is curtailed its consumption of flour by 14 barrels as the result of "wheatless Wednesdays."

How Butter Men Juggle Up Price To Dizzy Height

MONTREAL, Nov. 19. — What appears to be a much warranted attack on the way the price of butter is set in Canada was made by Adelard Fortier, president of the Agricultural committee of the Chambre de Commerce, in a report to that body. Mr. Fortier is in the butter business, being head of the Montreal Dairy Co., Ltd., so is, presumably, sure of his facts.

Buy Low.

Canadian dealers, he said, bought their butter from the producer at a lower price than the American dealers—that is during the butter producing season. When the productive season ends, the Canadian dealers, he said, fixed the selling price of butter here, by adding to the price at which butter is selling in the United States, the duty, freight and war tax. But as little or no butter comes across the border there is no competition with the Canadian output. In other words Canadian butter prices are based on the price American butter would command in Canada were it brought in plus the duty, freight and war tax.

Consumer the Goat.

"This way of figuring out the price of Canadian butter, which is an additional and unnecessary burden to the Canadian consumer, gives no protection whatever to the Canadian farmer and brings no receipts to the Government, since Canada's imports of American butter are hardly worth recording," said Mr. Fortier.

"There is in storage in Canada, every winter, about 432,000 boxes (56 lbs.) of butter, 24,192,000 pounds, on the price of which are added 4 cents per pound (representing the duty that would be paid on American butter), or $725,760, and the equivalent of the war tax (24,192,000 lbs. at 40 cents; $9,676,800 at 7 1-2 p.c.), or $725,760. Therefore, the Canadian consumer pays for butter alone, $1,451,520 more a year than he would pay should the duty on American butter, which is but a premium on speculation, be removed."

Identical conditions, said Mr. Fortier, were met with in the egg market, he said:

"For the last four or five years, the United States market for eggs and butter has been higher than our own market during the months of production in Canada, namely from March to October both inclusive; and it has been lower from November to February inclusively, that is when there is no production of such commodities in Canada, the result of this is that the prices of butter and eggs in Canada, when there is no production here, are exactly the selling prices of these two articles of food in the United States, plus duty, freight and war tax.

Therefore, the duties on butter and eggs imported from the United States —which are merely a burden to the consumer from November to March— do not protect the Canadian farmer from March to October, since during that period of production in Canada, prices are higher in the Republic to the south.

Egg Imports.

From April, 1916, to April, 1917, we have imported from the United States 400,000 cases of eggs, containing thirty dozens each; which makes 12,000,000 dozens. The duty on eggs being, as you know, three cents per dozen, plus 7 1-2 per cent. war tax, the Canadian consumer has paid on this item $360,000 plus 7 1-2 per cent. on the value of the goods. The average price of eggs having been 40 cents per dozen, the consumers have had to pay 7 1-2 per cent. on $4,800,000, namely, $360,000. The Canadian consumer has, therefore, paid on eggs alone $720,000 more than he would have paid should that commodity be admitted free from the United States. And, as the Canadian farmer did not get any profit whatever therefrom, we claim that it is unfair to the consumer that such duties should be maintained."

Mr. Fortier declared that the high price of butter was due, in part, to an unexpected call for 40,000 boxes. It had been expected, said Mr. Fortier, that New Zealand would be able to supply all England needed, but it had become necessary to make a sudden call on Canada.

BUY A VICTORY BOND.

BORDEN STILL IN THE HANDS OF THE QUEBEC NATIONALISTS

The Military Service Act, as Administered by Mr. Borden's Quebec Nationalists, Works Injustice to Ontario Manhood

Borden, Bourassa, Blondin, Sevigny and Co., were partners to defeat Laurier in 1911 and are partners still.

Borden, the Chief member of this partnership, proclaimed to the electors of Ontario in 1911 that Laurier was not British enough.

"The Laurier cabinet is a cabinet of Imperialists and want to sacri-"fice Canada's interests and plunge us into wars in which we have "nothing to do. The Navy Bill is an attempt by Ontario and the Pro-"vinces of the West to coerce Quebec and to enslave our people forever. "What has England ever done for us? She has no need for your help. "She is strong enough to defend herself. Laurier's ideal is to make you "the vassals of the majority in the West. You must protest against "helping England in her wars. Unless you do, conscription will come "next."

Such was the unholy alliance between Borden and the Quebec Nationalists in 1911, and such unholy alliance has continued unto this day.

This alliance defeated Laurier in 1911, and ever since then Borden has been bound neck and heels to the Quebec Nationalists.

Even in the administration of the Military Service Act, he has had to bow down to and follow the wishes of the Quebec Nationalists.

Early in September last he appointed a Quebec Nationalist, Deputy Speaker Rainville, as a member of the Board to select the Military Tribunals, who were to decide who should be exempt and who should not be exempt from military service in the Province of Quebec.

DEPUTY SPEAKER RAINVILLE'S LETTER.

On the 11th September, 1917, (see Hansard, September 19, 1917), Deputy Speaker Rainville, after he had been appointed, to select the Military Boards for the Province of Quebec, wrote to his electors as follows:—

"I have the pleasure to inform you that the regulations of the "Military Law exempt bona fide farmers, their families and Manufac-"turers (Industrials)—(meaning all factory employees.) I have at last "succeeded in winning my point and it is only justice."

"You can without any fear whatever, present your unmarried sons "to the tribunals. Instructions are given in accordance WITH WHAT "I NOW TELL YOU."

This Quebec Nationalist, Rainville, a supporter of Sir Robert Borden, knew when he wrote that letter that from the Province of Quebec only 2¼ per cent. of her population had voluntarily enlisted. He knew that from the Province of Ontario 6 2/3 per cent. of her population had voluntarily enlisted. He knew that Ontario had enlisted three times as many soldiers per head of her population as the Province of Quebec. He knew that if the Province of Quebec had been justly encouraged to recruit by the Government, more men would have voluntarily enlisted. He knew that the Borden Government made no bona fide effort to organize French-Canadian Companies manned by French-Canadian Officers; and yet we find him, before the Military Service Act was put into effect, declaring to the young men of Quebec that the Military regulations of the Military law exempted all bona fide farmers, their families and factory employees. Since then Borden's Lieutenant Rainville, the Quebec Nationalist, has so far succeeded in making good his words.

The reports from the Province of Quebec as taken from the Montreal Star and other Journals show that 96 per cent. of the young men, living in the Cities of the Province of Quebec are promptly exempted from Military Service, and that in the Country Districts about 98 men in every hundred are exempted from Military Service.

According to the application of the Military Service law by Borden's Quebec Nationalists in the Province of Quebec, it is estimated that there will not be 5,000 men taken for Military Service from the whole Province of Quebec and that the balance of the 100,000 men will have to be made up from the rest of the English-speaking Provinces of the Dominion. If Quebec were justly made to do her full share with the rest of the Provinces, there would be at least 70,000 men drafted from the Province of Quebec before one single man would be drafted from the Province of Ontario.

Such is the depth to which the so-called Union Government, headed by Sir Robert Borden, has sunk. This union of Borden, Blondin and Sevigny, in the one cabinet, reminds me of Macaulay's description of the Italian statesmen in the days of Machiavelli, "half divinity, half snake, majestic and beautiful above, grovelling and poisonous below."

Is it to be wondered at, that throughout the Dominion of Canada, seventeen believers in Liberal principles have been elected by acclamation as against one real supporter of Borden? These seventeen men, I know, firmly believe in doing what is just by the masses against the classes. The policy of Borden in the Province of Quebec is unfair to the people who live in the Province of Quebec, and it is equally unfair to the people who live in the Province of Ontario.

Can we excuse the vicious works of the great firm of Borden, Bourassa, Blondin, Sevigny & Co., wholesale dealers in special privileges with silent partners everywhere?

Are the People of West Peterborough going to suffer and sacrifice for the sins of Borden, Bourassa, Blondin, Sevigny and Co.?

Only 3.31 Per 100 Are Not Granted Their Exemption

The Montreal Star says: As every new figure is announced by those handlin- the Exemption Board returns, it becames plainer that if the same ratio is continued for the rest of the time, Montreal's quota to men in khaki under the Military Service Act will not be unduly large.

From figures made public to-day it is shown that only 3.31 per cent. of the cases in which decisions have been made so far have been refused exemption. The figures are:

Exemptions allowed	5,245
Exemptions refused	180
Total	5,425

6,310 CASES HEARD.

So far a total of 6,310 cases have been heard, but in 885 cases no decisions have been made.

The percentage of cases in which exemptions have been granted, but in which the military have made appeals, is growing. To-day, of the 6,245 cases granted exemptions, appeals have been entered in 468, or about 9 per cent.

WORK SPEEDING UP.

Thursday's and Friday's figures show that the work is speeding at all tribunals throughout the district, an average of well over 2,000 claims a day now being heard.

The official figures for Thursday show that 2,66 cases weer heard, of which 1,717 were granted, 312 adjourned, only 34 disallowed, with 131 appeals entered. On Friday, there were 2,487 claims heard, of which 2-138 were allowed, 291 adjourned, 62 refused, and 241 appeals entered.

Ringworm on Child's Head

Grand Bend, Ont., Nov. 21.—There is no disease of the skin more obstinate than ringworm, and the mother who writes this letter does so fully realizing what it will mean to other anxious mothers to know about Dr. Chase's Ointment.

This remarkable cure was brought about two years ago, and as there has been no return of the distressing disease there can be no doubt that the cure is permanent.

Mrs. D. Stebbins, Grand Bend, Ont., writes: "I am going to tell you of my experience with Dr. Chase's Ointment. My little girl had sores come out on her head which looked like ringworms. They were spreading fast, and I tried home treatment, but nothing helped her. I took her to the doctor, and he opened some of the sores, which were as big as the yoke of an egg. The salve he gave me to put on was very severe, and the poor child would cry for an hour or more after an application. For six weeks it continued to spread all over her head, and came down to her neck and ears. She suffered terribly. At last some kind ladies told me about Dr. Chases Ointment, so I got a box, and the first time I put it on she was relieved of pain, and the second time the swelling was all gone. Before we had finished the first box the sores were nearly all gone. I have told all the people around here about your Ointment, and I cannot praise it too much. It is now two years since my little girl was troubled in this way, and it never came back, so you can see she is completely cured. You are at liberty to use this statement for the benefit of others who may be suffering in a similar manner."

Joseph Brenner, J.P., endorses this statement as follows: "This is to certify that I am personally acquainted with Mrs. D. Stebbins of Grand Bend, Ont., and believe her statement with reference to Dr. Chase's Ointment to be true and correct."

DIVERT FOOD TO GERMANY

Soldiers Send Home Packages From Occupied Districts.

COPENHAGEN—In consequence of complaints that the families of German officers stationed in occupied regions were at a special advantage, as compared with the families of enlisted men, in the quantity of food they were permitted to receive from the occupied territories, the army authorities state that officers and soldiers are on exactly the same footing, being permitted to send home food packages up to twenty-two pounds in weight, but no larger.

This announcement is of interest to America in view of the efforts to establish a food supply organization for Poland and to provide for Belgian relief.

Earlier in the war German soldiers were permitted, in addition to the regulation quantities of food sent by field post, to take with them when furloughed as much as they could carry. Stories of soldiers breaking down before reaching the railway station under the weight of their packages, and of the frequency of furloughs taken by officers to carry food to their families, were staple jokes at the front. Vast quantities of provisions are thus drained from the occupied regions, notwithstanding the assurances of the Government that no food is taken from them to Ger-

Widow of a Week Is Threatened By Blackmail Band

HARTFORD, Conn. — Mrs. Ralph W. Cutler, widow of the president of the Hartford Trust Company, who died a week ago, has suffered a nervous collapse and is under guard as a result of letters which threatened to harm her unless she paid $25,000 tribute.

The State police again have been called to Hartford to work on the mystery of the blackmailing letters, which seem to be a recurrence of those last summer, in which many prominent families were threatened, and which caused much excitement and uneasiness.

Just after the death of Mrs. Cutler's husband she received a letter demanding $25,000, the writer stating that her life would be her forfeit. That letter was turned over to the police and Mrs. Cutler took precautions to protect herself.

FAKE PACKAGE NOT TAKEN.

A second letter arrived on Thursday and informed Mrs. Cutler that unless she left $25,000 in bills at a certain spot at the "Four Corners" in Albany Avenue she would be kidnapped and held for ransom.

A fake package was left at the place stipulated, but it was not taken by the blackmailers.

Mrs. Cutler then decided to remain in her home while the police worked on the case. She was called to the telephone and was informed by a man's voice that he was the agent of the "Utah 4," the name signed to the letters, and that unless the money was delivered that night at the "Four Corners" she had "better order her coffin."

Grieving over the death of her husband and excited by the threatening letters, Mrs. Cutler suffered a nervous collapse. The local police were notified and called upon the State police. Armed men were employed to guard the house, inside and out, and no one could approach it without explaining his errand and identifying himself.

MAN ALSO THREATENED.

The letter to Mr. Talcott, which was dated November 15, said in part: "On receival of this letter you are asked for a sum of $2,500 or your wife will be minus your loved one. This money is wanted Friday, November 16, 1917, at six p.m. Two hours' grace granted. He lieth best who maketh his own bed. Let not the sun set on you without depositin- money or you shall pay. If you prefer death to the money you may have it."

"Utah 4" was the signature to the threatening letters, which excited Hartford last June and July. At that time Mrs. James J. Goodwin, widow of a financier, who was a cousin of the late J. P. Morgan, received a series of letters demanding $10,000.

George S. Goddard, State Librarian, received a letter demanding $5,000 and stating that unless paid his daughter, thirteen years old, would be kidnapped and held for $10,000 ransom. A letter to Leonard D. Fisk, a capitalist, demanded $4,000 under threat of kidnapping his young son.

From Frederick Richter, a stock broker, "Utah 4" demanding $5,000 "in small bills," the letter stating that "this band has killed one soul, and the fate of another is swinging on the hinges of hell."

It is believed here that the blackmailers have obtained money from one or more timid persons. The police have heard of persons who received threatening letters, but those persons refused to admit it.

The handwriting in the letters of last summer and the letters to Mrs. Cutler and Mr. Talcott is apparently the same. Several of the letters of last June were mailed in East Hartford, and that is the only clew the police have.

A C.V.B. FOR XMAS

There is no better Christmas present than a Victory Bond of whatever denomination you can afford.

A lot of Christmas presents—some quite costly, too—are broken or worn out inside of a few months. Very few last five years, to say nothing of ten or twenty years. And still fewer are worth as much at the end of five, ten or twenty years as they were originally.

But consider the Victory Bond. It can be bought to last for either one of the periods mentioned, and at the end of its period it is absolutely as good as new. That is beyond dispute. For at the end of the period Canada pays the holder in gold the amount which was originally paid for the bond. Moreover, this payment will be made promptly in one lump sum, while the original buyer is allowed to spread his purchase of the bond over a period of five months.

So the Victory Bond is an ideal present. It does not "wear out". It is never forgotten. Every six months there comes a reminder of it in the shape of interest at five and a half per cent. per annum.

The Victory Loan is in keeping with the spirit of Christmastide. It is a loan for the liberation of the world. It will be Canada's Christmas gift to the Allied cause. It is a contribution to the birth of a new era, in which oppression shall no longer be able to stalk abroad under the guise of Prussianism.

Viewed practically or viewed sentimentally there is no Christmas present like a Victory Bond.

SITTINGS IN TWO WEEKS.

Appeal Tribunals Start Early in December.

Exemption appeals have now reached such proportions the various appeal tribunals will start their sittings on December 3. The total number of appeals already lodged in the hands of the Ontario Registrar reach the 3,000 mark.

The Ontario Registrar is still unperturbed by the increasing number of appeals, remarking "that is not an unreasonable number considering that it is about one-third of the estimated 9,000 decided cases."

The lists of the alleged defaulters compiled through letters forwarded to the Registrar have now been completed, and they total about 500. They include names from all over the province. All will be first checked over before being sent to the police officials for investigation.

A Victory Bond Helps Pave The Way To Berlin

SPLENDID APARTMENTS OPENED OVER THE BANK OF NOVA SCOTIA

Handsomely Decorated, Large and Spacious, Well Lighted and Ventilated and Richly Finished and Appointed.

The new suite of four apartments opened by the Toronto Savings and Loan Co. over the Bank of Nova Scotia combine all the qualities that appeal to home lovers. No expense has been spared to make them attractive, and with this condition admirably supplied, the more material demands of spaciousness, convenience, thoroughly modern equipment, light and ventilation have been provided with a completeness that makes these apartments among the finest in the city. They are centrally located, with the entrance off George Street. The first pleasing effect of the interior finds no disappointing detail throughout the building.

An easy flight of stairs leads to the first floor hallway, off which two apartments lead on either side. All the halls are decorated in pumpkin shades, with contrasting strips of dark brown polished mahogany. The hall shaft is in itself an inviting feature in its generous dimensions and in the flood of light that pours through the several storeys, from the roof windows down to the street entrance. If there is any suggestion of cabined and confined conditions attaching to the idea of apartments due to the sacrifice of comfort to the exigencies of limited space there is nothing of that element in these commodious rooms.

Each apartment has a large living-room and equally large dining-room, separated by wide French doors, with windows looking into George Street. The apartments are practically similar and uniform in the arrangement of their rooms. The colour scheme in the front rooms is a dark green, in which the wood is all of British Columbia fir in natural finish, relieved by a dull red tinge that is almost imperceptible in the neutral coloured paper. Red oak floors, handsome indirect lighting fixtures, heavy French doors leading into and connecting these rooms, and other appointments all lend a restful effect that is enhanced by a pervading atmosphere of subdued richness.

Beyond the dining-room in each apartment is the butler's pantry leading to the kitchen, which is splendidly lighted and ventilated, and is equipped with a gas range, sink with laundry section, and other furnishings. The bathrooms are equally pleasing and are provided with bevelled mirrors, towel racks, and various fittings permanently provided. The bedrooms are papered in chintz, with wall lamps, and are of the same high standard that stamps the finish of the entire suite.

There are three bedrooms to each apartment, except one on the top floor, which has two bedrooms. Large clothes rooms have been provided. Altogether there are five light and air wells, and a private telephone connects each apartment to the postal and visitors' board in the hall on the ground floor. Another satisfactory accommodation is the tradesmen's entrance from the rear. Already two of the apartments have been occupied, and the remaining two are expected to be taken shortly.

The rebuilding and alterations, including decorations, is the work of Bond & Smith, Toronto, architects.

To Take Vote Of Canadian Aviation Men

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

OTTAWA, Nov. 21.— Arrangements are being made to take the vote for the coming election of the members of the Canadian aviation camp in Texas. The number of voters estimated to be there is from four to five thousand. A special returning officer will be despatched to do the work.

NEW DRAFT RULES OUT.

All Existing Exemptions and Discharges Are Cancelled.

WASHINGTON.—The new selective service regulations were made public by the Provost Marshal General today. Supplies of them have been received by Governors of State, and they will be forwarded to local and district boards at once for study.

Certain of the regulations go into effect on Nov. 20, while others, notably those who govern the process of selection and classification, will not go into effect until Dec. 15.

The new regulations not only repeal all preceding regulations, but cancel all exemptions and discharges which they have been granted by local boards under the present system. This will restore every man to his original status, and the local boards will send a questionaire to every man who is not in the service.

The local boards will send out 5 per cent. of their questionaires each day for a period covering twenty days. This method of distribution will allow the local boards, with the aid of their legal advisory boards and other volunteers, to instruct, complete, and file each day's questionaire without the confusion and congestion which would attend the effort to require a larger number.

One of the noteworthy features of the new regulations will be the appointment of an officer of the Reserve Corps of the United States Army as an assistant to the Adjutant General of each State. This officer will also be the disbursing officer, and the financial affairs of the Selective Service system will thus be brought into intimate touch with the Provost Marshal General's office in Washington.

Calls Halt To The Quebec Exemptions

Ven. Archdeacon Cody at the Irish Protestant Benevolent Association

TORONTO, Nov. 20.— "If the Exemption Tribunals in the Province of Quebec keep on exempting men at the rate they have been exempting them, it will be little short of a farce," declared Venerable Archdeacon Cody in the course of an address to the Irish Protestant Benevolent Society at the Normal school. "In the interest of Quebec as well as in the interest of the Dominion," he added, "I hope and pray that the leaders of Quebec will not do dishonour to the ancient name and fame of those who came of gallant French stock."

The Archdeacon made the reference to the eastern Province in the course of an address on "The New Era in Canada." He reviewed Canadian history to shoy that every big advance in Canadian national life immediately followed a period of strife. From the influence of the returned soldiers, the women's vote, and those at home capable of grasping the significance of war lessons, he hoped for another great stride forward after the conclusion of the war.

Facts, he added, bore out the assertion that one section of the Dominion was holding itself aloof from its responsibilities, and evading its share of the burden of war. Persistence in this course, he pointed out, must result in the continued isolation of that Province as long as Canada remains a nation.

The above is a situation that was referred to by Mr. Harding at a meeting held in the city Saturday evening in the interests of Mr. R. R. Hall.

litical offensive in order to widen the breach between Kaiserism and the German people.

A POLITICAL OFFENSIVE.

"By a 'political offensive,' I do not mean that Great Britain should resort to the use of unscrupulous practises as Germany has done. The British people would not tolerate them. But I do say that they should make a wise and discriminate use of legitimate political methods, which are open and above board, and which mean the elimination of secret diplomacy."

"At present," he continued, "the Allies are negotiating with the Kaiser's servants. All the speeches made by the German Chancellor and replied to by Allied statesmen constitute the employment of open political means to bring about a settlement of the war. It is a game of skilled diplomacy, but one of the chief faults is that the Allies are playing it with a minister who is solely responsible to the Kaiser. To my mind the most satisfactory channel of communication available is provided by the German Socialists, and particularly by the minority Socialist.

CONSULT THE SOCIALISTS.

Personally I would rather consult with a German minority Socialist during the war, than with an official of an autocratic German government after the war.

"If we really desire to see a democratic Germany we should do all in our power to strengthen the democratic elements in Germany. If we intend that peace when it comes shall be a democratic and lasting peace, made by democratically-elected representatives of all the peoples concerned, surely it would be better to address our speeches, not to the German Imperial Chancellor, who is the servant of the Kaiser, but to the elected representatives of the German people.

"So long as military effort is necessary there must be no slackening on the part of the Allies, but that is no reason why side by side with such effort we should not attempt, by a wise and sensible use of the political weapon, to hasten the settlement of the war by a peace which shall be just, honourable and democratic."

A PATRIOTIC ENTERTAINMENT

Proceeds Will Be Devoted Towards Purchase of a Victrola.

Don't forget the patriotic entertainment in the Collegiate Hall on Friday evening at 8.15. A splendid programme has been arranged, and a number of prominent artists will take part. Two well-known officers will speak on interesting subjects. The chair will be occupied by Mr. G. N. Gordon. Proceeds to buy a victrola for a Canadian Convalescent Hospital in England.

As this is the first time that this idea has been presented to the citizens of Peterborough for the comfort of our wounded soldiers, Mr. Renwick and the young ladies interested respectfully request the patronage of the general public.

Major, 77, Says Wife Beats Him, But Divorce Plea Fails

G. A. R. Leader is Advised to Settle Differences and Live in Happiness.

TRENTON, N.J.— After denying a divorce petition to Major Adrain S. Applegate, of Cranbury, formerly department commander of the New Jersey G.A.R., who charged his wife with beating him, the Special Master in Chancery, Mr. Joline, urged a reconciliation between the couple. He said both were approaching old age and that they needed each other and should overlook each other's faults.

Mrs. Applegate, who had filed a denial of her husband's charges, and also a cross bill for divorce, withdrew the bill before the close of the testimony. The Special Master said he could find no evidence corroborating Major Applegate's charges.

Major Applegate is seventy-seven years old and Mrs. Applegate, who is his third wife, is about forty. They have been married a little more than a year.

Received $250,000 In Commissions

LONDON, Nov. 20.—The British Government has withdrawn the prosecution against Wing-Commander John Cyril Porte, of the Royal Navy Flying Corps. He was accused of having drawn illicit commissions from an aeroplane manufacturing company on orders given by the British Admiralty after he had returned to the service at the outbreak of the war. The prosecutor announced that the Government did not consider his action criminal.

Commander Porte has surrendered $250,000, the amount of these commissions. While retired from duty in the navy, Commander Porte had a commission agreement with an aeroplane manufacturing company.

When he rejoined the navy he handed over his interests to William Augustus Casson, his partner, and legal adviser. Casson has pleaded guilty. He gave up his commissions, amounting to $800,000, and was fined $30,000.

The Attorney-General stated that Porte was dangerously ill with hemorrhage of the lungs, and added that he was engaged upon highly important work. The Admiralty have no desire to lose his services should he recover.

Fat Man's Club For Toronto Suggested

Many Report Big Gains in Weight Prospects Fine For Large Membership

So many people have reported extraordinary gains in weight during the last few weeks as a result of taking Tanlac, that some one jokingly suggested a few days ago, that a Fat Man's Club be organized in Toronto.

Only a short time ago, Edward Earle, a well-known carpenter employed by the Canadian Pacific residing at 17 McGregor Avenue, Toronto, said: "When I tell you I have gotten complete relief from five years of suffering and have actually gained fourteen pounds in weight besides, you can readily see why I think so highly of Tanlac." Mr. Earle described his sufferings as resulting from a serious case of indigestion and stomach trouble and stated that his recovery has been complete.

Just a few days previous, Peter Rosthwick, employed by the Gum Packing Co., residing at 156 Lappen Avenue, Toronto, said: "I have just finished my second bottle of Tanlac and have gained twelve pounds. I suffered for over two years with stomach trouble and was so weak I could hardly keep going. I am gaining in weight and strength every day now and my stomach is in splendid condition. I don't believe there's another medicine that equals Tanlac."

Reporting a gain of fifteen pounds, Mrs. Emma Baker, 39 Mariposa Avenue, Toronto, said: "Honestly I have gained fifteen pounds and my neighbours as well as myself are surprised at the great change Tanlac has made in me." Mrs. Baker further stated that she had suffered for more than a year with stomach disorders and nervousness, and had been unable to get any relief until she took Tanlac. "Mr. Baker and I both think Tanlac the grandest medicine in the world," she concluded.

William R. Chitty, employed by the Russell Motor Car Co., and residing at 22 Grosvenor street, Toronto, in a recent statement said: "Yes, sir, I gained ten pounds on two bottles of Tanlac and feel better in every way than I have in three years. It's just wonderful how Tanlac took hold of my troubles and built me up." Mr. Chitty further says that he had suffered from stomach trouble and nervousness until he was about all in, when he took Tanlac. He declares that Tanlac made him feel like a new man.

A gain of six pounds in weight was reported by Harvey Hamilton, fuse maker employed by Copeland-Chatterson Co., who resides at 1303 Queen street, Toronto. Mr. Hamilton stated that he had been in a general run-down condition for five years, and that Tanlac had put him on his feet and increased his strength and energy in a remarkable manner.

Dozens of other well known people have made remarkable statements in this connection recently and their testimonials have appeared and are appearing daily as still others prove the merits of this medicine and tell of the results they have obtained from its use.

"I have gained twenty pounds in actual weight and now I know for myself what a wonderful thing Tanlac is," stated William S. Pickell, a well-known paint contractor, living at 51 Windsor Avenue, Windsor, Ontario. He went on to say that he had been entirely relieved from a severe case of stomach trouble, which had kept him in misery for a year.

Another remarkable gain in weight is told by Mrs. William Green, 141 Hunter street, Hamilton, in her statement: "I have actually gained twenty pounds in weight by taking Tanlac and my friends and neighbours seem amazed at the wonderful change in my condition." Mrs. Green further stated that she had experienced a wonderful relief from stomach trouble and nervousness through the use of Tanlac.

James Raib, machinist, for the Canadian Bridge Company, 103 Ontario street, Wallerville, says: "I have taken only three bottles of Tanlac so far but have already gained ten pounds in weight. I had suffered for over a year with a miserable case of catarrh and nothing ever did me any good. Tanlac has given me more relief than any other medicine I ever took."

There is nothing really remarkable in the foregoing statements, as thousands of people all over the country have taken Tanlac with the same results and in many cases far greater. Take for instance the case of Mrs. Viola Ives, 315 Cross street, Little Rock, Ark., U.S.A., who gained forty pounds; that of Mrs. G. W. Williams, of Gadaden, Ala., U.S.A., who gained forty-eight pounds; or that of O. H. Mahaney, Nashville, Tenn., U.S.A., who gained forty pounds; Mrs. O. C. Cason, Acworth, Ga., U.S.A., who gained thirty-five pounds and hundreds of others too numerous to mention.

VOICE RECORDS OF SOLDIERS.

English Museum Association Would Thus Keep War Annals.

SHEFFIELD, England.—At the Museums Assocaition conference it was suggested that every town should arrange for a voice record from every soldier who returned home of his experiences in fighting.

The delegation proposing this added that there should be records from prisoners of war telling how they had been treated by their captors and museums should contain everything that would lead posterity to see, feel and understand the terrible ordeal through which civilization is passing at the present time.

MACKLEM SPEAKS TO WINDSOR VETERANS

TELLS THEM SOMETHING HAS TO BREAK SOON—RESOLUTION ADOPTED BY ASSOCIATION.

WINDSOR, Ont., Nov. 20.—"That we do extend the right hand of fellowship to comrade Omar L. Macklem, and do assure him of our support in his efforts to vindicate himself of troubles that now confront him."

This was the motion that was carried unanimously at the initial organization meeting held in the new clubhouse of the Great War Veterans of Windsor.

The auditorium in which the meeting was held was packed to the doors.

After the preliminary routine business had been disposed of, Macklem was asked to address the veterans and explain his case.

"I come before you to-night as one veteran among many others," said Mackelm. "I do not wish to drag the Association into my troubles and I would not be a man if I did. It is my humble opinion I will have to fight my own battle in my own way. I think I've got a chance to prove my case.

"I never was gazetted a colonel and never claimed I was. I was told to put on staff uniform in England by men of high authority whom I had every reason to believe had power to see me through and who could have had me gazetted had they wished to.

"It is only a mater of days now until something has to break and if it is to be me, then you will never see my face darkening your doors again. All I want is a square and a fair deal in the open and if I can get that I will abide by the results as a veteran should."

At the conclusion of his short address Macklem was tendered an ovation.

Dr. Shields Is Coming

Will Give His Lecture on "England in War Time" in Murray Street Baptist Church

Rev. T. T. Shields, D.D., of Toronto, has consented to come next Tuesday evening and deliver his lecture on "England in War Time" in Murray street Baptist church, under the auspices of the local Red Cross. Dr. Shields occupied the historic pulpit of Spurgeon's Tabernacle during last summer. He also visited the Canadian camps in England and France and interviewed hundreds of Canadian soldiers at first hand.

Dr. Shields gave this lecture in the Jarvis street church in Toronto to an audience that crowded the large auditorium to the doors, many being unable to gain admission. He has since been requested to give it in fifteen churches in Toronto of different denominations, as well as Canadian Clubs in different parts of the Dominion.

No admission will be charged, and the offering will be taken after the lecture, those who have secured Dr. Shields being persauded that the Red Cross will profit more from an offering taken in that way than by charging an admission fee. Every person who has a friend enlisted should hear this lecture.

HON. N. W. ROWELL OPPOSED AT DURHAM

PORT HOPE, Nov. 20.—Hon. N. W. Rowell was formally nominated at Orono yesterday as the Union Government candidate for Durham, and G. W. Jones of Newtonville as Independent. A mass meeting was held later, which was addressed by J. B. Bartram, of Toronto, and Col. R. A. Mulholland, of Port Hope, on behalf of Hon. Mr. Rowell. In a clear and convincing manner they placed before the audience the great advantages of the Union Government, which was formed by Sir Robert Borden with the prime object of devoting every ounce of Canadian energy to the winning of the war.

Jones and his supporter, Mr. Waldron, of the Toronto Sun, also delivered addresses, in which they advocated taking a referendum on the question of conscription.

Arts and Crafts Column

HUGHSON JOHNSTONE, painter and decorator, 416 Water street, will answer in this column each Wednesday for Examiner readers, questions relating to painting, sign-writing, paper-hanging, kalsomining, furniture polishing, decorating, etc., for the benefit of those who might like doing their own work. Questions sent to the Examiner will receive attention in due course.

F. McD., Millbrook: Please tell me where I made the mistake or what was wrong with the wall. I gave the wall a good coat of white shellac and two coats of white enamel, which made a perfect finish. This was about a month ago. But now I find my lovely job all scaling off, and I feel badly about it. What would you suggest? I forgot to say it was a bathroom I enamelled.

Ans.—The mistake was in putting the shellac on the plaster. While shellac makes a hard surface and prevents insuction, it is nevertheless unsuitable where dampness is present, as water will rot shellac. You have no alternative now but to remove all the enamel and shellac from your walls, beginning all over again, using the materials your paint dealer will, I am sure, be glad to recommend.

"Economy," Aylmer Street: After taking down my window shutters I decided to paint them before storing away for the winter. But find, after painting a very few, that my brush is almost useless, the hairs are all turned, curled, and twisted. How do your painters prevent this? It would be altogether too expensive to buy more brushes, and I simply cannot use this one. An answer will greatly oblige.

Ans.—Painters cannot prevent the hairs curling. Rather do they straighten them by occasionally dipping the tips in hot water.

Mrs. J. W., City: How many rolls of paper should it take to paper a room three and a quarter yards one way by three and three-quarter yards the other way?

Ans.—Unless I know the height, how many doors, windows, or other openings, I cannot estimate. However, you can figure it for yourself. A single roll of ordinary paper is 18 inches wide and 24 feet long. You should allow for matching as well.

AN ACTUAL SCENE IN "SEVEN DAYS' LEAVE"

The men on leave of absence from the front, the individual units, every one of whom is in himself a fortress of tense experience, — we are speaking of the present war — get something of a stage reflex in "Seven Days' Leave," the big military comedy by Walter Howard, to be seen at the Grand Opera House on Saturday next, Nov. 24, for an engagement of two performances, matinee and evening. It is a young furlough major who figures most dramatically in the action. The Canadian tour of the production, a replica of the sensationally successful "Seven Days' Leave," now the ra- of London, is being directed by Walter C. Jordan and Daniel Frohman. The seat sale opens tomorrow (Thursday) mornin-. This is not a moving picture but a real play.

Victory Loan Teams Discussed Their Problems At Lunch

House to House Canvass Going Smoothly—Peterboro' Has Already Subscribed $560,000—Mr. Wearing Accepts Publicity Work

Mr. W. H. Bradburn told the Victory Loan "missionaries" at a luncheon at Hooper's last night that Mr. Joseph Wearing had accepted the duty of publicity agent for the campaign that has now turned into the home stretch toward Peterborough's allotment of $750,000. Mr. Dobbin had been forced by the demands of his other affairs to discontinue the publicity work, and three men Mr. Bradburn had approached, declined for various reasons to take up the work at this time. Mr. Wearing did not hesitate. He immediately offered to do the best he could in making the publicity branch helpful to the success of the Loan.

Mr. Bradburn said he had tried to have the British tank, brought to the United States to advertise the Liberty Loan, remain in Peterborough a few hours on its way from Montreal to Toronto. But it was carried over the C.P.R. Lake Shore road. Photographic slides advertising the Loan had been procured and are being shown by the local moving picture houses.

Mr. Brownscombe stated that Peterborough's total subscriptions are approximately $560,000. The office staff has been working late every night—in some instances until midnight.

The after luncheon talk settled into a discussion of details of the missionary work the team committees are pursuing. Mr. Warren, Mr. G. O. Cameron, Mr. Scadding, Mr. Ruth, Mr. Walton, Mr. Whitehouse, Mr. Peter Campbell, and others presented various phases and problems of the work. Mr. Bruce Johnston related his experiences in Monaghan, stating that he had met with some disappointments. "Don't think every farmer is a millionaire," he said.

The house to house calls will be continued, and although the task is a big one, the committee hopes to complete it by 30th November.

LADIES' AUXILIARY OF THE G.W.V.A. IS SUCCESSFULLY LAUNCHED

Provisional Committee Appointed Last Night After Hearing Inspiring Address on Work of the Association by Organizing Secretary W. E. Turley

The preliminary steps towards the organisation of a Ladies' Auxiliary for the Great War Veterans' Association were taken at a well-attended and representative meeting in the City Council Chambers last night. There was a good attendance of ladies representing the different patriotic organisations in the city, while a strong representation of the G.W.V.A. was on hand.

After the matter had been introduced in an eloquent speech by Comrade W. E. Turley, of Toronto, the organising secretary of the G.W.V.A., and had been discussed by those present, the following provisional committee was chosen: Mrs. J Knox, convener; Mrs. E. Bartlett secretary; Mrs. McLeod, Mrs. R. R. Hall, Mrs. J. F. Crowley, Mrs. Bugg, Mrs. McNeely, Mrs. Wm. Stanley, Mrs. Fred White, Miss J. Layfield, Mrs. J. Lillico, and Mrs. Galvin.

The chair was taken by His Worship, Mayor Duffus, who briefly explained the objects of the meeting, and referred to the great work the women of Peterborough had done in connection with the war.

Capt. J. H. Burnham was the first speaker. In a brief address he referred to the fact that women had now equal rights and responsibilities in the community, and that this fact must be recognised by everyone. In the work that was being undertaker by the War Veterans, there must be co-operation wih the women, and he felt sure that his opponent in the present election felt just the same in regard to the new responsibility of the women, and would express the same views if he were present. He wished the organisation God-speed. That was an expression he felt could be appropriately used in connection with a movement to do something for the returned soldier.

"We may all talk about what we would do," said the speaker in referring to the veterans, but they have done it."

Secretary Turley.

Comrade W. E. Turley, Provincial Organising Secretary of the Great War Veterans' Association eloquently dealt with the work of the association which, he said, was conceived in Flanders, born in Toronto, and christened in Winnipeg, and which had been the medium by which $2,000,000 had been secured for returned soldiers, the dependents of soldiers overseas, and the families of those who would not come back. He had found sometimes, he said, the feeling in some communities that the be-all and end-all of the G.W.V.A. was to secure a club house, where the men might "lounge," as one lady in Toronto had expressed it. The provision of a club house was necessary so that men might associate with each other and renew their battle-bonded comradeship, because there was an invisible barrier between the men who had gone overseas and those who had never gone. The club house was necessary for the good of the men and for the good of the community in which they resided. The public could depend upon the Veterans, who were the same self-respecting citizens as they were before they went to the Front, and see that the rooms never became a resort for loungers or a resting-place for loafers.

Secretary Turley reviewed the work in Toronto, and said that the success scored had only been made possible by the co-operation of the women. The first evidence of wholehearted support from the women was shown in Toronto in one of all of last year, when on Women's Tribute Night in Massey Hall nearly $5,000 had been subscribed, and since then over $22,000 more had been secured, making a total of $27,000 for the providing of a permanent club house to stand as a women's memorial to the Veterans.

Invested in Bonds.

"However, there is a war on," said Mr. Turley, "and the G.W.V.A. know it. Our money has been invested in war bonds, and will remain there until the war is over. In the meantime we will use temporary quarters."

Some people believed in the providing of brass tablets and artistic statues as memorials to those who have fallen and wanted to see the money for such things provided now. The speaker was certain that ninety-nine out of one hundred veterans were opposed to the expenditure of large sums of money for such purposes at this stage of the game, and that ninety-nine out of a hundred were agreed that the best form that a women's memorial could take was a permanent club house after the war. It was the aim of the G.W.V.A. to carry on so that all the women in Canada who mattered would support the Association.

Good Work Done.

The good work done by the G.W.V.A. had not all to do with returned soldiers. The Toronto branch with a membership of 3,000, had secured $187,000, the greatest part of which was for the wives and children of the men overseas and the dependents of the men who would not return.

The Association was non-political. Mr. Turley stated, and from coast to coast there was not a single man running as an Association candidate They were too busy in other matters to meddle in politics. However, in this particular election the first duty was to see that reinforcements were sent to the boys who had been left behind in France. To that extent the G.W.V.A. were in politics.

It was the desire of the Veterans to have the women in every centre in the Dominion linked up with the Association. The day was dawning when the G.W.V.A. and women combined would make Canada a better country to live in.

Mr. Turley advised the local War Veterans to follow the example of Toronto and invest the money they were able to secure for a permanent club house into the Victory Loan. "We are the real win-the-war party," said the G.W.V.A. secretary, "and we would be foolish if we didn't let our dollars follow our bullets."

In conclusion, the speaker dealt with the splendid work being done by the Women's Auxiliaries of the G.W.V.A. in Toronto.

Miss Peck inquired as to the disposition of the funds secured by the G.W.V.A. on Tag Day, and was informed that they were placed in the relief fund of the Association and used in relieving cases of distress.

Mrs. Knox said that the women owed a great deal to the War Veterans, and it was now time for them to get, not behind them, but beside them shoulder to shoulder in the work they were carrying on. The speaker referred to the large number of ladies who occupied a seat on the platform at one of the 93rd's recruiting meetings, encouraging men to enlist, and regretted that there were not more of them present.

Secretary Turley said that the majority of the ladies were in favour of the proposition and advised going ahead with the selection of a provisional committee. This suggestion was adopted, and Mrs. Knox was elected convener, and took the chair after which the balance of the committee were named.

Mr. G. N. Gordon said that the organising of a Ladies' Auxiliary could not have been done at a better time. He explained that the citizens' committee in charge of securing club rooms for the Veterans had got to the stage where they had secured a room and were ready to obtain the funds. Now they would be glad if the ladies would do the purchasing and look after the furnishing of the room.

Mr. J. J. Turner expressed his deep interest in the work of the Veterans and his satisfaction at the forming of a Ladies' Auxiliary, which, he felt sure, was a step in the right direction. He would be glad to subscribe $25 towards the funds needed to carry on the work.

It was decided that the Provisional Committee of ladies should meet with the joint committee of Veterans and citizens on Thursday night in the City Council Chamber.

On the motion of President Staunton, seconded by Secretary Whatley a vote of thanks was passed to the ladies, Secretary Turley, Mr. Gordon, Mr. Turner, and others who assisted the movement.

The meeting was brought to a close with the singing of the National Anthem.

Fined For Selling Lightweight Butter

In police court this morning, Mrs. Whatley, who resides in the north end of the city, was fined ten dollars and costs, amounting in all to twelve dollars and sixty cents, for selling lightweight butter to Mrs. Mabel Bright.

within his reach, he was beaten in the face by Supt. Neelands. When he had been refused leave to go to Sudbury to have a necessary operation performed, he attempted to escape, and was caught after four days, and was sent to Sudbury Hospital.

OPERATION TOO LATE.

He stated that the operation was performed too late, and that he suffered permanent internal injuries as a result of the delay. He also claims that he is deaf from time to time as a result of the beating he received, and that his back is injured as a result of the kicks administered by Sergeant Oliver.

Supt. Neelands and N. R. Martin both denied the charges of beating made by the prisoner.

Mr. Martin, who was present at the time the prisoner was taken from his bed, declared that he had the hammer in bed with him, and threatened to brain any one who touched him. Neither Sergeant Oliver nor Supt. Neelands struck the prisoner with their fists.

Mr. Neelands declared that the prisoner fought like a maniac, and was not in any condition to remember clearly the events which transpired. He absolutely denied striking the prisoner with his fists.

"We put a ball and chain on him," said Mr. Neelands, "because we thought he would try to escape. I had precedent for this action at Guelph."

IN INTEREST OF DISCIPLINE.

"Was everything you did done in the interests of discipline in the institution?" asked Judge Coatsworth.

"It certainly was," replied the witness.

The witness on whom the prisoner based his case did not help the case at all. He said he saw the men fighting, and saw him taken into the room where the machine is. He did not see him struck.

"That is not all you said in the affidavit you signed," declared the man who made the charges.

"I know it is not. There were statement in that affidavit that I never made," replied the witness.

"Didn't you read it before signing it?" demanded the Judge.

"I can't read," replied the witness.
"Didn't anyone read it to you?"
"No."

STRAP PRODUCED.

On the request of Judge Coatsworth, the strap used on the prisoner was produced. It is about fifteen inches long and four inches wide, and has rows of small perforations across it. It has a wooden handle, about seven inches long. It was evidently the official instrument, as it bore the Government stamp.

MILITARY NEWS

Pte. W. J. Gadoua, also of the 93rd Battalion, was reported wounded last week.

PTE. W. J. WOOD.

Pte. William James Wood, a former member of the 93rd Peterborough Battalion, is another in the already too long list of soldiers from Lieut.-Col. Johnston's unit who have figured in the recent casualty lists. Pte. Wood is officially reported from Ottawa as having been gassed. He enlisted in March of last year with the 93rd, and went to France in a draft in the autumn. Pte. Wood's family live in Wales.

PTE. W. J. SLATER.

A message received yesterday from Ottawa by Mrs. Gardiner, Peterborough, stated that Pte. William John Slater is officially reported missing since Oct. 26th.

A member of the Examiner Staff has received the following letter from No. 196007, Cpl. W. G. Nicholls, formerly of the 93rd Battalion, and now in the 56th General Hospital, France.

France, 6, 11, '17.

Dear Friend,—Here is where old Square Head Fritz has put me at last. I was leading our platoon in the line on the morning of the 3rd, when Fritz landed a "9-2" among us. Lieut. G. W. Hall was with us at the time, but was lucky enough to escape. Sgt. Godfrey from Peterborough was badly wounded and died at the dressing station a short time later. I was not so bad, but went on in the line with the rest of the boys, and was sent out afterwards from there. I got hit on the right elbow, and to see my clothes one would think I had lost my arm. I guess I will say good-bye for this time, hoping you are well, and I guess I had better wish you a Merry Christmas, also. I remain

Your old friend,
WESS.

P.S.—Stan. Kerneghan and Orm. Cavanah both O.K. yet.

SPECIAL PICTURE AT THE ROYAL TO-NIGHT

In Verona lived two rival families, the Montagues and the Capulets, between whom a feud had existed for many years. Romeo, son to Montague, met and fell in love with Juliet, daughter to Capulet, and the two were secretly married.

Immediately after the ceremony, Romeo became embroiled in a duel with a cousin of Juliet, and killed him.

The result was that the young noble man was banished, and had to leave his wife of a day.

Meanwhile old Capulet had arranged for his daughter to marry another man, Count Paris. Rather than do this, Juliet took a sleeping potion. Her parents thought her dead, and placed her in the family vault, where Romeo, hearing that his wife was dead, found her.

Overcome with grief, the youthful Montague took poison. Juliet, on awakening from unconsciousness, learned what had happened, and ended her life.

NO IMMEDIATE CALL FOR THE CLASS 2 MEN

Special to The Examiner:

TORONTO, Ont., Nov. 21.—Sir Robert Borden, Premier of Canada, is in Toronto to-day. He is here to fire the first gun to-night in the Ontario campaign of the Union government.

Almost the first thing Sir Robert did after arriving was to give a statement to the press making it clear that there would be no call of the married men, (Class 2) to the overseas army in February, as intimtaed by Judge Winchester at a tribunal session yesterday. "It is anticipated that all requirements can be met out of the class already called up," declared the Premier. "I observed that statement with suruprise. There is no authority whatever for any such statement, and there is no necessity, so far as I am aware, for any such course as he outlined. Up to the present time no such course has been under consideration, either by the Minister of Militia or the government as a whole."

"What do you think of the general campaign situation as it stands now," Sir Robert Borden was asked.

"The Union nominations throughout Canada indicate a thorough realization of the serious issues involved in this election," he sail. "Strong representative men have been nominated in all the provinces. It was anticipated and hoped that in Quebec there would be a Union candidate in every constituency. Unfortunately this anticipation was not realized." In eleven constituencies arrangements to put candidates in the field failed at the last moment."

THE FOOD VALUE OF GOOD MILK

That is—Pure, Clarified and Pasteurized Milk

This is a matter that every person should understand for reasons of Economy, as well as for its relations to Health.

Milk is one of the most wonderful foods. It is one of the cheapest foods on the market. It is also one of the most easily digested foods. It is very nourishing. It contains the chief parts of the different foods commonly used on the table.

Milk is the equal to a meal consisting of meat and eggs, sugar and cereals, oils and fats, with salt and water. A milk diet, therefore, is like a mixed diet. Milk contains all the elements necessary to sustain life.

As to the comparative cost of milk as a food, it gives more for the money than any animal food you use.

To get the nourishment contained in a quart of milk—according to Prof. Rosenau of Harvard—you would have to buy and prepare ¾ pound of beef, or 8 eggs, or 2 pounds of chicken, or 2 pounds of codfish. Each of these cost you more, to say nothing of the time, labor and fuel required in preparation.

BEGIN TO-DAY TO DRINK MORE MILK. TEACH YOUR FAMILY TO KNOW ITS VALUE.

Suspect Plot In Fire That Burns War Order Plant

NEW YORK, No. 21.— Fire, which may have been started as a part of the German conspiracy against munition plants, did $75,000 damage to the saltpetre and nitrate of soda plant of the Bradley-Knowles Manufacturing Company, Nos. 98 to 104 Van Dyke street, Brooklyn, and brilliantly illuminated the entire Erie Basin section.

The product of the plant was used in the manufacture of explosives, principally gun powder, and because of government interest in the product many Secret Service men and agents of the Department of Justice were sent to the scene to investigate.

A series of explosions in vats of chemicals aroused the neighbourhood back from the waterfront and spread the flames through the four story structure. Hundreds of families left their beds and hurried to the scene. A borough alarm was sent in, as other plants important to the conduct of the war were in danger, and most of the fire fighting companies of Brooklyn responded. Several fire boats also were called and they sent in lines of hose from Erie Basin.

Where the Flames Started.

John Levison, a watchman, discovered the fire in the private office of Mr. Bradley, the head of the company. He tried to extinguish it, but it had gained such headway that he had to retire. He then telephoned an alarm to Fire Headquarters and by the time the first firemen arrived a large part of the lower floor was in flames. Then a succession of alarms was sent in.

Great impetus was given to the flames when they reached twenty tons of saltpetre and twenty tons of nitrate of soda, which had been prepared for shipment to powder making plants. The fire then seemed to go up with the swiftness of a giant puff, reaching the other floors and a dozen vats in which inflammable chemicals were in course of manufacture.

Explosions which at first were attributed to bombs later were attributed to the vats. They shook the neighbourhood, blew out the windows, damaged walls and wrecked the floors. They sent a column of vari-coloured smoke into the sky and the alarm throughout that section of Brooklyn was increased.

Prompt Investigation.

Fire Marshal Brophy and government agents were on the scene before the flames were extinguished and began an investigation. The Fire Marshal later expressed the opinion that the fire was started through the carelessness of some one inside the building. The government investigators would not tell what they had found, if anything.

For a time the fire caused much uneasiness because of the proximity of other important war plants. Nearest to the burning building was the smelter of Berg and Hess, which is converting 40,000,000 condemned bullets for the Allies. Near there is the Robins Dry Dock and the warehouses of the New York Dock Company. Streams of water were kept on those places during the fire.

County Council Hear The Patriotic Fund Deputation

Warning of Their Approach Was Heralded by Ald. F. H. Dobbin, Dispenser of the Funds and Father Confessor to a Galaxy of Beneficiaries — Council Wade Through Routine Business

The morning session of the County Council was devoted to routine business, such as reading of communications, after which the Councillors turned their attention to general committee business. A letter from Ald. F. H. Dobbin, executive officer of the Patriotic Fund Committee, stating that a deputation, representing the committee, would wait upon the Council this afternoon was received and preparations will be made to deal with the matter. A. Breault, representing the Peterborough Poultry Association, addressed a letter to the Council, setting forth the Association's claim for the usual grant. The request was turned over to the Finance Committee.

Mr. B. Morrow, registrar, is of the opinion that a typewriter is required in the department over which he presides. The Property Committee will look into the matter.

S. F. Doig addressed a letter to the Council, stating that he was prepared to supply elm plank to the county for use on the Chemong floating bridge, and deliver the plank at the bridge at a cost of twenty-five dollars per thousand feet. Mr. Doig is clearing off thirty acres of bush land this winter. The communication was received.

The Afternoon Session.

A request from the National Council of the Young Men's Christian Association, made yesterday to the Council for a grant of $10,000, to be devoted to the Y.M.C.A. work among the soldiers, was dealt with this afternoon at a meeting of the Finance Committee of the County Council. The members of the committee came to the conclusion that as no funds were now available for this purpose, the matter be left over until January for the 1918 Council to deal with.

Patriotic Fund.

Mayor J. J. Duffus headed a deputation that waited upon the County Council this afternoon, with the request that the Council make a substantial grant towards the Patriotic Fund. Last year the Council authorized a grant of $3,000 a month on an annual contribution of thirty-six thousand dollars. This is supplemented by a grant of $60,000 from the city. Mayor Duffus pointed out that while the Tribunals are supplying more men for the army, in a number of cases the draftees were unmarried men, without dependents of any kind. Where a young man was the sole support of a widowed mother, it would be incumbent upon the Patriotic Fund Committee to help the mother in question, so that the burden on the Fund was increasing. Mayor Duffus left it with the Council to decide how much money would be forthcoming from the county.

Ald. F. H. Dobbin corroborated the remarks of Mayor Duffus, and gave a brief resume of the financial aspects of the case, including the prospective needs.

TO-DAY'S WAR NEWS

MANY VILLAGES CAPTURED.

LONDON, November 21.—The British victory to-day included the capture of the following towns and villages and positions: Havincourt, Flesquires, Anneux, Lameau Wood, Neuf Wood, Marcoing, La Vacquerie, Benavis, Welsh Ridge, Graincourt, Bonadres, Ribecourt, Couillet Wood, and the line west of the Du Nord Canal. In many circles here the victory is hailed as perhaps the most important military stroke achieved by the Allies since the battle of the Marne.

TANKS COMPLETELY SURPRISED ENEMY

(By William Philip Simms.)
Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES IN THE FIELD, November 21. — The strangest battle in the world's history was that by which the British to-day smashed the Hindenburg line.

There has been no other battle like it in the annals of warfare. Only the wooden horse of Troy offers a comparison with Haig's blow in tactical originality.

General Pershing, Commander-inChief of the American army in France, witnessed this most staggering of all blows which the British have launched against the enemy.

At a moment when the world was saying that surprise attacks in this war were no longer possible—when the Prussians were thinking the same thing and sleeping soundly in their comfortable dugouts without the faintest supposition that anything was brewing—British army tanks, leading infantry arose up from the ground like magic and swung to the attack.

There was no artillery preparation. The lumbering tanks did the pulverizing of the way. They blazed the trail, their gigantically ponderous paths, offering free entrance to the infantry immediately behind. They crashed over wire entanglements, over artfully concealed chevaux de frise, over the trenches themselves, and the walking Tommies followed.

Prisoners pouring back of the lines to-day were still—dazed with the surprise of the attack. They were utterly flabbergasted. Not an officer nor man had the slightest idea the British could possibly strike on their quiet sector at a time when it was supposed every ounce of Britain's strength was concentrated in Flanders. Since the battle of Arras, the Cambrai sector has dozed in peace and in quiet. The line seemed impregnable. The Germans had heard that so often they were certain of it. They were confident that it would take weeks of high explosives shell preparation, and wire cutting expeditions, as well as unprecedented barrages, to do the trick.

So they dozed and slept and took life easy in the German lines. There was practically no artillery fire felt from the British line.

UTTERLY DEMORALIZED.

The "Englischer schwine" were too busy with their concentrated guns at Passchendaele, and besides, they didn't have enough guns to concentrate —so why worry? That must have been German psychlogy. No more utterly demoralized human beings in the world were seen than these same sleekly confident bosche as they crawled from their dugouts, sleep barely out of their eyes at the sound of the crunching, lumbering juggernauts above them, to find British soldiers swarming everywhere. They raised their arms in shrilling cries of "Kamerad-Kamerad," and fled hither and thither, dazed and terror-stricken. Guns that failed to fire a shot in this battle were seized by the Tommies or else crushed into the yielding earth by the steely weight of the tanks.

Britain's victory came as a preliminary advance Tuesday morning. It was then under black skies that the tanks lumbered forward. As the new barrage for the infantry Wednesday completed the triumphs all of the stereotyped rules of preparation for war, and of the actual battle strategy itself were thrown aside in the British coup. Sometime Tuesday night a large number took their berth behind the lines. The Germans didn't hear them. It was too dark for them to be seen.

In the early morning Tuesday these monsters crawled forth in the hazy light between darkness and daylight. A smoke barrage concealed the camouflaged sides. The Germans did not know they were in action until they rumbled and wheezed over their heads. The Hindenburg line, the impregnable, the never yielding, the last word in defenses, and was taken, therefor, without a single preparatory gun shot. How complete was the surprise for the Germans was evidenced in the fact that at one point a German division was in process of relieving another at the very moment of the attack.

CAMBRAI ALMOST IN BRITISH HANDS.

(By Ed. L. Keen.)

LONDON, Nov. 21.—Field Marshal Haig has broken the Hindenburg line at various points on a front over at least a score of miles. The British Commander in Chief to-day reported his troops had smashed their way for an advance of between four and five miles through the first defences of the vaunted Hindenburg line.

The second line, more than a mile behind the preliminary defences, was also stormed by the victorious Tommies.

Tanks battered down the German defences, crumbled away some of the artfully contrived German cement emplacements, and ponderously drove forward, in advance of the artillery.

Cambrai is now almost in the hands of the British.

The importance of the victory cannot as yet be fully estimated. Not only has the Hindenburg line been penetrated, and at least two of its lines utterly destroyed, but the British now directly menace the main German line of communication —Douai, Cambrai and St. Quentin.

The surprise of the British drive, coupled with its overpowering force, was so complete, and the German demoralization so utter, that official reports did not not attempt to to estimate the number of prisoners taken nor the quantity of guns, supplies and ammunition.

Want Aliens Deported Who Refuse To Enlist

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

BUFFALO, N.Y., Nov. 21. — The American Federation of Labour went on record to-day as favouring the deportation of all allied aliens in the United States who refuse to enlist here or under their own colours. During the two hours' debate of this resolution Delegate Black of Toronto, denounced the United States' conscription law as "that dastardly act," and brought upon himself a stinging reply from President Gompers.

PETE CAMPBELL IN CANADIAN RUGBY GAME PLAYED IN ENGLAND

TORONTO, Nov. 20.—The following is an extract from a letter from Capt. Harold Campbell, the Varsity half-miler, to his father:

"Seaford, Eng., Nov. 4, '17.

"Yesterday theer was a rugby game here between Seaford and Witley and it certainly reminded us of old times at the Varsitp field to see the gather- at the Varsity field to see the gather- Knight, who is captain of the team and 'Ham' Potticary, the old Tiger wing man. Witley had the famous old Varsity pair Jack Maynard and Pete Campbell, along with Hume Crawford and Hal. DeGruchy and Gord. McLaren. So you see there were famous stars from Varsity, Argos, T. R. and A. A., and Tigers, And they all played great rugby yesterday, in spite of the slippery condition of the field.

"In spite of the fact that Witley won by 14 to 1, it was an astonishingly good game to watch and not one-sided, as the score would indicate. Hal. DeGruch did some great punting and tackling, and Maynard and Campbell pulled off some of their old-time combination runs for Witley, while Frank Knight at flying wing, was the bright star for Seaford. He was in every play and his tackling was as deadly as ever. He has more speed than ever this year due to his sprinting this summer, and pulled off a nice 40-yard run.

"It was a treat that few of us expected to get over here to see a real game of Canadian rugby with such a number of high-class players participating. Last Saturday Seaford and Bexhill played a tie game, seven all. George Bickell played for Bexhill and did some great running and kicking.

"I shook hands with Hume Crawford, Pete Campbell, Jack Maynard, Gord. McLaren, Lee, Murray, and a few other chaps yesterday. It was quite a reunion."

At the Water street bowling alleys last night the five-man five-pin team which will play the Toronto team when they come to this city, held their first practice, when they rolled a series of four games with a team captained by R. W. Early.

The home team certainly showed some class in the third game, when they rolled a total of 1,036 pins, which is a record game, also winning the other three games by good margins. The locals are confident that a great game will be played when the Torontos visit this city.

The scores were:

Weber	128	167	205	168	668
Henderson	168	144	225	115	652
R. Ross	102	156	188	181	627
Fitzpatrick	186	167	215	110	678
Solomon	176	160	203	210	749
	760	794	1063	784	3374

Team average—843.

Early's Picked Team—

Jackson	149	239	140	100	628
Matthews	132	97	143	129	501
Cowles	112	180	128	116	536
A. Ross	122	128	116	107	473
Early	141	105	137		383
Outram				116	116
	656	749	664	568	2637

Team average—659.

The blind scores in connection with the recent five-pin league will be rolled off on Thursday night next.

Voice of The People

Correspondence under this heading containing or involving attacks on individuals, or violent or extreme statements, must, to secure insertion, be signed with which thus assumes the responsibility.

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Dear Sir—The letter of your correspondent "One Who Was There," shows personal animosity to Capt. Burnham all over it.

In the first place he says that Mr. Peck had an overwhelming majority in his favour. If so, why did Mr. Peck say, in his letter to the public, that he would have needed a much stronger expression of public opinion in his favour to run as a candidate?

In the second place he says that the pull will be in the opposite direction to what I expect. It may be so with such as the writer, but I don't believe for an instant that the great mass of voters will vote against sending immediate reinforcements to the boys at the front. Our boys at the front are having to serve in the front line trenches ten and twelve days at a stretch, while men of our other allies are only serving six days, all because of lack of reinforcements. The above assertion was made by Gen. Mewburn, Minister of Militia, in his maiden speech at Hamilton.

Your correspondent will finfid that most people vote for principle, not for personality.

In conclusion, I would say that your correspondent should not mention any citizen by name in a letter that he is ashamed to sign with his own name.

Yours truly,
J. W. WORTH.

"The Vicar of Wakefield" at The Empire

A Production That is Complete to the Minutest Details

The super features booked by the Empire Theatre have proved to be wonderful pictures. To-night and to-morrow Oliver Goldsmith's classic "The Vicar of Wakefield," is to be seen in seven reels, and no doubt it will be found to be as fine a picture as the press and audiences who have already seen it declare it to be.

TRIBUNAL No. 276

CITY COUNCIL CHAMBERS

W. H. Moore, K.C., J. A. Aylmer, Members
Mayor J. J. Duffus, Military Representative

Exemptions Disallowed.

Patrick Joseph Ryan.
Vernon P. Lewis, 319 Boswell avenue.

Exemptions Allowed.

Beeches Matchett, farmer, Otonabee.
Loyale Maloney, farmer, Douro.

Temporary Exemptions.

Walter S. Hetherington, 191 King street.

Decisions Reserved.

Gordon N. Moncrief, North Monaghan.
John Coughlin, Douro.

"B" Category Men Exempted.

Stanley Scott, Chamberlen street.

"C" Men Exempted.

Arnold M. Bossence, 529 King street.
Ernest James Reynolds, 318 Monaghan Road.

"E" Men Exempted.

John Casey, farmer, Otonabee.
Guy Reginald Quartermaine, 265 Hunter street.
Harvey Elwood Henry, 189 Stewart street.
Stuart T. Cullen, R. R. No. 4, Peterborough.
Robert Morris Carson, 181 Romaine street.

Ten of this mornings twenty-five exemption appeals were from A2 men. This is about the average number of the physically fit in the daily quota that passes before the tribunal. When the farmers predominate, few "E" men are found among them, but they are practically automatically exempted with a few exceptions.

Walter S. Hetherington, 191 King street, is an an expert mechanic employed in the manufacture of shells at the Peterborough Machine and Lubricator Co. Mr. E. R. Wilson, his employer, corroborated his statement, but Mr. Aylmer asked Mr. Wilson how he reconciled a wage rate of 40 cents an hour with exceptional skill and service claimed for Mr. Hetherington.

"We will let you have him until the first of February," Mr. Aylmer announced.

Mr. Hetherington has two brothers, one working on munitions and one at the Peterborough Laundry.

Sure of His Category.

Loyale Maloney of Douro, said he hadn't been before the Medical Board. "I'd only get A2," he laughed. He based his claim on the importance of his work as a farmer and his exemption was allowed.

"Remember you are a soldier on leave, so don't take any positions with big salaries," Mr. Alymer warned him jocularly.

"It will have to be a big salary to get me," replied Maloney.

Gordon N. Monchief, tax collector for North Monaghan, appeared before the tribunal again after a former reservation of decision. He practically alone works their truck farm. His father is elderly and his best working days are over. If he were taken, the applicant said, it would simply mean that his father would have to give up the farm.—Decision reserved.

Patrick Joseph Ryan, born in Malachy, Que., wasn't sure whether he was 34 or 35 years old. He asked for exemption as the sole support of his widowed mother. Married in September, the law regards him as a single man. Exemption refused.

Vernon P. Lewis, 319 Boswell avenue, an "A2" man, appealed for exemption on the ground of infirm health. His application was refused, but he was instructed to appeal to Kingston, presenting his own doctor's statement.

John Coughlin, of Douro, is one of two "A2" brothers who work a farm of 225 acres. Their father has been too ill to help them. Decision was reserved yesterday on one appeal until the military representatives considered the case. Tribunal 276 was prepared to exempt John Coughlin, but finally reserved its decision.

TRIBUNAL No. 275

COURT HOUSE

Judge Huycke, Police Magistrate Dumble, Members
Lt.-Col. E. B. Clegg, Military Representative

Roy Melville Porter, son of Mr. E. W. Porter, of Otonabee, was exempted until he ceases to be employed as a farmer. Porter has one brother at home who is in "E" category, while a third brother is employed as a druggist in Toronto and has been granted temporary exemption.

Lieut.-Col. Clegg was strongly of the opinion that Porter's claim for exemption should be disallowed, and when the Board ruled otherwise, the military representative of the Board announced his intention of appealing the case.

(Appended is an extract from a letter submitted by Mr. Porter, senior, in support of his claim for the exemption of his son. The Board was very favourably impressed by the amount of food products produced by the Porter family, which consists of father, mother, two sisters and two sons at home.

The letter in part contains the following reference to the amount of grain, etc., produced this year on the Porter farm:

500 bushels of wheat, 200 bushels of peas, 700 bushels of barley, 2,000 bushels of oats.

140 bags of potatoes. Four acres of roots and three acres of fodder corn, also 75 tons of hay, with other small stuff too numerous to mention.

On a yearly average we milk 10 cows and sell in the spring an average of 10 head of finished beef cattle, also 35 or 40 hogs, weighing 200 pounds or over, are sold yearly off the farm, in addition to a few sheep and 200 fowls.

Beef, pork and other food products are all fed from the produce of the farm; no mill feeds or other grains being bought.

Signed. E. W. J. PORTER.

At present day prices the above products have a market value of nearly five thousand dollars. The Porter farm consists of two hundred and fifty acres of land.

Sidney H. Reid, R. R. No. 11, Sydney E. Goodfellow, 518 Water street, Percy V. Holland, 384 1-2 Water street, Samuel Hirst, 212 Auburn, Peterborough, Robert K. Dixon, Peterborough, C. Mellen, General Delivery, and John J. Quinlan, 629 Oxford street, all "E" men, were exempted until E class is called.

Manley E. Shearer, 264 Reid street, a "B" man, and F. D. Craig, a "C" man, were exempted until B and C classes are called.

Exemptions Disallowed.

The exemption claims of Norman G. Gardner, 275 John street, Bertrand W. McClennan, 326 Charlotte street, James J. May, 21 Maria street, Alexander Trotter, General Delivery, and Edward John Hanarhan, 458 Bolivar street, were all disallowed.

Garnet W. Stalker, Peterborough, Peter Maloney and Daniel Corkery were exempted until they cease to be employed as farmers.

Mr. Hopwood Is Back From a Long Trip

Mr. W. J. Hopwood returned yesterday from a special trip to the Pacific Coast and north-western points in the interest of the North British Rubber Co., of Edinburgh, Scotland, the largest rubber company in the Empire. He reports business good in the West, and leaves next week for the Maritime Provinces and Atlantic Coast points for the same company. This will complete a trip of over 10,000 miles.

During his absence Mr. Hopwood was elected by acclamation as director for Peterborough of the Commercial Travellers' Association of Canada, and appointed agent for the sale of certificates for Peterborough. He reports this association as still making rapid progress, having now a membership of over 13,000 and a reserve capital of $1,250,000.

TEUTON LABOUR'S WAR LOSS

Organ of Building Trades Prints Big List of Casualties.

How the labour power of Germany is being cut down by the war is again illustrated by the arrival in this country of two copies of the Grundstein, the weekly organ of the German Building Trade Unions. The issue of 4th August, 1917, contains a list of 1,044 members of these unions who have fallen on the battlefields while that of 17th March, 1917, gives the names of 939. About 90 per cent of the German masons and their helpers are in the military service.

The membership of the Austrian trade unions has been reduced nearly 60 per cent. by the effects of the war, according to data found in a recent issue of Gewerkschaft, the official organ of the Austrian Trades Union Commission. On 1st January, 1917 the members numbered 166,907, of whom 23,907 were women, as against 372,216 men and 42,979 women members on 1st January, 1914. The total membership on 1st January, 1915 was 240,681, and on 1st January 1916 it was 177,113.

CAPTAIN TELLS HOW UNSEEN BLOW SENT VESSEL TO BOTTOM

AN ATLANTIC PORT, Nov. 17.—An unseen torpedo from an unseen U-boat tore into the side of the American steamship D. N. Luckenbach, on 27th October, destroying her engine, killing five of her engine-room crew, and sinking the vessel and her 3,000-ton cargo. Details were brought here by the survivors who arrived aboard a Danish steamship.

This was the third of the Luckenbach Steamship Company's fleet attacked by Prussian submarines during October, two being sunk and the third escaping, thanks to the prompt appearance of an American destroyer. Twenty-four lives were the toll exacted in these attacks.

"At noon, 27th October, when we were in the Bay of Biscay, 200 miles from the French coast," said Captain Gus Smith, commander of the D. N. Luckenbach, "a terrific jolt made our vessel careen to one side This was followed by an explosion in the engine-room. Within twenty minutes after that the vessel sank.

"Twenty-four of the crew and I took to the lifeboats and got away. Five of the men in the engine-room sank with the vessel.

"We were at the mercy of the seas for two days and suffered keenly. We had plenty of provisions, and although we did not suffer in this respect, we were almost exhausted before we were picked up."

Captain Smith said that at no time either before or after the torpedoing was there sign of anything that looked like a periscope or of the wake of a torpedo.

Those missing are: Fred Olsen, twenty-seven years old, second assistant engineer, a naturalised Norwegian; A. Penna, twenty-nine years old third assistant engineer, whose wife resides in Brooklyn; Domois Chronis, twenty-six years old, a fireman; Bemis Evangelous, twenty-six years old, an oiler, and Peter Vallianos, twenty-seven years old, also an oiler.

The other vessels of the company which were attacked by U-boats were the Lewis Luckenbach, which was torpedoed and sunk early in October with the loss of a naval gunner and nine of her crew, and the J. L. Luckenbach, which escaped by the timely appearance of an American destroyer, but not until after a four-hour running fight in which two naval gunners and seven of the crew were killed by shells.

WEDDING BELLS

STEWART—JEWELL.

At high noon to-day, in All Saints' Church, a very pretty wedding was solemnized, when Mrs. Mary Jewell and Mr. Jos. Stewart, both of this city, were united in the holy bonds of matrimony, Rev. R. B. Grobb officiating.

The bride, who was prettily attired in a navy blue suit and black picture hat, was given away by her brother, Mr. J. W Foster. The couple were unattended.

The bride was the recipient of a handsome cameo necklace, set with pearls, the gift of the groom.

The happy couple left on the noon train for a short honeymoon, and will stop at Belleville, Montreal and Quebec.

On their return, Mr. and Mrs. Stewart will reside at 200 Stewart Street, City, and will be at home to friends after December 1st.

ASTA—SABATINO.

A very pretty wedding was solemnized at St. Paul's Church, Lakefield, on Tuesday morning at 8 o'clock, when Francis P. Asta, of Peterborough, was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to Miss Mary Rose Sabatino.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. Father Meagher, who also said the Nuptial Mass. The groom was supported by Mr. Louis Cupoli, Peterborough, while Miss Angeline Asta, sister of the groom, assisted the bride. The young bride, who is only 19 years of age, was beautifully attired in white satin and veil with orange blossoms, and carried a bouquet of white roses. The bridesmaid was dressed in a pale blue chiffon, and carried a bouquet of pink carnations. After the ceremony the happy young couple motored to the home of the bride's parents on Albert Street, where a dainty wedding breakfast was served to fifty guests.

The young couple left on the 6.30 p.m. train for Toronto, on a short honeymoon, and on their return will reside at 515 Parnell Street, Peterborough.

ALLDREAD—REID.

On Wednesday, 14th November, a very pretty but quiet wedding took place at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Reid, Bailieboro, when their daughter, Lillian Mildred, was united in marriage to Mr. John Heil Alldread, of Pontypool. Rev. W. Twickett performed the ceremony in the presence of a few immediate relatives.

The bride wore a beautiful white silk dress, trimmed with lace and pearls, and an artistically arranged bridal veil, and carried a sheaf of 'mums.

The register being duly signed, Mr Meredith Byers of Pontypool and Miss Marguerite Reid of Bailieboro attaching their names as witnesses dinner was announced, and all sat down to a daintily spread table, after which the bridal couple left by motor amid showers of best wishes, for points west.

Mr. and Mrs. Alldread will reside in Pontypool.

DR. CLEMENCEAU IS WELCOMED BY THE PRESS OF FRANCE

Public Opinion Strongly in Favour of New Premier, Only Socialists Opposed---French Cabinet Will Prosecute An "Integural War"

QUESTION OF CENSORSHIP

PARIS, Nov. 22. — Public opinion, judging from the press, is even more strongly with Dr. Clemenceau that the most optimistic hoped. Three newspapers only—the Humanite, the socialist official organ; the Lanterne, another socialist newspaper, and the Journal du Peuple, a newspaper which is merely a name—oppose him.

The Humanite does it neither altogether overtly nor altogether covertly; it is on the fence, to speak bluntly. The Lanterne attacks Dr. Clemenceau furiously, but that is because the editor, Marcel Sembat, who was such a hopeless failure as a Minister, is paying him back for former criticisms.

An Appeal For Mercy.

The Pays, a newspaper devoted to Mr. Caillaux, is positively pitiful. Its comments on the new Cabinet amount to an appeal to Dr. Clemenceau to be merciful.

"What we must hope above all," it says, "is that the war has taught Dr. Clemenceau the importance of the happy medium," which, being interpreted, means, "Don't be too hard on the backsliders involved in current scandals."

With those exceptions the press is pro-Clemenceau, with vigour and even ostentatiously. The Gaulois, a royalist newspaper, which Dr. Clemenceau never spared, says: "His indefatigable campaign has made him the personification of two ideas dear to every patriot—justice at home and war to victory abroad."

The Figaro brings out the same thought. It says these two considerations have irresistibly forced Dr. Clemenceau into office.

The Matin always Ministerial, neutrally welcomes the new Cabinet. But more significant still, for the Matin is very shrewd in scenting the way the wind is blowing, it says that Dr. Clemenceau will receive the heartiest support of the Chamber.

The Journal strikes the same note and predicts a big majority on Tuesday when the Ministry makes its debut.

Want More Vigour in War.

Even newspapers that like Dr. Clemenceau least declare they will support him so long as he cleans out the wrongdoers here and puts the utmost vigour into the conduct of the war.

The Action Francaise, a royalist newspaper which is no lover of Dr. Clemenceau, exhorts its partisans to rally round him.

In fact the new Cabinet is so warmly welcomed on every side that it is almost too good to last. The few malcontents are only there for show, a mere death's-head at a feast.

The Parliamentary correspondents of the newspapers agree that the new Ministry will receive a vote of confidence by a very large majority after discussion of the interpellations.

The declaration says that the Cabinet will prosecute what it calls an "intergral war," and that the Allies are fighting to establish a foundation for the future of the world, which means that the war can end only by a victory of the Allies. Treason, the declaration announces, will be pitilessly suppressed.

The delicate question of the censorship is treated boldly and frankly. The political censorship will be abolished absolutely and regulations for military news will be so made as not to conflict with the liberty of the press.

GRAIN MARKET

Mill feeds are becoming very scarce in the face of exceptionally heavy demands on the millers at this season of the year. Orders in many cases cannot be filled, the mills not having the usual stocks in hand to fall back upon. While the official quotations on feed given out by the Board of Trade are unchanged, local dealers are quoting bran and shorts $2 higher than the official figures. The cash demand for oats, barley and corn continues very active.

Manitoba wheat—No. 1 northern, $2.23 1-2; No. 2 northern, $2.20 1-2; No. 3, $2.17 1-2; No. 4, $2.10 1-2, including 2 1-2 cent tax, in store Fort William.

Manitoba oats—No. 2 C.W., 75c; No. 3, 71 3-4; extra No. 1 feed, 72c; in store, Fort William; No. 1 feed, 69 1-4c.

American corn — Nominal, not quoted.

Barley—$1.22 to $1.23.

Peas—No. 2, $3.70 to $3.80, according to freights outside.

Buckwheat—$1.45 to $1.50.

Rye—No. 2, $1.72.

SEIZING EX-CZAR'S MILLIONS IN N.Y.

Writ of Attachment is Signed Against Nicholas Romanoff.

NEW YORK, Nov. 20.—A writ of attachment on the personal property here of Nicholas Romanoff, former Emperor of Russia, was signed by State Supreme Court, Justice Russell Benedict in a suit for $2,800,000 brought against Mr. Romanoff by the Marine Transportation Service Corporation for alleged breach of contract. According to Bernhard Naumburg, attorney for the corporation, the former Czar of all the Russians has several million dollars worth of property in this city, mostly in banks, which will be seized under the writ as soon as located.

The corporation alleges that it contracted with the Russian Government in 1915 to transport goods to Russia and in so doing incurred liabilities.

The Russian Government defaulted on the contract, the corporation alleges, and in order to pay off these liabilities the corporation turned over to its creditors the $3,000,000 steamship Vigilancia, since sunk.

It was explained that the suit was brought against the Czar as constituting the then Russian Government.

Some Indian Women Will Have Vote

Ottawa, Nov. 22. — Misunderstandings in regard to the female vote are apparently fairly common. Returning officers apparently have given the opinion that the female relatives of soldiers or sailors in the British army or navy are not fitted to vote unless the soldier or sailor relatives have been at some time resident in Canada. Mr. W. F. O'Connor, general returning officer, states that this view is incorrect. Female relatives (within the degrees of relationship involved in the Act) of all soldiers or sailors in the Canadian or British army or navy whether or not such soldiers or sailors have ever resided in Canada, are entitled to vote, providing the female relatives have themselves the necessary racial or residential qualification.

The position of the squaw has also raised some doubt. If she has a husband at the front, is she entitled to vote? The answer is that where an Indian has been disfranchised under provincial laws, his female relatives will not vote. Where on the other hand, a male Indian is entitled to vote under provincial law, the female relatives of an Indian soldier will vote. In certain provinces therefore Indian women will have the franchise.

Mr. O'Connor also expresses the view that the stepmother, grandmother or mother-in-law of a soldier is not entitled to vote. A half-sister may vote, however.

Here is a method for removing hair or fuzz that is unfailing and is quite inexpensive: Mix a thick paste with some powdered delatone and water and spread on hairy surface. After 2 or 3 minutes, rub it off, wash the skin and every trace of hair has vanished. No harm or inconvenience results from this treatment, but be careful to get genuine delatone.

Indians Petition King For Exemption

London, Ont., Nov. 22. — Chief Cornelius Logan, of the Muncey Reserve, and Chief Frank Fisher, acting secretary of the Chippawa Band of Indians, are forwarding petitions to Premier Sir Robert Borden and the other members of the government, asking that the Indians be released from compulsory military service on the ground that the Middlesex Indians have been willing to go to war voluntarily and have enlisted over 12 per cent. of their male population.

The petition will be circulated among the Indians and forwarded to the King. The lengthy preamble sets forth that "According to the population of Indians in Canada, we did more than any other nations.

"We claim we did more, our Indian women, known as Red Cross Society, make socks and shirts, etc., for our soldiers at the firing line.

"If an Indian conscript, some have a wife and children, will suffer from wanting, keep clothing, they have no money to depend on for living, only to raise a crop for their food."

The treaty made by the British in 1794 pledging the Indians protection, "as long as rivers flow, the grass grows and sun shines, because the Indians have done a great deal for the British Crown" is quoted, and in concluding the document sets forth —"All the Indian nations of Canada defended the British Crown. That shows we fulfill our agreements. We remain as a loyal body of Indians.

"Now, we therefore ask you that Indians should not be conscripted at the present war. Hoping you will grant our wishes and ask the Canadian government not to conscript the Indians."

IF FOOD DISAGREES DRINK HOT WATER

When food lies like lead in the stomach and you have that uncomfortable, distended feeling, it is because of insufficient blood supply to the stomach combined with acid and food fermentations. In such cases try the plan now followed in many hospitals and advised by many eminent physicians of taking a teaspoonful of pure bisurated magnesia in half a glass of water, as hot as you can comfortably drink it. The hot water draws the blood to the stomach and the bisurated magnesia, as any physician can tell you, instantly neutralizes the acid and stops the food fermentation. Try this simple plan and you will be astonished at the immediate feeling of relief and comfort that always follows the restoration of the normal process of digestion. People who find it inconvenient at times to secure hot water and travelers who are frequently obliged to take hasty meals poorly prepared, should always take two or three five-grain tablets of Bisurated Magnesia after meals to prevent fermentation and neutralize the acid in their stomach.

"THE FILM OF FEAR"

By ARNOLD FREDERICKS

CHAPTER IV.

Mrs. Morton returned to New York that afternoon greatly pleased with the results of her trip. That she had been able to enlist the serives of Richard Duvall gave her a sense of security. She found Ruth at home, safe and well, with no further threats or warnings to disturb her peace of mind. The girl was absorbed in her new role. The picture promised to be the most successful of her career.

The following morning Mrs. Morton rose early, in order to go through the mail before Ruth had an opportunity to do so. The shock caused by the first threatening letter had passed from the girl's mind. The second she knew nothing of. Mrs. Morton was determined that if any more arrived, she should not see those either.

Trembling with eagerness she opened the pile of letters, but found nothing. With a sigh of relief she turned away. Perhaps after all she had exaggerated the importance of the matter.

Half an hour later, while Ruth was eating her breakfast, a messenger boy arrived with a telegram, addressed to Miss Ruth Morton. The maid, seeing no reason to do otherwise, brought it to the girl as she sat at the table. Mrs. Morton who had been at the rear of the apartment hurried in as she heard the sound of the door bell, but by the time she had reached the dining room Ruth had already opened and read the message. She sat staring at a bit of yellow paper, her face pale and drawn.

"What is it, dear?" Mrs. Morton cried, hurrying to her side.

"Another threat," she said quietly. "These people, whoever they are, seem to be in deadly earnest."

Mrs. Morton took the telegram and hurriedly read it.

"Even the beauty of the rose," the message said, "cannot endure for twenty-seven days." There was no signature to the telegram.

A look of the deepest apprehension crept into Mrs. Morton's eyes, but she turned away so that Ruth might not realize her fears.

"Pay no aenion to the matter, Ruth," she said, in tones suddenly grown a trifle unsteady. "It is certainly nothing more than a stupid joke."

"Well, mother, of course you may be right, but for my part, I have a feeling that it isn't a joke at all, but a real and very terrible threat. What is to prevent these people, whoever they are, from attacking me—sending me some infernal machine in the disguise of a box or package, which as soon as I open it, might burn or blind or otherwise disfigure me so that my life would be ruined?" She rose and glanced at herself in the mirror which hung over the mantel. Already there were deep circles of anxiety beneath her eyes while the lines of her face, usually sweet and placid, were now those of an anxious and frightened woman. The first threat had upset her far more than her mother had realized. The one just received had intensified the effect a hundred-fold.

"But you mustn't open any packages, m- child. Be very careful about that. And Robert must not stop the car under any circumstances, in going to or from the studio. There, at least, I believe you are quite safe. I will have a talk with Mr. Edwards to-day and explain matters to him. And here you cannot possibly be in any danger. Meanwhile in spite of what you say, I still beg you not to let this matter prey upon your mind. I cannot, will not, take it seriously." Poor Mrs. Morton, herself thoroughly frightened, strove with all her might to convince Ruth that she had nothing to fear. She knew the girl's intense, high-strung nature, and feared that constant worry, ceaseless anxiety, might readily so work upon her as to reduce her to a nervous wreck long before the expiration of the thirty days named in the first threatening letter. She found herself wishing devoutly that Duvall would appear.

As she finished speaking there came a ring at the door bell, and Nora started to answer it. Mrs. Morton stopped her.

"Nora," she said, "Listen to me. You are no', under any circumstances to admit anyone—no matter who it is—until I have first seen and talked with them. Do you understand?"

"Yes, ma'am, I unde-stand," replied the girl as she went out into the hall.

A moment later, Mrs. Morton hearing a man's voice, hurried after her. Nora, with the door but slightly open, was speaking with a rough looking fellow, a workman apparently, who stood in the hallway outside. He was a man of thirty-five, with a reddish moustache, wearing working clothes, and a cap. This he removed as Mrs. Morton came to the door.

"Is this Mrs Morton's apartment?" he asked.

"Yes. What do you want?" Mrs. Morton's voice and manner were far from encouraging.

"There seems to be a leak in the plumbing somewhere on this floor," the man went on. "There's trouble with the ceilings in the apartment below. The superintendent wants me to go over the connections and see that everything is all right." He lifted a canvas bag containing his tools from the floor and made as though to enter. Mrs. Morton, however, did not open the door any wider.

"You can't come in now," she said. "Come back later—in an hour. My daughter is not dressed yet." She seemed ready to close the door entirely, but the man again spoke.

"Can't afford to wait, ma'am," he said, with a significant smile. "I've got every apartment in this house to go over before the end of the month, and there are only tweny-seven days left." He emphasized his concluding words at the same time looking Mrs. Morton squarely in the eye.

"Very well," she said, "Come in." She realized that the supposed workman was no other than Duvall.

The latter went quietly toward the kitchen at the rear of the apartment, and occupied himself by examining the connections of the sink. He seemed to work slowly, unconcernedly, whistling softly to himself as he moved about. His eyes, however, were very bright and keen, and no detail of the room, the negro cook who occupied it, or the buildings in the rear, escaped his attention.

Mrs. Morton came back presently and addressed him.

"My daughter has gone, now," she said. "You may look over the plumbing in the bathroom whenever you are ready."

With a nod Duvall picked up his tools and followed her to the front of the apartment. As they left the kitchen Mrs. Morton closed the door leading from it to the hall.

"I want you to stay here for the next hour, Sarah," she said, as she left the kitchen. "If anyone rings, I will answer the bell." A moment later she and Duvall were in the library.

The latter pretended to be busy inspecting the connections of the hot water radiator.

"Have you received any more threats?" he asked, in a low voice, without turning his head.

Mrs. Morton took the telegram that Ruth had received a short time before, and placed it in his hand.

"This came half an hour ago," she said, without further comment.

Duvall read it, then thrust it into his pocket.

"Did your daughter see it" he asked.

"Yes, it had been delivered to her before I could prevent it."

"That is too bad. Was she much upset"

Yes. The thing is beginning to get on her nerves."

"Please take me to your daughter's bedroom," he said. Mrs. Morton led the way.

The room was a fairly large one, situated in an ell at the rear of the building. Of its two windows, one as has already been pointed out, overlooked the court between the apartment building and the house next door. The other faced towards the rear.

Duvall placed his kit of tools upon the floor, and began an examination of the room. After a quick glance about, he turned to Mrs. Morton.

"Where was the letter found—the one that did not come through the mails?"

"Here." Mrs. Morton indicated a spot on the floor near the small enameled dressing table that stood against the east wall of the window. Its position was midway between the two windows. It was clear that whoever had entered the room might have done so through either of the windows; at least the position in which the dressing table stood afforded no indication as to which one it might have been.

"Which of the two windows was open, when you found the letter?" Duvall asked.

Mrs. Morton indicated the one facing the court.

"This one," she said. "Not wide open. Perhaps six or eight inches."

"The other was not fastened, I suppose?"

Duvall went to the window, and opened it. It was well balanced and moved easily.

THERE IS NOTHING FOR THE LIVER SO GOOD AS MILBURN'S LAXA-LIVER PILLS

They will regulate the flow of bile to act properly on the bowels and will tone, renovate, and purify the liver, removing every result of liver trouble from the temporary, but disagreeable bilious and sick headaches, to the severest forms of liver complaint.

They are small and easy-acting, do not gripe, sicken or weaken like the old-fashioned, nauseating, griping purgatives.

Mrs. A. Kirk, 53 Yorkville Ave., Toronto, Ont., writes: "I have tried and tested Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills, and have received good results, for which I am very thankful. I took them for liver trouble. I came out of the hospital on May 3rd, last, after having had a serious operation which might have been saved had I taken your remedy sooner. I have given some to my sister for biliousness and sick headache, and she has found great relief. A lady who lives in my house has started to take them. I will do my best to recommend them to all my friends."

A man went to Louisiana on a visit to a certain colonel there. It was bedtime when he arrived at the house, and as it happened that there were no mosquito-curtains to his bed, he suffered severely all night long. When the following morning the negro servant came into the room with water and towels, the unhappy victim asked why there was no mosquito-curtains in the room.

Doesn't the colonel have any in his room? he finally inquired.

No, suh, replied the negro.

Well, how on earth can he stand it? said the visitor.

Well, suh, came the reply, I reckon it's jes' dis way. In de fo' part ob de night de colonel's mos' gen'ly so 'toxicated dat he don' pay no 'tention to de skeeters; an' in de las' part ob de night de skeeters is gen'ly so 'toxicated dat dey don' pay no 'tention to de colonel.—Philadelphia Press.

Summer Boarders.

Summer boarders are people who spend several weeks in the country each summer longing for a trip home. They are usually very witty persons and make comical remarks to the farmer. Aside from the board they pay him the farmer cleans up a tidy sum each summer by sending the things his boarders say to the comic weeklies. A summer boarder can merely look at a cow and quick as a wink he will say something funny. The farmer puts this down in a book he always carries around with him. In the course of a couple of weeks he has several pages of good jokes to sell at his own rates. If you board with a farmer any summer say some funny things to him about the cows or the pigs. If he keeps a horse always poke fun at his horse. He will laugh at the funny things you say. Then he will go in and open up a can of fresh country peas out of his own cellar so that when you go back to the city you will miss the country vegetables. When you leave be sure and tell him how you enjoyed the country eating so that he can laugh some more.

Respect the Children.

Don't call the children kids. A kid is a goat, and, while goats are all right in their way, children are better. The dictionary says "kid" applied to a child is slang. And so it is. It depreciates the child. There is no sense in taking away the dignity of a child by calling him an animal. We must keep up the human relation, where respect, sympathy, love dwell. The older people may overlook the false appellation, but it stays with the child and makes him feel, after all, that he is only a little goat and that his fond delight is in eating old rags and paper boxes. Really the child is an angel rather than a goat and is entitled to the sweet considerations that belong to a human being, and if he does not get these it is very likely he will be a sort of goat all his life. So drop the "kid" vocabulary and give the child every chance to be a true human.

The Largest Insect.

The grasshopper has a cousin who is the largest insect in the world. He is called the cyphocrane and makes his home principally in Java and Sumatra. This greatest of small creatures is twelve inches long and during his lifetime gets a new skin upon seven or eight occasions. And each time he sheds his skin he grows a bit larger. If the process were continued long enough he doubtless would grow up.

The cyphocrane is described as having a bulging head of a deep green color spotted in brown, with eyes of bright green crossed by fine brown stripes. The body of this insect is disproportionately large and brilliantly colored, says an exchange. The legs are similar to those of the mosquito, having the power to draw blood from a victim. The cyphocrane is a particularly annoying and dangerous pest.

What His Scrap Book Tells.

I take down my old scrap book, wherein I have pasted certain clippings to the number of about 6,000. Among them are references to gents who elope, relate meteorological reminiscences of the years agone, tote amulets to ward off pestilences or boast of their distinguished ancestry; items about men who blow down the muzzles of guns, race with limited trains for railroad crossings and insist upon advising the president and many others of their silly ilk. When I have perused the battered tome for an hour or so I feel greatly refreshed, for I realize that I am not more than half as big a fool as other people seem to think I look.—Festus Pester in Kansas City Times.

Old Time Virginia Taverns.

So universal in the early days in this country was the custom of free entertainment that it was a law in Virginia that unless there had been a distinct agreement to pay for board and shelter no pay could be collected from any guest, no matter how long he remained. In the few taverns that existed the prices were low, about a shilling a dinner, and it was ordered that the meal must be wholesome and good.

Unfortunate Beginning.

Sometimes, to be sure, the opening is so unfortunate as to incur instant resentment and positively invite refusal. Take the case of the diminutive man of kindly appearance who was accosted in the loop by a seedy purist with the words:

"Sir, I am looking for a little succor."

"Well," snorted the wearer of the size 13½ collar, "do I look like one?

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

A Case of Blackmail

By SADIE OLCOTT

Pietro Caracali was deliberating on a plan to extort money by sending a threatening letter to some one who could afford to hand over the cash to avoid trouble, when chance gave him a fine opportunity. He was walking past the estate of the Hethringtons one night about 11 o'clock when he espied a light flash among the trees within the inclosure.

Pietro was of an enterprising turn of mind, arguing that one can never tell when a secret may be picked up which may be turned into money. The flash had revealed to him something that he had not expected to see at that time of night in a rich man's grounds—namely, a gentleman carrying a small oblong box under his arm. Moreover, Pietro got a glimpse of a lady moving beside the gentleman. Both were young, and the lady was beautiful.

Pietro climbed the fence with the agility of youth and, creeping through such plants as adorn gentlemen's estates, made his way toward the couple, who were moving to a rear corner of the grounds.

Pietro did not need to be the adept he was at theorizing to feel sure that this young couple were going to bury the body of a child contained in the box they had with them. If the little one had died without mystery there would have been no need of their interring it at this time of night and in this secret manner. Stealthily he followed the couple, who stopped at an open space in the shrubbery. The man dug a grave and, having put the box in it, shoveled in the earth and smoothed the surface, while the lady, holding the lantern, stood by, a picture of melancholy. A big dog stood by the lady, viewing the burial with evident interest. When it was finished and the couple were about to return to the house the dog pricked up his ears and gave a low growl. Pietro beat a hasty retreat. The dog dashed toward him, and Pietro got over the fence just in time to save himself from a pair of powerful jaws.

Pietro believed that he had a valuable secret. If he was right in his inference that the body of a child had been buried those who had interred it would undoubtedly give a large sum for the preservation of the secret. Pietro was a methodical rascal and would have visited the grave, dug up the box and assured himself of the truth of his inference, but he had a wholesome dread of the dog's jaws. To go there in the daytime was impracticable, and at night the dog was unloosed and permitted to roam over the grounds.

Pietro thought of going to the house and making inquiries of the servants that would help him in determining what the secret burial meant, but he was farseeing and looked forward to a possible future arrest, in which case to be identified as having prowled around the place, the denizens of which he proposed to bleed, would prove a great disadvantage to him. He determined to proceed on the theory that there was something to be concealed.

He learned the name of the owners of the place, then wrote a note mentioning what he had seen and offering to keep the secret on payment of $5,000, giving an assumed name to be addressed at the general delivery of the postoffice. In a week's time he received a note written in a feminine hand imploring him not to divulge what he had witnessed. The money to pay for his silence was being got together, and as soon as it was ready he would be notified.

A fortnight later, not having heard anything further in the matter, he wrote again, demanding immediate payment or the police would be notified that a crime had been covered up. To this he received a reply that $3,000 of ready money had been raised and would be turned over to him in any manner that he might designate. Each year for four years $500 would be paid him provided the secret was kept.

This looked to Pietro like a bona fide offer. He had not thought that the parties would likely provide against being called on for blackmail in future. He accepted the proposition and appointed a meeting at a certain day and hour at a street corner near the scene of the burial to receive his first payment. He would wear a brown suit and would carry a book in his left hand. Any attempt at treachery would result in the death of his would be captor.

At the time appointed a man appeared on the scene and, seeing another in a brown suit and a book in his hand, asked him if he were the party to be paid for keeping a secret. Pietro admitted that he was, and the other put his hand into his inside coat pocket, took out a fat pocketbook and was about to hand it over when several men started from different points near by, one of whom clutched Pietro from behind before he could make any defense. Then he was taken to a police station.

Pietro, instead of having provided for his freedom for five years, had provided for his board at the expense of the state for an exact term. No explanation was made as to the secret of the burial, for none was needed. The lady's poodle had died in the evening, and she and her husband were to go on a journey early the next morning. The night burial was therefore necessary.

High Prices.

In San Francisco in 1849 clerks in stores and offices had munificent salaries. Five dollars a day was the smallest stipend even in the custom house, and one preacher was paid $10,000 a year. Laborers received $1 an hour. A pick or a shovel was worth $10 and a butcher's knife $30. At one time the carpenters, who were getting $12 a day, struck for $16. But it should be noted that prices were exceedingly high also.

Politely Searched.

A well dressed man leaving a Washington theater recently, absorbed in reflection on the performance he had just witnessed, noticed a crowd of theater goers lingering at the entrance. The W. D. M. did not flatter himself that he was the center of attraction, although he had been somewhat prominent in his home town, and, glancing backward, saw a party leaving the theater, of which the president was the center. This was the cause of all the commotion. At this juncture the W. D. M. lost his equilibrium, stumbled and fell in a heap in the president's path. An alert corps of ever present secret service men, instantly on the job, lifted the prostrate W. D. M. to his feet and courteously brushed him off, handing him his hat, cane and glasses. The W. D. M. later confessed to friends that he had a faint suspicion that in the brushing process he had been systematically and incidentally "frisked" for concealed weapon.

Children Had Whooping Cough

Whooping cough, although specially a disease of childhood, is by no means confined to that period, but may occur at any time of life. It is one of the most dangerous diseases of infancy, and yearly causes more deaths than scarlet fever, typhoid or diphtheria, and is more common in female than male children.

Whooping cough starts with sneezing, watering of the eyes, irritation of the throat, feverishness and cough. The coughing attacks occur frequently, but are generally more severe at night.

On the first sign of a "whoop" Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup should be administered, as it helps to clear the bronchial tubes of the collected mucous and phlegm.

Mrs. George Cooper, Bloomfield, Ont., writes: "It is with pleasure I can write and tell you that there never was a better cough medicine made than Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup. Our children had whooping cough last winter, and that is the only thing that seemed to help them. It loosens up the phlegm so that they could raise it easily. I will never be without it."

"Dr. Wood's" is 25c. and 50c. a bottle; put up in a yellow wrapper; three pine trees the trade mark; manufactured by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Floating War Loans.

The United States was in actual fact the originator of what may be called the intensive campaign for popular subscription to a war loan. Jay Cooke in 1862, undertaking on commission the floating of $400,000,000 United States bonds on which Wall street had looked coldly at the treasury's terms, started his 2,500 subordinates to canvassing all towns and villages of the country. By the visiting of every house like book agents, the enlisting of local committees, the placarding of town halls and postoffices and railway stations, the constructing of patriotic appeals through the newspapers and the promotion of public meetings he drew on reserves of capital previously unsuspected and actually elicited in the time prescribed $15,000,000 more subscriptions than the authorized total of the loan before he could stop the wheels of his organization.

In short, the United States invented this method of floating war loans, as it invented such other appurtenances of war as the armored ship and the submarine.—Alexander Dana Noyes in Scribner's.

Many Names For Lilacs.

In England one never hears the lilac pronounced "laylock" now, according to the eighteenth century habit, but it is noted in "The Book of Flowers," by Katharine Tynan and Frances Maitland, that old fashioned people in Ireland still keep up that pronunciation. In Henry VIII.'s time, when the tree was new in England, it was called the "lilach."

Other names of it were pipe bush, pipe, blue pipe tree and pipe privit, on account of the hollow stalk. "Lily oak" is one variety of the spelling of "lilac," evidently to "make sense" of it. Among modern names are mentioned May flower (Devon and Cornwall), May lilies (Devon), Prince's feather (Cornwall), soldier's feathers (Somerset), duck's bills and oysters.—London Globe.

SUDDEN DEATH.

On Monday morning the citizens of Norwood were very much shocked to hear of the sudden death of Mrs. Wm. Webster, as a result of shock and burns experienced on the previous evening.

On Sunday evening, shortly after seven o'clock, Miss Kirkpatrick, who lives next door, noticed an unusual light in Mrs. Webster's kitchen, and immediately went out to investigate. Thinking the house was on fire she gave the alarm, but in a few minutes was horrified to see Mrs. Webster come out of the front door enveloped in flames. It seems that Mrs. Webster had unfortunately upset a lamp and, in trying to extinguish the flames, her clothes, which had been saturated with oil, caught fire. In her frenzy she jumped into a barrel of water in the woodshed which drove the flames up around her body. Find this action to only aggravate the situation she hastened outside and rolled about on the ground, calling for water to put the fire out. Miss Kirkpatrick and Mrs. Ivey secured quilts to wrap around her, just as assistance arived and she was taken into the house. Dr. Sutton and Dr. Ford were summoned and with the help of Miss Mary Nichol, a trained nurse, who is home on a visit, and who happened along at this most anxious hour, the sufferer was carefully treated, but the shock was so great and the burns so serious that she succumbed the following morning at 11 o'clock.

Deceased was in her seventy-sixth year and was formerly Miss Armstrong, of Otonabee, a sister of Mrs. Oliver Buck of Norwood.

She leaves to mourn her untimely loss, one daughter, Fanny, and three sons, William John of Banff, Alberta, Herbert and Franklin of Norwood.

The funeral will take place on Thursday afternoon from her late residence on Peterborough street, to the Norwood cemetery.

TIRED AND DISCOURAGED

Mrs. Warren Bandles, Rothesay, King County, N.B., "I have three small children and had to stay in the house all winter So when spring came I was all run down doing all my work and looking after the children. I felt all tired out, and looked on the gloomy side all the time I decided to try Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and the results were most satisfactory I feel fine now, and am recommending the Nerve Food to others."

GAVE HER DELICATE CHILD VINOL

It Built Him Up and Made Him Strong

Newaygo, Mich.—"My little boy was in a delicate, weak, emaciated condition and had a cough so we had to keep him out of school for a year. Nothing seemed to help him until Vinol was recommended, and the change it made in him was remarkable. It has built him up and made him strong so his cough is almost entirely gone. We can not recommend Vinol too highly."—Mrs. E. N. Hanlon.

Mothers of weak, delicate, ailing children are asked to try this famous cod liver and iron tonic on our guarantee. Children love to take it.

IF BACK HURTS BEGIN ON SALTS

Flush Your Kidneys Occasionally if You Eat Meat Regularly

No man or woman who eats meat regularly can make a mistake by flushing the kidneys occasionally, says a well-known authority. Meat forms uric acid which clogs the kidney pores so they sluggishly filter or strain only part of the waste and poisons from the blood, then you get sick. Nearly all rheumatism, headaches, liver trouble, nervousness, constipation, dizziness, sleeplessness, bladder disorders come from sluggish kidneys.

The moment you feel a dull ache in the kidneys or your back hurts, or if the urine is cloudy, offensive, full of sediment, irregular of passage or attended by a sensation of scalding, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any reliable pharmacy and take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia and has been used for generations to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to activity, also to neutralize the acids in urine so it no longer causes irritation, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which all regular meat eaters should take now and then to keep the kidneys clean and the blood pure, thereby avoiding serious kidney complications.

Bonds may be registered as to principal or as to principal and interest.

Scrip certificates, non-negotiable, or payable to bearer, in accordance with the choice of the applicant for registered or bearer bonds, will be issued after allotment in exchange for provisional receipts. When these scrip certificates have been paid in full, and payment endorsed thereon by the bank receiving the money, they may be exchanged for bonds, when prepared, with coupons attached, payable to bearer, or registered as to principal, or for fully registered bonds when prepared, without coupons, in accordance with the application.

Delivery of interim certificates and of definitive bonds will be made through the Chartered Banks.

Bearer bonds with coupons will be issued in denominations of $50., $100., $500., and $1,000. and may be registered as to principal only. Fully registered bonds, the interest on which is paid direct to the owner by Government cheque, will be issued in denominations of $1,000, $5,000 or any authorized multiple of $5,000.

Subject to the payment of 25 cents for each new bond issued, holders of fully registered bonds without coupons, will have the right to convert into bonds of the denomination of $1,000 with coupons, and holders of bonds with coupons will have the right to convert into fully registered bonds of authorized denominations without coupons, at any time, on application to the Minister of Finance.

Surrender of Bonds

Holders of Dominion of Canada Debenture Stock, due October 1st, 1919, and of bonds of the three preceding Dominion of Canada War Loan Issues, have the privilege of surrendering their bonds in part payment for subscriptions to bonds of this issue, under the following conditions:—

(The above will be accepted in part payment for bonds of any of the three maturities of this Issue.)

(These will be accepted in part payment for bonds of the 1937 maturity ONLY of this Issue.)

Bonds of the various maturities of this issue will, in the event of future issues of like maturity, or longer, made by the Government, other than issues made abroad, be accepted at par and accrued interest, as the equivalent of cash for the purpose of subscription to such issues.

Issue Price Par

Free from taxes—including any income tax—imposed in pursuance of legislation enacted by the Parliament of Canada.

Payment to be made as follows:

10% on December 1st, 1917 — 20% on March 1st, 1918
10% on January 2nd, 1918 — 20% on April 1st, 1918
20% on February 1st, 1918 — 20% on May 1st, 1918

A full half year's interest will be paid on 1st June, 1918

5.61% on the 20 year Bonds
5.68% on the 10 year Bonds
5.81% on the 5 year Bonds

All payments are to be made to a Chartered Bank for the credit of the Minister of Finance. Failure to pay any instalment when due will render previous payments liable to forfeiture, and the allotment to cancellation. Subscriptions accompanied by a deposit of 10% of the amount subscribed, must be forwarded through the medium of a Chartered Bank. Any branch in Canada of any Chartered Bank will forward subscriptions and issue provisional receipts.

In case of partial allotments the surplus deposit will be applied toward payment of the amount due on the January instalment.

Subscriptions may be paid in full on January 2nd, 1918, or on any instalment due date thereafter under discount at the rate of 5½% per annum. Under this provision payments of the balance of subscriptions may be made as follows:

If paid on January 2nd, 1918, at the rate of 89.10795 per $100.
If paid on February 1st, 1918, at the rate of 79.46959 per $100.

FEELING TURNS AGAINST REIGN OF BOLSHEVIKI

"Nicholas' Regime Never So Tyrannic," Say Banners of Parading Soldiers.

STOCKHOLM, Nov. 21.—Reports brought by the latest travellers to reach Tornea from Petrograd indicate that a revulsion of feeling is setting in against the Bolsheviki. Regiments of soldiers have paraded the streets of the Russian capital, bearing banners with inscriptions such as: "We want no separate peace," "Down with Petrograd's domination by a minority party tyranny," and "Nicholas' regime was never so tyrannic as the Bolsheviki regime."

The central committee of the anti-Bolsheviki Socialists has passed a resolution demanding liberty for the press, the dismissal of the Red Guard and the immediate cessation of fratricidal war. Maxim Gorky's paper and The Volna Narodna also demand that the Red Guard be disarmed.

American Minister Morris learns from a competent source that the food supply in Petrograd is ominously short and that the bread ration is now three-quarters of a Russian pound for two days.

Nearly one-third of the members of the executive committee formed by the Maximalists at the outbreak of the revolt have resigned and it is reported that the remainder have conferred dictatorial law-making powers on Nikolai Lenine, who is now issuing decrees altering the fundamental laws.

BOON TO BRITISH SAILORS.

At Last the Government Pays for Their Uniforms and Kits.

LONDON, Nov. 19.—By the grant of free uniform and kit to the enlisted men of the Navy, the British sailor obtains a concession which he has long sought and which has been the subject of hundreds of petitions sent from the lower deck to the Admiralty.

The British sailor always deemed it a great injustice that while the soldier and the marine wore a uniform purchased by the State, he must purchase his own clothing out of his small pay. What annoyed him still more was that, although he had to pay, his superiors often ordered the clothes at their own pleasure, poor Jack having no voice in the matter.

In the early days of the British Navy each captain was permitted to dress his crew to suit his own fancy. This custom did not wholly cease when a regulation uniform made its appearance, for different captains had different ideas of what constituted "uniform," with the result that a sailor who was transferred to a new ship often had to purchase several new items of clothing.

Although a British bluejacket's uniform appears very simple, the official list shows that he has about one hundred different articles in his wardrobe, all of which heretofore he had to buy. Henceforth his entire outfit will be issued to him at Government expense.

VENICE A WORLD POSSESSION

Of all the cities in the world, probably none, with the single exception of Rome, has a claim so good to exemption from the hazards and ravages of war as has Venice. In a peculiar way and degree, its unique manner of construction, its beauty, its romantic and historic associations, make it a treasure belonging to the whole civilized world even more than it is the property of its own citizens, or even of Italy.

The possibility, therefore, that it will be captured and occupied by armies of the nation which has shown so much, and such conclusive, indifference, while conducting war, to any other than military considerations, has caused something like general horror. This feeling is especially strong among those who know how easily Venice can be destroyed—how frail its ancient buildings are and how little would be required to bring the majority and the best of them down into the water which they have dominated through so many centuries.

Most unfortunately, Venice is a fortress and a naval station, and any resistance to the invaders that is made there will give them the excuse for bombarding it that has been lacking in many other places with like, though less, rights to immunity from attack. But no excuses will be accepted for the destruction of Venice.

It will be, if done, a culminating crime, never to be forgotten on any plea of military necessity. — New York Times.

COAL PRODUCTION REDUCED 2,000,000 TONS IN ONE WEEK.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Nov. 21.—Bituminous coal production in the United States was reduced approximately two million tons last week, the National Coal Association announced, by car shortage and railroad congestion. A request that coal shipments receive priority over all other commodities except food and Government orders, the statement said, has been placed by the association before the Government agencies dealing with the situation.

BRITISH GUNS HAMMERING CAMBRAI

Infantry Are Less Than Three Miles Away

Cambrai Under The Fire Of The British Field Guns

Railway Centre's Usefulness As a German Base is Gone---Village of Fontaine Notre Dame Less Than Three Miles From Cambrai Has Been Captured---All Britain is Celebrating the Great Victory To-Day

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

(By Ed. Keen.)

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

LONDON, November 22.—Cambrai, the centre of six railways, the chief depot city of the German communication lines in Central France, was under the fire of British field guns to-day. Its usefulness as a German base is done. Not only has the Hindenburg line been broken utterly, but the vitally important communication line has thus likewise been smashed.

All Britain celebrated to-day. There was a holiday spirit in every smiling face, just a little bit more reverence to the dun-clothed soldiers in the streets because their brothers were working a modern miracle of war over there, and the enthusiasm among the Tommies themselves. Newspapers of staid British journalistic history delved into remote type boxes to blare the victory across their pages in Americanesque "streamers." The victory was regarded as one of the greatest struggles of the war. It was achieved because British strategists had the courage to try something new in the catalogue of war. General Byng and his co-workers so minutely worked out the battle plan, that they had cavalry massed and ready for action. A few days ago a leader would have been dubbed insane had he figured on utilizing mounted forces against trench works. But Byng figured it, and he figured it right. The British cavalry did valiant service. Official reports to-day told of how in many cases the cavalry rode full tilt at the charge on German artillery, sabring gunners and capturing field pieces. Cavalry men were credited with the capture of Marcoing and Masnicres. Hundred of tanks participated in the battle, and once again those scaly monsters proved their worth.

WEATHER WAS BAD.

There apparently couldn't be a British drive without inclement weather. When the British started on Tuesday morning it was fine and clear, but to-day's front despatches reported cold incessant rains.

This is the first time in this war that any commander has been able to mass gigantic forces of men, of waregons, of such lumbering monstrosities as tanks, and of cavalry without the enemy discovering that manoeuvre. It was this blindness of the German army, coupled with one brief despatch from the front to-day, stating that only five German airplanes had been seen on the whole of the Hindenburg line—forty miles from Drocourt to St. Quentin, as the crow flies—that roused great interest here to-day. The blindness likewise indicated that the eyes of the powerful German spy system had been likewise put out. It seemed to be established to-day that the vaunted Hindenburg line was a mere papiermache bulwark against the British onslaught, that England's supremacy in the air has blinded the bocho view, that Teutonic espionage scheme can be frustrated, that the tanks are well night irresistible, that the boche is a lost individual when he is surprised, that Britain's military leaders are not afraid of bold Napoleonic strokes, even if they violate precedent.

London recalled to-day that while achieving this victory Britain is pressing the Germans hard in Flanders, General Allenby's forces are closing in on Jerusalem. British guns are thundering on their Italian front, and more British soldiers are on their way to aid Italy.

LONDON, November 22.—The village of Fontaine Notre Dame has been captured by the British in their new offensive, the War Office announces. Fontaine Notre Dame is 2 2/3 miles southwest of Cambrai, on the main road between Bapaume and Cambrai.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, November 22. — The French official announcement follows: "West of Miette River heavy artillery fighting continued through the night. The Germans delivered counter-attacks against our new positions south of Julvincourt. They were repulsed by our fire and cost the enemy serious losses. The number of prisoners taken in yesterday's operation has reached 400, of whom nine are officers.

"Several raids on our small posts near Berther north of Hill 344, and in the region of Eparges were without success. We carried out yesterday and last night several expeditions into the German lines."

Enemy Losses Heavier Around San Marino

ROME, November 22.—Sanguinary repulse of enemy attacks around San Marino in which Italian troops took prisoners and machine guns, was reported in to-day's official statement. Around Monte Pertica the Teutonic troops made three fruitless assaults. A number of attacks between the Brenta and the Piave Rivers were similarly unsuccessful in the face of the strong Italian defense.

On the Asiago Plateau in particular, the enemy made a vigorous assault early in the night against Casera, Meletta and Davant, and was driven back after Italian counter attacks. Around Monte Foutana and Secca the enemy's attacks carried him into a few outstanding elements, the War Office said.

San Marino is a small town on the River Brenta, about nine miles southwest of Fonzaso. It is not to be confused with the Republic of San Farino, which lies near the Adriatic coast considerably below the present fighting zone.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, November 22.—An official statement on aviation operations issued last night, said that only five German machines were seen on the Cambrai battle front Tuesday. British machines worked against difficulties of mist and rain, and eleven of them are missing.

Dukhonin Is Deposed

(Canadain Press Despatch).

LONDON, Nov. 22.—An offisi wireless statement from Petrograd to-day says that General Dukhonin has been deposed by the Council of People's Commissaires for "refusing to obey their orders by offering an armistice."

GERMAN INTRIGUE CAUSES NEW TROUBLES AMONG MEXICANS

Evidence Gathered by Secret Agents Show That Felix Diaz Was Offered Bribe to Lead an Insurrection While Villistas Are Active

HUNDREDS OF AGENTS

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

(Carl Groat.)

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22.— German money and intrigue are stirring trouble anew in Mexico, it was authoritatively stated to-day. Hundreds of Teuton agents, availing themselves of Mexican neutrality, are responsible for the recurrence of fighting and plotting by Villa, Capata, Palaez and Felix Diaz.

The real seriousness of the problem for the United States lies in the fact that the output of the Tampico and Tuxpan oil fields may be curtailed, while the difficulties near the border might ultimately divert some of the American's war strength from Europe. Evidence gathered by secret agents shows that Felix Diaz has been offered $300,000 to lead an insurrection in Sinalaca. Villistas are again on the rampage, and appear to be well armed and financed with Teuton money. Code messages in government possession indicate the hand of Germany in fomenting strikes in the oil district. American and Mexican authorities here, however, are hopeful the situation will steady soon.

Nearly $150,000,000 Already Subscribed To Victory Loan

Canadian Press Despatch:

TORONTO, Nov. 22.—The total amount reported subscribed to the Victory Loan, up till 10 a.m. to-day, was $138,315,500, but the officials say that the total amount really subscribed to date is about $150,000,000, or half the objective for the Dominion. An important subscription to-day was for ten thousand dollars worth of the bonds for the American Federation of Labour. Samuel Gompers, the president, accompanied the subscription with a letter heartily endorsing the loan and its objects. Other big subscriptions to-day were the Supreme Court of Ontario one million, and the T. Eaton Co. one million.

PETERBORO HARD HIT

Sergt. Wm. Shepherdson One of the Original 2nd Battalion Men, Pte. John Doherty and Pte. John Gifford Have Been Killed

TO-DAY'S MILITARY NEWS

KILLED IN ACTION.

Sergt. Wm. Shepherdson, 2nd Battalion, 13 Hart Avenue.

Pte. John Doherty, formerly of the 139th Battalion, 466 Driscoll Terrace.

Pte. John Gifford, formerly of the 93rd Battalion, 266 Simcoe Street.

DIED OF WOUNDS.

Pte. Jack Tutton, formerly of the 93rd Battalion, Machine Gun Section.

Pte. W. B. Elliott, Canadian Army Medical Corps, Cavan.

WOUNDED.

Pte. Adam Sodum, formerly of the 93rd Battalion, Peterborough.

Pte. J. Little, Infantry, Havelock.

Sergt. John T. Hardwicke, 469 Cross street.

SERGT. WM. SHEPHERDSON.

Sergt. Wm. Shepherdson, one of the few original Peterborough members of the 2nd Battalion still left on duty with the famous Eastern Ontario unit, is officially reported killed in action on 6th November, the sad news having been received at his home at 153 Hart Avenue this morning.

Sergt. Shepherdson enlisted here early in August, 1914, with the 57th Regiment's First Contingent quota, and went overseas as a member of A Company of the 2nd Battalion under Major Bennett. He won his sergeant's stripes in France, where he saw much hard fighting. He was wounded once, but returned to the firing line, and finally, after many months' service, he has made the supreme sacrifice. Before enlisting Sergt. Shepherdson was employed by the G.T.R. The news will cause grief to a large circle of friends.

PTE. JOHN DOHERTY.

An official message to Mrs. Bridget Doherty, 466 Driscoll Terrace, to-day conveyed the sad news that her son, Pte. John Doherty is officially reported killed in action on 7th November. Pte. Doherty went to Cobourg in the spring of 1916, and enlisted with the 139th Battalion, going overseas with that unit and being transferred to another Canadian battalion in France. His aged mother and the bereaved family will have the sympathy of the community.

PTE. JOHN GIFFORD.

Official word was received to-day that No. 195644, Pte. John Gifford, of Peterborough, who enlisted here in January, 1916, with the 93rd Battalion, and went overseas with that unit, was killed in action on 6th November. He had been in France for some time, havnig been transferred in a draft, and the tragic intelligence that he has fallen in the fight for liberty will be a shock to the community.

PTE. JACK TUTTON.

Word has been received here that Pte. Jack Tutton, a well-known member of the machine gun section, died of wounds on 8th November. Pte. Tutton came to Peterborough from Port Hope in September, 1915, and enlisted with the 93rd Battalion. Later on, when the machine gun section of the battalion was organized,

LENINE SENT TO RUSSIA BY THE HUN SPY SYSTEM

French Government Has Absolute Proof of This Fact—The Russian Authorities Are Proposing an Immediate Armistice With the Enemy

NEGOTIATIONS OPENED

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

PARIS, Nov. 22. — Absolute proof that Nicholai Lenine, the Bolsheviki dictator at Petrograd, was sent to Russia by the German spy system and is a creature of the German propaganda servide, is in the hands of the French government. This announcement was made to-day, on receipt of news from Petrograd that Lenine and his co-parter in the Bolsheviki revolt, Leon Trovsky, had sent to all the allied diplomats in the capital, an invitation proposing an immediate armistice as the overture to democratic peace parleys.

NEGOTIATIONS OPENED.

Canadian Press Despatch:

PETROGRAD, Wednesday, Nov. 21.—The Russian government yesterday ordered General Dukhonin, commander-in-chief, to open negotiations for an armistice with the commanders of enemy armies. The proposal to negotiate peace was officially conveyed to the ambassadors of allied nations at Petrograd.

The formal offer of an armistice to all belligerents, which the all Russian Workmen's and Soldiers' Congress proposes to make shortly, is not intended to forecast any effort towards separate peace, says an official statement here to-day.

Summits Are Captured

(Canadain Press Despatch).

BERLIN, Nov. 22.—The summits of Monte Fontana and Monte Spinucoia, along the northern Italian front, between the Brenta and Piave Rivers, have been captured, it is announced officially.

SEVEN DESPERATE ENEMY ATTACKS ARE THROWN BACK

Every Inch of the Italian Line Along the Piave Holds Firm Although Austro-Germans Are Bringing Up Masses of Reserves

FIGHTING IN MOUNTAINS

(Special to the Toronto Star and the Peterborough Examiner).
(By John Hearley).

ROME, Nov. 22.—Seven desperate enemy attacks during the past 56 hours against the Italian defenders between the Piave and the Branta Rivers have been thrown back. Every inch of the Italian line holds firm. This news from the battle front today gave Rome its first chance for quiet jubilation since the dark day when the Austrian and German hordes swept over Gorizia.

Every hour gained in the holding of the Piave line, it was declared, means the capacity for resistance is increased, as reinforcements are on the way to the front arrive. At Bowegiave the Italians pierced dykes, flooding much of the ground in this section.

The enemy was reported to-day to be preparing further heavy attacks north of the mountain lines.

MASSED ATTACKS.

(Canadian Press Despatch).

ITALIAN ARMY HEADQUARTERS, Nov. 21.—The greatest mass attack which the enemy has made is in progress along the upper Piave River at the point where it bends to the north-east into the Belluno Alps. As the action proceeds the enemy is bringing up fresh masses of his reserves, including picked troops of the Prussian Guards, besides some of the best German troops drawn from the Western and Russian front. He also has 20,000 mountaineers from

In Some Sections of the Battle Front the Fighting is Practically in the Open—Intricate Trench System Stormed and Enemy is Taken Completely by Surprise

ENEMY IN A PANIC

(By William Philip Simms.)

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES BEYOND THE HINDENBURG LINE, Nov. 22.—Victorious Britain "carried on" to-day with her triumphant smashing of the Hindenburg lines. Tanks, cavalary, infantry, all were closing steadily around Cambrai, the great war machine rumbling over the enemy just as the tanks first crushed their way through the German lines. The Tommies are now almost within grasp of the German depot of Cambrai as this despatch is written. Every hour makes the British victory more gigantic in its scope, more astounding in its conception and execution.

FIGHTING IN OPEN.

In some sections of the battle front, the fighting is practically in the open. The vast and intricate trench defences of the Hindenburg line, and its subsidiary lines, have in many places been stormed and the enemy forced from the defences into the open. Literally delirious with joy, five hundred civilians repatriated to France by the British stroke, came back from the front to-day. They had been hurriedly removed from Masnierel to Gouzeaucourt by the Germans and then abandoned. At Gouzeaucourt they welcomed the sweating Tommies as they streamed into town. With their stories and with the tales wrung from the German prisoners still dazed with the surprise of the British blow, it was possible to-day to piece together some idea of conditions in the luxurious and —supposedly— impregnable German positions of the Hindenburg line when Gen. Byng loosed his surprise party.

ENEMY IN A PANIC.

Not a German had a knowledge of the attack until the tanks loomed above their heads. Then they literally "blew up" in a panic. French civilians in the towns just behind the lines, described officers and men as running around "like chickens with their heads cut off." The whole army quivered and shook with the suddenness of the thing. The great ghost-like steel monsters that battered through cement and earth and human walls were fearsome giants. The swearing, yelling fiends who followed them were gnomes who suddenly sprang to life out of the ground. It must have been hours before this palsy of surprise, of fear, and of what almost amounted to superstitious panic that something supernatural had occurred, passed away among the Germans. British "moppers up" told of how men from whose eyes the lethargy of sleep had hardly passed, blinked, dazedly, crowded out of their dugouts, or how, uncomprehending that it was reality and not dreams, they dully let the great tanks crush them flat or furiously gleaming British bayonets find their mark.

SURPRISE WAS COMPLETE.

In the trenches and dugouts blankets and cots were still warm from the sleepers' bodies, or breakfast tables for officers, daintily set, still smoked appetizingly. A tangle of personal belongings in line after line of dugouts showed that sleepers in bunks, and on cots had leaped to their feet in the

THURSDAY, NOV. 22, 1917

LET US HAVE THE FACTS.

The Globe, in an article under the heading, "Let us Have the Figures," points out that—

"Out of 46,990 men enlisted in the Province (of Quebec) under the system of voluntary recruiting, 35,000 were furnished by the comparatively small minority of English-speaking residents in that province, and only 11,988 by the French-Canadian majority."

These figures may be correct, as figures, but what is the fact as to the reason of this deplorable condition the Globe laments?

The Globe, like the old and new admirers of the Borden government in its new form, ignores the causes and instead of arguing from the causes of the recruiting failure in Quebe, demands the figures, after the thing is over. It says—

"After the registration totals in the various provinces are complete, and the appeals for exemption have been disposed of, the government should publish officially a statement showing the situation as it really stands. The figures would tell the people of English-speaking Canada in no doubtful way why Quebe will send an almost solid delegation to Ottawa against the enforcement of the Military Service Act."

But will the government respond officially? Will the government do this? It does not need these figures to show why "Quebec will send almost a solid delegation against the enforcement of the Military Service Act."

We have other ways of knowing why Quebec will, if it does, send a solid delegation. We know that there has been a compact between the Borden government—now re-named the Union government—and the Nationalists of Quebec. We know that the Borden government countenanced, encouraged and officially recognized and rewarded the Nationalists, who hold the doctrine that Canada, and, especially, Quebec, holds no responsibility to Great Britain—has no duty to help in the wars of the Empire; that Quebec and Canada are not bound to participate in the war in any way, or in anything represented by the spirit of the Military Service Act.

Nationalism, strengthened by the election of thirty members to parliamen, as holders of the doctrine of no participation in Britain's wars, and, at the same time, as supporters of the Borden government, has by the aid and encouragement — material, moral (or immoral), and official—of the Borden government, thoroughly corrupted Quebec—preached disloyalty, preached opposition to recruiting; preached no duty to fight for Britain; and the failure of recruiting, the failure of the Military Service Act, is directly due to the evil work of Nationalism.

And Nationalism is directly due for its existence, in organized form and power for evil, to the Borden government. Nationalism first showed its head in 1910, in opposition to the Laurier policy of a Canadian navy. The Nationalists declared deadly hostility to that—it involved conscription, and the "disemboweling of French-Canadians in British battleships."

The Borden party saw in Nationalism, a good chance to "kill Laurier," and it took the side of Nationalism, and declared against a Canadian navy, which Sir Robert supported in eloquent speeches till he saw that it displeased the Nationalists, who were out to "kill Laurier."

Then to please the Nationalists he adopted the Dreadnought policy. That only meant spending Canadian money and did not provide sending Canadians to man the ships.

Then Sir Robert Borden, who is so keen for sending Canadian manhood to the front—where it should go—refused a naval policy that demanded men, because his Nationalist colleagues and supporters did not believe in fighting for England on sea or land.

And Sir Robert has the same delicate consideration for the Nationalists, and caters to the popular sentiment of Quebec, which has been poisoned against war help by the combined and coordinated agencies of the Borden government and the Nationalists—including the Military Service Act.

As Mr. Hall showed in a statement in the Examiner yesterday, while the Union or Borden government is enforcing the Military Service Act to the hilt in all the other provinces, he is toning it down almost to zero in Quebec.

The Nationalist deputy speaker of his government Mr. Rainville, told the people of Quebec that "farmers and factory hands" would be exempted—he had "succeeded in winning" that point, and that instructions had been given accordingly.

The result of the exemption tribunals in Quebec, furnished by government journals show that the Borden-Union Government's Nationalist deputy-speaker was right when he said that he had got his way—that instructions had been given accordingly. These reports show that in Quebec—in cities, 96, and in the country, 98—out of every hundred appearing before the tribunals are exempted.

At that rate, out of the 100,000 to be raised by the Military Service Act, Quebec will furnish only about 2 per cent., or 2,000.

The Union government is carrying out the same policy and practice it adopted under the name of the Borden government.

To the result of its alliance with, and encouragement of, the Nationalists in killing recruiting in Quebec, to the point that only two per cent. of the population of Quebec voluntarily enlisted out of every hundred, as compared with nearly seven out of one hundred in the rest of Canada—to this the Borden government now adds a form of favouritism and concession to Nationalist sentiment, that will result in the Military Service net in Quebec catching only two out of every hundred men presumably eligible to serve.

The Globe needn't, and the country needn't, wait for "the figures" to know the reasons of Quebec's failure in recruiting and in supply of men by conscription. The Borden government by its alliance with the Nationalists, is the cause.

Now the Borden government, under the guise of a Union government, is applying in Quebec in the enforcement of conscription, the same policy of favouritism and condonation of treason, that killed the recruiting spirit in Quebec and set the populace in hostile ranks against military service.

The fact that the "Union" government permits the administration of the Military Service Act in Quebec to exempt 98 out of a hundred applicants for exemption, will not give Ontario and other provinces a high sense of the equitable application of the Military Service Act.

The need is urgent for helping the war by subscribing to the Victory Loan.

As To Soldiers' Voting In The Pending War-Time Election

A great deal of confusion seems to exist regarding the manner in which the soldiers' vote will be cost in this election, and this is not unnatural, seeing that this is the first occasion on which such a vote has been provided for in a Dominion Franchise Act. Because soldiers may in many cases not know who the candidates are, Sir Robert Borden has the power to designate in each constituency the Unionist candidate who is to receive the votes cast by the soldiers, while Sir Wilfrid Laurier has a like power with regard to the votes cast for the opposition. The soldier's ballot also gives him the chance of voting for the Labour candidate, for the Independent candidate, or for an individual whose name may be written on the ballot.

As for the provision respecting the allocation of the soldiers' votes, it will be best, perhaps, to quote the actual text. Section 3 of the Act, which deals with this matter, reads as follows:

"1. Every military elector shall be qualified and entitled to vote at a general election.

"2. If he can state the electoral district wherein he last continuously resided during at least four months of the twelve months immediately preceding his appointment, enlistment, enrollment or calling out on active service, or so particularly specify a place or places within an electoral district whereat during such period of time he so resided, that such electoral district can therefrom be ascertained, he shall be deemed an elector of the electoral district so stated, or to be ascertained, and his vote shall be applied thereto.

"3. If he cannot state or so specify an electoral district or place wherein he has so resided for the time and within the period mentioned in subsection two, but can state an electoral district or so specify a place within Canada where he has at any time resided, he shall be deemed an elector of the electoral district so stated or made ascertainable and his vote shall be applied thereto.

"4. If he cannot, because of non-residence, or otherwise, so state or specify, he shall be deemed an elector of, and his vote shall be applied to, such electoral district as he may indicate."

The clause which has created the most adverse criticism is that which gives a soldier who has no definite place of residence in Canada, and perhaps has never resided in the country at all, the right to designate where he shall vote. It is an extraordinary power and can only be justified by an extraordinary situation. It is conceded, we presume, that every man who fights for Canada has properly a say in how the country shall be governed, and if this be done in certain cases a privilege such as that provided for in Section 4 must be given. It is one, however, which is susceptible of abuse, and ought to be safeguarded to the utmost possible extent.—Brantford Expositor.

WILL ADDRESS LONDON MEETING

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

TORONTO, Nov. 22.—Sir Robert Borden was at home to many personal and political friends at the Queen's Hotel to-day. He spent the morning quietly after the big meeting in Massey Hall last night, and received no public deputations. Several of the local Unionist leaders were in consultation with him in regard to campaign matters. The Premier expressed pleasure at the great reception given to himself and Hon. N. W. Rowlel last night.

Unionist leaders to-day regretted that an overflow meeting had not been arranged for. Hundreds of men and women stood in the rain for hours in a vain attempt to get into Massey Hall and hear the two Union Government leaders.

Hon. C. C. Ballantyne, Minister of Marine and Fisheries, arrived in the city to-day and joined the Premier. They left on the 1.25 train for London, where they speak to-night.

ENLARGEMENT SALE TIPS

Grafton lets you in on the ground floor and in that way Saves you $5 to $15 on Overcoats and Suits

By reason of the fact that we make the clothing and sell direct to our customers, we have reduced prices $5.00, $10.00 and $15.00 on Overcoats and Suits, and at the same time kept the QUALITY in the MERCHANDISE. That's the whole Grafton plan in a nutshell.

We've got nothing to say about the methods of other stores, but there's no getting away from the fact that with our clothing factories in Hamilton and Dundas, employing the highest skilled labour the market affords, we are able to undersell the ordinary stores twenty-five per cent.

Our principle of doing business has proved itself RIGHT—men believe in our plan—they know our system is sound, sensible, prudent.

Our clothes are designed for discriminating men and young men—there is about them that degree of distinction that men of good taste demand. There is a definite indication of real "class" about them. The tailoring is superior, the fabrics are are unusual—the general "make-up" is excellent. We're selling these clothes in a big, prosperous way—"from maker to wearer" — to sensible men, and young men.

Every clothing need of every man can be provided for at Grafton's for less than you'd have to pay anywhere else in the city.

RICHARD HALL & SON LIMITED

THE BRITISH FRONT FROM WEEK TO WEEK

By FRANK FOX R. F. A.

(By Frank Fox, R.F.A.)

The past week (this refers to three weeks ago) on the British front in Flanders, according to the official report of the United States Secretary for War, has been marked by "substantial gains of important strategic value. . . .driving into the heart of the German resistance in the West". It has been a week of a succession of small advances against strenuous resistance on the part of the Germans, and in spite of atrocious conditions of ground and weather. Inspired by memories of the heroic deeds of their comrades in Flanders three years ago, when the German rush to the French channel ports was held back by a devotion equal to that of the Greeks at Thermopylae, the British forces this year marked the anniversary of the first batle of Ypres with an offensive first battle of Ypres with an offensive which seemed to veto any miltary movement whatsoever. French and Belgian forces have co-operated on our left flank and the net result has been a substantial gain of the prized ridge positions, particularly Crest Farm, overlooking Passchendaele and Bellevue Spur, also a further envelopment of the German fortifications in Houthulst Forests. German reports have sought to hide the enemy's discomfort with tales of wonderful defences of positions, which the British did not attack, and a brilliant counter attacks turning the British troops out of positions which they had never occupied. But the substantial truth is summarised in the American report already quoted.

The Germans have fought fiercely during the week, especially a Bavarian Division and the German Marines, but the British soldiers coming back from the line have never had a word to say of difficulties from shell or machine gun fire. The main enemy is the mud. Over the dreadful morass of the battlefield pitted with deep shell-holes, the weather has spread now a smooth coat of slimy mud. This looks to be the thin film over a firm surface, such a film as might cover a London street on a drizzling day, when traffic was heavy. But beneath the film is a mass of glutinous mud freely pitted with shell-holes full of slime and deep enough in some cases to drown a man. To cover 100 yards an hour is counted fair progress in this morass. No man dares to walk alone. Every man must be ready ot rescue his neighbour from a shell-hole and every man may be sure that he will at some point need rescue himself. Transport goes through this morass a few yards at a time, the brave little mules doing their best, but having to call upon human aid for rescue now and again when even the sure road instinct of a mule is not proof against slipping into a shell hole. In some cases men bogged in thick mud, have had had to be rescued by parties of menworking with ropes and duck-boards.

The taking of Polderheek Chateau was one of the hardest tasks of the week. The Chateau itself has long since been razed to the ground by shell fire, but its cellars had been made the nucleus of a formidable fort surrounded by pill-boxes and sheltering a great concentration of machine guns. Crawling through the mud, our bombers reduced the pill-boxes one after another and finally got to low walls of the concreted main fort, where they began to drop bombs through the loop-holes. Then the survivors of the garrison, three officers, and 63 men surrendered. A vigorous German counter-attack, which showed the value of the enemy put on this fort, was beaten off, mainly by the artillery fire.

The capture of Bellevue Spur was a wonderful achievement. The advance upon it began before 6 a.m., and was held up during the afternoon by a heavy machine-gun barrage. The British troops waited with fortitude in a line of shell-ponds until the fall of night and then went forward in the dark—a deed of fine courage, considering the nature of the country. It had its reward. The spur was taken by 8 p.m. Canadian troops, troops of the British Naval Division and Lancashire Battalions, shared in the honour of this exploit. Elsewhere in the field London Territorials did great work on this day.

That the Germans are making every effort to make a stout defence of these ridges is clear and there were no weaklings encountered by the British troops on the further edge of the morasses. But nevertheless practically all the German prisoners captured showed a deep dejection. Apparently their Command now can only give them the comfort that if they hold out long enough the U-boats will win the war for them; and that is cold comfort for fighting troops who find themselves faced by a confident and on-presing foe. The effect of German reductions in the soldier's rations is clearly seen in the statements of prisoners. The food question is always uppermost in their minds, and most of them seem to know that the German position in regard to food supplies is grave.

During the month of October the British Army in France taken 9,125 prisoners, including 242 officers, 15 guns, 431 machine guns, and 42 trench mortars. These captures of course do not represent the full extent of the military advantages gained for in the sea of mud the bringing in of captures has been very difficult. Very many Germans have been lost through being drowned in the mud whilst attempting to flee. Moreover the German infantry in the pill-boxes often did not surrender, but attempted to run back to a rear line of pill-boxes when hand-to-hand fighting threatened. Perhaps that seemed safer to them than to go back as prisoners across the dreadful country through which the British had advanced. But it led to fewer prisoners and greater German casualties.

Youkon Tragedy Of Boot Lace

Jap Will Hang on Friday for Murdering His Wife.

OTTAWA, Nov. 21.—The hanging of Rekuishi Yoshioka on Friday will bring to an end the remarkable case of the "tragedy of the boot lace."

It opened with the advent of Yoshioka, a Jap, and his wife, in the Yukon, to start a fox farm near Dawson, but closed to-day with the confirmation of death sentence passed on the Jap for the murder of his wife.

Yoshioka was in partnership with an Indian, Percy James. One day, in the summer, it was announced that the Indian and the Jap's wife were missing. A little later the Jap came along with the story that he had found the body of his wife in the bush. She had been shot dead by a shotgun. The inference was, according to the story told by Yoshioka, that the Indian had killed the woman and then made his escape.

The search for the Indian was about to be given up when a retired officer of the Mounted Police, living in Dawson, determined to join in the chase on his own account. At several points he found the moss pressed flat, as though a weight had been dragged over it. He followed the slight trail, and found that it led was growing there, and over it a tree to a depression near the river moss was planted. Suspicious, the officer examined the ground closely. He thought the moss had been there but for a short time . He was convinced that the tree had been but recently planted. He notified his old colleagues on the Force. Together they dug out the tree, and underneath found the Indian's body.

The Indian's Endicott shoes were without their laces, and it was from here that the first trail led back to the Jap. The vendor of the boots was found. He asserted that the boots were of a peculiar type, that the laces were supplied only with the boots, that only one pair had been sold within a recent date—the pair bought by the Indian. In the Jap's house were found a pair of laces corresponding.

THE KNITTING BRIGADE..

Up and down through our country wide,
(Clickety-clack! clickety-clack!)
Needless are plying busily,
(Over and back, over and back!)
The stay-at-homes and the travellers, too—
Go where you will, they're everywhere,
Knitting away with khaki wool,
Or gray, for a boy gone "Over There"!

Needless of amber, bone or steel,
Needless fashioned of silver, gold,
Wielded by soft and slender hands,
Or work-worn fingers, gnarled and old;
Mothers and sisters, sweethearts, wives—
Every one of us boasts a pair!
Ours is the task all women love,
To hearten their men gone "Over There"!

A bag is the sign of the knitting band,
Silk or cotton, or cretonne gay,
And hidden safe in its cavern folds
Are needless and worsted tucked away.
So we knit and purl—(but, novices,
Of the perilous Kitchener heel, beware!)
Doing this service thankfully,
For the sake of one gone "Over There"!

—Mazie V. Caruthers, in N.Y. Times.

MUSIC IN THE HOME

SHOWING MORE RESPECT FOR MUSIC.

I is not so long ago that our choirs sang the anthem while the collection was being taken. In addition to the accompaniment by the organ, the anthem had the click of the coins, the rustle of the envelopes, and the murmuring of the voices of the congregation in subdued conversation to support it.

But now, more respect is paid to music. If Mr. Somebody wants to ask his wife who that is in the Smith pew, or Mrs. Somebody Else desires to tell her husband that next spring she wants a hat like the lady four seats ahead and five sittings to the right, or if an affectionate young couple wish to whisper a moment, they do these things while the organist is playing softly a piece, upon which he has spent considerable practice so as to play it in a suitable way for just that purpose.

The rattling of silver, and the quiet thud of the heavily laden envelopes are heard above the whisperings, but when the plates are deposited at the front of the church, silence again reigns, and the anthem proceeds. That is as it should be. The taking of the collection and the singing at the same time were fundamentally wrong.

Then, too, at the concert, late arrivals in well regulated halls wait until the number being given is finished before an usher will show them to their seats. The persons who make it a point to be on time are not asked to have their enjoyment of any number on the programme spoiled by the interruptions of late comers. In such ways as these we have made a decided advance in the respect shown to music and in the reasonable consideration accorded church and concert goers.

THE VIOLIN WITH THE COUNTERFEIT LABEL.

A party who went into a second-hand store purchased an old or rather an old-looking violin bearing a label that was intended to establish beyond the shadow of a doubt that it was the product of a famous maker of bygone years, afterwards found he had been nipped in the deal. He expressed himself in statements of generous length on the shame, the outrage, the crime it was to affix bogus labels to a fiddle.

"As far as I can find," said he, "no member of Parliament in any country has considered the counterfeiting of violins of sufficiet importance to advocate the passing of a law to make it illegal." Perhaps there is some law under which the bogus labelling of violins migh be punished, such a misrepresentation, but, be that as it may, anyone wanting an old fiddle would surely make the purchase through some reputable store where they know the ins and outs of this trade. The desire to get something old and valuable for almost nothing is the twin-brother of the gambling spirit in man, and it sends him to the second-hand store, the pawnshop, or the auction sale for it. This is not only true of violins, but also antique furniture, curios, and locked grips with unknown contents.

But a great deal of the mischief has already been done. There have been scattered throughout the world many violins with fraudulent labels. These imitations are gradually acquiring signs of age that can easily fool the uninitiated. The sure way to get the genuine article and avoid imitation is by making use of the knowledge of a reputable dealer.

ANTHEM COMPETITION.

The American Guild of Organists announce the annual competition for the Clemson Gold Medal (value $50) and an additional prize of $50, offered by the H. W. Gray Co., of New York. All composers in the United States and Canada are eligible to compete. The text which must be in English, may be selected by the composer, but the anthem must be of reasonable length; that is, from six to eight octave pages, and must have a free accompaniment. The manuscript, signed with a nom de plume or motto, and with the same inscription upon a sealed envelope containing the composer's name and address, should be mailed to 90 Trinity Place, New York, not later than 1st December, 1917. The adjudicators will be Walter J. Clemson, R. Huntington Woodman, and Samuel A. Baldwin, and the successful anthem will be published by the Gray Compay.

The Clemson Competition has become a fixture in the United States and a number of the winning compositions are of high distinction. These prize anthems should be examined by intending competitors, that they may understand the principles which the judges have set before them. So far no Canadian musician has been successful. Whether or not any have competed is not known. This ought to be Canada's year.

ENGLISH OR ITALIAN.

Teachers of singing frequently declare that talian songs and arias are most valuable for voice training. Accordingly, at a recital one is almost sure to hear some young woman warbling neo-latin vowels and mispronouncing such consonantal sounds as the "double-c." Certainly the Italian vowels are admirable for the voice, but after all, most of our English vowels are broad and vocally grateful. Only our consonants are difficult, and curiously enough, consonants are as much neglected as the bridegroom at a wedding. That explains why the chorus of a musical comedy must be lavishly supplied with costumes. Since no one in the audience can hear the words—since the ear is balked—let the eye have something to do.

NOVEL CHRISTMAS CLUB OPENS TO EXAMINER READERS ON MONDAY

Club of 50 to Secure Victrolas with Unusual Privileges---Membership Only $1.00

An Invitation That Emanates From Cressman's Home of the Victrola

On Friday morning a unique Christmas Club will be opened to Examiner readers based on the power of co-operative buying.

It is a Victrola Club with a limited membership of 50, the members of which will enjoy attractive privileges and advantages not possible at any other time or to anyone but a member.

When a large number of people buy the same thing, at the same time, from the same source they profit by co-operation. So it is with this Club. This Club is an actual form of co-operative buying, through which attractive privileges and advantages are made possible in the purchase of the world famous Victrolas. Any responsible person may apply for membership, the membership fee being $1, but this fee is refunded to you if you do not buy, or if your application is rejected, and is credited to your account if you do buy.

Anyone paying the $1.00 fee and joining the Club, has the privilege of selecting his instrument before December 15th, 1917. After making his selection he commences the small Club payments, and the Victrola is delivered to him a few days before Christmas.

Members do not have to make a cash payment, excepting the membership fee; they have the complete variety of Victrolas carried by The Cressman Co., Limited, to choose from.

Members secure their Victrolas at the cash price, but with time payment privileges. The payments are arranged from $1.00 to $3.00 weekly, and the amount members pay weekly depends upon the Victrola which they select. These terms are in most cases, lower than the regular terms. The Club members do not have to pay the usual interest charges for time payments.

If a Club member is taken sick or is temporarily unemployed, the privilege of half payments is granted for as many months as he has previously paid in full. If at any time within ten days after the Victrola is delivered a member becomes dissatisfied with it he can return it and get back every cent he has paid, less cartage charges or necessary repair costs.

Every instrument is guaranteed to give entire satisfaction, but if at any time within three months a member desires a better Victrola, he can exchange his for any new Victrola or other make of equal value. Records are usually sold for cash, but the Club members get six for which they pay in the regular Club payments.

All anyone has to do to join this Club is to 'phone or call at the "Christmas Club" Headquarters, and they will supply you with membership blank and illustrated catalogue. By signing the membership blank and returning it to them with the Club membership fee of $1.00 you will be entitled to all the Club privileges, provided you select your instrument before December 15th.

Although you may possibly have until December 15th to join the Club, the Club will be closed immediately 50 members enroll, so the wisest plan is to call early in the week, and get full particulars and membership blank for the Club.

Music & Drama

THE BIRD OF PARADISE.

Two crowded houses greeted the celebrated play, "The Bird of Paradise" at the Grand Opera House yesterday, afternoon and evening, the day's business being undoubtedly a new record for the local amusement house. The production, seen here for the first time, although many in the audience had seen it in other cities, made a lasting impression upon the audience. Briefly it is a story within a story, dealing with the lives of two men and two women, one woman of high ideals who gradually falls through the seductiveness of the tropics, the other a creature of circumstances, who from a drunk sotten, beach-comber is finally lifted out of the rut into which he has fallen by the efforts of a young American girl. The play was written by Richard Walton Tully, who has told his story with unflagging interest and with a satire of a deep, true, kindly sort. It is said that every character has been picked from life and that conditions in the Hawaiin Islands are clearly and vividly portrayed. Local colour is added by a group of Hawaiin singers, who are frequently heard in their native songs.

The part of Luana, the little Hawaiin girl who sacrifices her life for love was magnificently presented by Celete Scudden, whose work throughout in one of the best leading roles on the stage was beyond criticism. She made Launa stand out as a real being who held the hearts of her audience from her first appearance. The supporting company was thoroughly adequate. John Waller gave a realistic presentation of the role of the beach comber, especially in the first act, and John Warner's work as Paul Wilson, was convincing and impressive. The "Captain Hatch" of John Milton was another clever piece of acting.

Scenically, "The Bird of Paradise" was a masterpiece of stage craft. The settings throughout were magnificent, and the closing scene, "The House of Everlasting Fire" was a spectacular climax.

WILL FORCE STUDENTS TO COMPLY WITH ACT.

Kingston, November 22. — The Senate of Queen's University has issued a notice insisting that all students in the university either present their service receipts or exemption claims under the Military Service Act or explain why they have not fulfilled the regulations of the Act. Men under twenty years of age and those over thirty four years of age or married men or men of American or foreign parentage must state this fact in a letter to the Senate before November 26. This is part of a plan to keep "tab" on all students lest they be not acquainted with the provisions of the Act and anyone not complying with the request will not be allowed to attend lectures after December 1st.

NEARING CULMINATION.

ITALIAN HEADQUARTERS, Nov. 21.—(By Associated Press). — The battle in the mountainous region in the north, between the Piave and Brenta Rivers, is nearing its culmination. It centres at Monte Grappa, and has become a struggle of giants. It is now clear that, notwithstanding the great number of troops employed by the enemy and his advantages of terrain, he is able to advance only very slowly, now that he is not being assisted by the element of surprise, and by treason and other circumstances which favoured him at first. Even if the Italians should be obliged to abandon the Piave River line, they may be expected to fall back more slowly and offer still more tenacious opposition.

BIG PARTY OF RETURNED MEN COMING

Seventeen Peterboro Soldiers Invalided From Overseas Will Arrive This Evening

His Worship Mayor Duffus received a wire from Kingston to-day stating that seventeen Peterborough returned soldiers, invalided home from overseas service, would reach here on the 5.30 G.T.R. train this evening, and preparations are being made to give them a welcome.

Sergt. A. Ringer.
Sergt. A. Stevens.
Corp. B. Cullen.
Pte. S. Ballard.
Pte. W. Drain.
Pte. L. Dunstan.
Pte. W. Edwards.
Pte. W. Evans.
Pte. L. Gibson.
Pte. R. Godfrey.
Pte. W. Johnston.
Pte. M. Killingbeck.
Pte. J. Mackim.
Pte. C. Mongour.
Pte. J. Salter.
Pte. A. Tamblin.
Pte. J. Turner.

Yesterday afternoon Ptes. Charles Cheverell and J. M. Luther, who went overseas with the 93rd Battalion, and Pte. Veaman, returned home and were met by civic representatives.

he became a member of the section and went overseas as a machine gunner. Afterwards he was transferred to another Canadian infantry battalion at the Front. Pte. Tutton was connected with the Port Hope Hockey Club before coming to Peterborough, and had made many friends here as a result, while the number was augmented during the time that he was in training here. Pte. Tutton's mother is at present living in Toronto. A brother who preceded Pte. Tutton overseas was reported missing early last year, and afterwards was officially presumed dead.

PTE. W. B. ELLIOTT.

Pte. W. B. Elliott (better known as Bert), eldest son of the late Thomas Elliott, of Cavan Township, is officially reported died of wounds. Pte. Elliott enlisted with the Canadian Army Medical Corps in Calgary in April, 1916, went to France early in 1917, took part in the recent fighting around Passchendaele, and was seriously wounded on 5th November. Another message came that his wounds had proved fatal. He was an upright Christian young man, was known and respected throughout the country where he lived. Some years ago he went West and took up a section of land and made a home for himself. Prior to enlisting, he was engaged as a salesman for a firm in Calgary.

Pte. W. B. Elliott is survived by four brothers—Lorne, who resided in Winnipeg and enlisted there, is on his way overseas; Payson, also in the West; Bruce and Fred living on the old homestead in Cavan, the home their grandfather settled on when he came to Canada.

Pte. Elliott has gone to his eternal reward, having made the supreme sacrifice for his God, his country and his King, and the community where he was so well known extend to the sorrowing brothers their warmest sympathy.

PTE. ADAM SODUM.

Pte. Adam Sodum, who enlisted here in April, 1916, with the 93rd Battalion, is officially reported wounded, according to to-day's list from Ottawa.

CORP. BERT BEACH.

Mr. Bob Beach has received word that his brother, Corp. Bert Beach, formerly of Peterborough, who enlisted in Hamilton with the 86th Machine Gun Battalion, is officially reported wounded on 6th November, presumably in the capture of Paschendaele. Corp. Beach is well known in the city, and his friends will unite in hoping that his injuries are not serious.

SERGT. JOHN T. HARDWICKE.

Sergt. John T. Hardwicke, a well-known Peterborough boy who enlisted in Winnipeg, is officially reported wounded for the second time. Sergt. Hardwicke, whose relatives live at 469 Ross street, wrote a number of interesting letters from the front to the Examiner. His brother, Pte. Chas. Hardwicke, of the 21st Battalion, was wounded some time ago.

PTE. FRED COOPER.

Pte. Fred Cooper, who is officially reported missing, was the son of Mrs. Fred Cooper, and not the husband, as announced in error by the Examiner. The youngster, who was a student at the Collegiate, enlisted in the 93rd Battalion when well below the military age, and is only seventeen now.

No further news has been received from Ottawa concerning him.

DENTAL.

Dr. McKenty. Dentist. 370 George street, on the ground floor, first door north of Peterborough Hardware Co. Nitrous oxide and oxygen administered for painless operations.

Splendid Rehearsal

St. John's Choir is Preparing For Presentation of "Olivet to Calvary"

In the School Room last Tuesday night, St. John's choir rehearsed the programme for the forthcoming choral festival on St. Andrew's Day, Friday, 30th November. "Olivet to Calvary" was rehearsed, the bass solo work by Mr. T. Ward, the tenor by Mr. Walter H. Hutchinson.

Several numbers from Haydn's "Creation" have also been prepared, and the following were rehearsed on Tuesday: "Rolling in Foaming Billows," Mr. Ward; "The Marvellous Work," soprano obligato by Mrs. W. G. Perks, which contains a wonderful passage reaching C in alt.; trio, "Most Beautiful Appear," Mrs. Perks, Mr. Hutchinson, and Mr. Ward; and the wonderful trio and chorus, "The Lord is Great," the twentieth number of the "Creation," one of the most beautiful choruses ever written, but seldom used without professional assistance owing to its high range.

St. John's choir, an entirely unpaid body of singers, formed from members of the congregation, have shown splendid spirit and perseverance in the practice and rehearsal of these standard works, in addition to their regular duties in the church services and at the conclusion of the rehearsal Mr. R. J. Devey heartily congratulated the choristers for their splendid work in all its branches.

DOCTORS SAID OPERATION

"When Chatham Lady Suffered From Extreme Nervous Exhaustion— Now Feeling Fine and Working Large Garden."

Chatham, Ont., Nov. 22. — This letter will interest every lady reader, because it describes a condition for which many doctors advise an operation. That the operation is often unnecessary and very often leaves the patient an invalid for life is well known.

You will read here of what Dr. Chase's Nerve Food has done for this lady and will then understand the great good it is accomplishing in many thousands of similar cases throughout the continent.

Every woman should think long and earnestly before consenting to an operation of this kind. It is a simple matter to give Dr. Chase's Nerve Food a trial and the results are almost always entirely satisfactory. You not only avoid the risk and expense of an operation but find yourself restored to health and vigor.

Mrs. E. M. Ford, 82 Delaware ave., Chatham, Ont., writes: "For four years I suffered from my nerves. I was restless and could not sleep well. I had headaches, neuralgic pains through the body and backache. There was a buzzing in my ears and a twitching of nerves and muscles. I also had palpitation of the heart which caused shortness of breath. I was easily tired and always drowsy after eating. When walking or on my feet very much my feet would seem to go dead in my shoes. I consulted two doctors and both told me that I would have to have an examination and probably an operation, but I would not have either. Shortly after this I commenced using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and after a treatment of this medicine I can say I am now feeling fine I am able to do my household duties without difficulty, and besides this attend to a half acre of garden. I can go about without that dead feeling in my feet and am grateful to Dr. Chase's Nerve Food for my cure. I think very highly of this medicine, and recommend it to other sufferers whenever I have an opportunity."

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, 50 cents a box; a full treatment of 6 boxes for $2.75, at all dealers or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto. Do not be talked into accepting a substitute. Imitations only disappoint.

SPECULATION ENDED IN BUTTER AND EGGS.

Washington. — Speculation in butter and eggs has been ended, according to the announcement made to-day by the Food Administration. The programme under which this was brought about was worked out at conferences attended by representatives of the Butter and Egg Exchanges.

The Food Administration feels that a great end has been accomplished by obtaining the cooperation of the exchanges in this matter. The situation will be watched carefully, and should any seek to avoid the restrictions imposed the full powers conferred in the food control law will be brought into play to punish the alleged profiteers.

County Council Make Grant Of $3,000 To The Patriotic Fund

Councillors Anderson and Eason Object to the Present inequitable Method of Providing for the Patriotic Fund—Peterboro County's Share Amounts to Four and a Half Mills, Richer Counties in Ontario Pay Half That Amount

A TEMPORARY GRANT

"Moved by Councillor Anderson and seconded by Councillor F. A. Eason, that the sum of three thousand dollars be granted to the Patriotic Fund for the month intervening between the end of the present year and the next session of the County Council, when further provisions will be made."

The foregoing is the net result of the County Council's deliberations in connection with the county's contribution to the Patriotic Fund. A deputation composed of Mayor J. J. Duffus, Ald. F. H. Dobbin, executive officer of the Fund, and Adjutant McElhiney, waited upon the Council yesterday afternoon with the request that the Council make further provisions for supplying the financial needs of the Patriotic Fund. During the present year the County has contributed three thousand dollars a month towards the fund, or a yearly contribution of thirty-six thousand dollars. The city supplements this amount with a contribution of sixty thousand dollars, making an approximate total of ninety-five or a hundred thousand dollars with which to care for soldiers' dependents in both the county and city.

Content to Pay Share.

Both Councillor Anderson and Councillor Eason led a spirited discussion as to why other counties in the Province of Ontario were not paying more than two and one-half mills on the dollar towards the Fund, while Peterborough County's contribution of thirty-six thousand dollars represented a levy of four and one-half mills.

"Some of the richer counties in the Province should pay more than they do," said Councillor Anderson.

Mayor Duffus concurred in Councillor Anderson's contention, and said that it narrowed down to a question of whether Peterborough County would fall behind or continue the lead that was initiated at the outset.

"We would be content to pay our share," said Councillor Eason.

Ald. Dobbin showed the Council where St. Catharines had raised a greater amount than was required for use in the community, and the surplus was turned into the general fund, where it was available for other parts of the Dominion.

Councillor Eason: "They were helping to pay the other fellow's way."

Equitable Way.

Mayor Duffus was of the opinion that the most equitable way was to have the Dominion Government impose a Dominion tax so that Peterborough County would not have to pay any more than one or two mills on the dollar and all other counties in the Dominion would be assessed alike. "We should get a large and representative deputation and present that plan to the Government at the first of the year," said Mayor Duffus.

Councillor Eason: "That is the way. We want to be as patriotic as the rest, but we don't like to be told that other counties in the Province are contributing only half as much as we are."

Ald. Dobbin said that a movement of the kind suggested by Mayor Duffus was inaugurated in October, when it was decided to continue the fund on the present basis. The Government appeared to be afraid of administrative difficulties in event of the fund being taken over as a Government project.

Should Be Equalised.

Councillor Eason thought that the present administration would serve the purpose if the fund were taken over by the Government.

Mayor Duffus: "I don't think the Government would care to turn the money over to Sir Herbert Ames in that way. The Government would rather operate the scheme on its own account.

Councillor Anderson was of the opinion that the fund had been running long enough under present conditions, and should be equalised. The discussion ended with the adoption of a resolution authorising the usual grant of three thousand dollars for one month until such time as the matter is definitely settled by the new 1918 Council.

Famous Hindenburg Line Is Smashed To Splinters

first terror of the moment and fled to the ghostly dawn above, without hats, without blouses, without guns, almost without their senses. Vast stores of choice wines were found in officers' quarters. Cigars and cigarettes were packed there profusely. Many sections of the boasted Hindenburg line came into British hands absolutely intact. The tanks had smashed great gaps, and through these the infantry poured and spread out, fan-wise behind, taking yard after yard of "impregnable positions" from the rear.

CORRESPONDENTS THERE.

The correspondents were summoned to the line during the night. We stood that memorable morning in the eerie light just before dawn, in the midst of great droves of tanks, all camouflage and bedizened—a veritable multitude of the things.

There was a great herd of gentle-looking, stolid creatures, that seemed to browse on the grass covered battle field, hidden somewhat by trees, whose branches showed no nipping by shells. The scene was like some abandoned farm in the Kentucky Blue Grass region. One could imagine the tanks either as bovine herds or as cluttered up, dingy-looking neglected farm machinery scattered about.

It was still. Only a few desultory shells exploded in the distance—the regular monotonous, every morning interchange. We could not see the infinite preparations on all the gigantic front. Column after column, mass after mass of men and machines and horses and pharphernalia had slid through the oily night shadows and were lined up at that moment for the greatest of the war dramas about to start.

Of a sudden the moment came. It was the "kick-off." Nothing but the intense moment when the ball is put into play so aptly expressed that moment.

HELL BROKE LOOSE.

A little while and hell broke loose. It seems almost preposterous that the Germans in a great many places on their lines did not awaken with the first snorting of the tanks as they crunched great swaths through the Boche wires. But there were countless instances where it was not until the behemoths themselves, their tongues flaming ahead, their steel bellies flattening the earth, actually came over the German trenches, that the Boche came to life. Your German is a creature of habit. He knew it was customary for artillery to precede an attack. There was no artillery. Then there could be no attack.

No wonder he was dazed. The inferno of British artillery did not start until the tanks were well over their first objectives. Then it came, a deluge, a molten flame itself. From Lens to St. Quentin, I am told to-day that the British artillery speeded up to feverish violence.

EASY GOING FOR TANKS.

The multitude of the tanks found it easy going. The general in command of the land leviathans had sent word to all his crews.

"The tank corps expects every tank to do its damnest," and the tanks did full damnation to the Boches. The ground over which they wriggled was flat. There were few shell holes. Mighty few of the monsters got stuck. A few were knocked out around Flesquies later on, when a heavy German field gun, muzzle depressed, fired point blank at a range of 150 yards. Behind the tanks trooped the infantry, taking it easy, laughing in glee at the astonished Boches and their frenzied cries of "kamerad," or disregarding the staccato machine gun fire that the more wide awake—and courageous—of the enemy poured in their ranks. There were several spots where the Hindenburg line was captured without a single casualty among the British attackers.

CAVALRY SWEEP IN.

Here and there behind the tanks and infantry, the cavalry swept forward—sometimes, later in the fighting, actually disregarding the slow moving tanks and dashing on to swing their sabres and overwhelm the enemy. They had waited long years, these cavalrymen, for a chance at the enemy, and they made most of the holiday opportunity. British infantrymen, who arrogantly turned up their noses in other days at the cavalrymen, holding that it was trench boys who were real soldiers, had to revise their opinion. They hadn't seen a cavalry in action before. Nobody else had. That is against firmly fixed trench defences.

The cavalry carved itself a niche in the war's history by the two days' work just past. To-day they were still carving. Their speed gives them the edge.

In several towns captured yesterday mounted troops swarmed in while the Boches were lunching. The Germans were beginning to recover from their daze and headquarters reported frenzied opposition at half a dozen points around Cambrai to-day. But the suddenness of the blow and two days of tremendous sweeping gains over the Hindenburg line has immeasurably lowered the German soldier's morale. He has been told the Hindenburg line couldn't be taken. It has been taken. Perhaps he is beginning to think that there be other untruths in what his commanders tell him.

Newspaper correspondents had their thrill in the proceedings late yesterday. They were objects of assiduous attention from German snipers at Ribecourt.

MEDICAL TREATMENT PROVIDED

Men Discharged From the Imperial Army in Canada are to be Looked After

The military authorities announce that arrangements have recently been completed with the Ministry of Pensions, England, whereby it is now possible to give necessary training and medical treatment to discharge men of the Imperial Army, at Imperial Government expense, in a similar manner to that followed in the case of men of the Canadian Expeditionary Force, provided that the disability is due to the man's service during the present war, and treatment or training recommended will improve the man's condition.

Attention is called to the principal points to be borne in mind, which are as follow:

1. All cases, in the first instance, be brought to the notice of the officer paying Imperial Pensions, Ottawa, Ont.

2. The man's case will be then taken up with the Military Hospitals Commission, Ottawa, which will at once take steps to have the man examined, and the training, or treatment, will then, if found necessary, be given at once.

3. As soon as the man is given treatment or training, the appropriate allowance will be issued weekly by the officer paying Imperial Pensions, Ottawa, and will continue so long as the man is receiving either treatment or training as the case may be.

It is asked that this information be made as public as possible, and that the attenion of all men of the Imperial Service be drawn to the facts as soon as possible.

Rev. Mr. Mitchell To Give Lecture

Mark Street Methodist Church has been fortunate in securing the services of Rev. T. H. Mitchell, former pastor of St. Andrew's church, Toronto, for the evenin of December 3rd, when he will deliver a lecture on "Laughter and Its Significance". Rev. Mr. Mitchel's reputation for eloquence is sufficient to assure a capacity atendance. The lecture will be given in Mark Street Church.

HOUSING FEEBLEMINDED.

State Urged to Make Provision for 6,000 More Unfortunates.

BINGHAMTON.—Immediate provision for 6,000 more feeble-minded persons now uncared for in this State was urged by the Committee on Treatment of the Mentally Defective in a report presented this afternoon at the convention of the State Conference of Charities and Corrections. The total number of feeble-minded in the State has been estimated at 35,000, of whom only 6,000 are at present in institutions.

Oliver Cecil Buck, 228 Park St.

"C" Men Exempted.

William Joseph Prindible, 569 Edinburgh Street.

William Frederick Russell, 44 George Street.

Harold James Bell, R. R. No. 4, Peterborough.

"E" Category Exemptions.

Leslie Samuel Carver, Peterborough.

Thomas Joseph Reilley, 266 King Street.

John Patrick McCabe, 470 Gilmour Street.

Ernest John Howden, 194 Sherbrooke Street.

"I'll take the coop for it," declared William Henry Little, as he faced the prospect of conscription. He lives south of the Exhibition Park, and is employed by the McDonald Estate Lumber Co. Little has a brother overseas.

He appealed for exemption on domestic grounds as the sole support of his mother. The Tribunal pointed out that $40 a month was received by the mother from her son's active service at the front. Exemption disallowed.

Three Brothers Are "A2."

Norman Moore, 350 Smith Street, is one of three "A2" brothers. The other two are set down for later hearings. Applicant is a toolmaker at the C.G.E. shops. If his exemption was disallowed he asked for a recommendation to be placed with the mechanical branch of the aviation corps.

Exemption disallowed. Recommendation will be made as requested.

Brother of Lieutenant Milburn.

James Elmer Milburn, son of Mr. T. T. Milburn, of Smith township, is a brother of the late Lieutenant George Noble Milburn, of the 93rd Battalion, who was killed in action. The farm work on 200 acres has fallen practically entirely on this remaining son. Exemption allowed.

Richard Oswald Gibbs, a young farmer from Otonabee, is working 140 acres. He was granted exemption.

Brother's Exemption Also Refused.

Robert James Clancy, 542 Concession Street, has had a brother drafted by the Tribunal at the Court House. He appealed for exemption on domestic grounds, as the support of his mother, who is ill. There are two married brothers, one living in the city. Exemption disallowed.

A Strange Name.

Klondyke Gold Brown, a name associated probably with the gold rush of twenty years ago, apparently sounded like a hoax to Mr. Aylmer as he repeated it reflectively and wonderingly. It was the strangest of the long list called at the City Hall and had a less familiar ring than Abou Ben Adhem.

He and his brother work 215 acres of land north of the city, and two other brothers and the father are entirely occupied at their gravel pit. Everybody has been busy around the Brown home, but the Tribunal didn't regard the gravel pit as an asset to the nation. Exemption disallowed.

George Le Moine Knight, 281 Rubidge Street, has one brother overseas, and a second has been invalided home. Decision deferred.

Robert Bruce Telford, 546 Waterford Street, claimed exemption as the support of his parents. They moved in from the south four years ago. One other son rented the farm and has been working it. Telford has been working as a chauffeur.

Exemption disallowed.

Ralph Erskine Drummond, R. R. No. 8, Otonabee, was granted exemption while he continues to be employed as a farmer. He is helping his father at home, and has two brothers in business in Winnipeg.

Stephen Menogue, 476 Driscoll Terrace, employed as a C.P.R. lineman, appealed on physical grounds, stating that he had not recovered from hernia. Exemption disallowed.

John Anderson, 264 Stewart Street, appealed on domestic grounds. He was exempted until February 1st.

George Alexander Johnston, 125 Romaine Street, was granted exemption until he ceases to be an inspector of component parts of shells. He is an inspector for the Imperial Munitions Board.

John Wordsworth Finnie, an Otonabee farmer, in the Stewart section, was granted exemption. He has one brother in the Cobourg Heavy Battery.

Two Brothers Killed.

John Stuart Gibson, 781 George Street, has lost two brothers in the war. Private William Gibson was killed at Langemarck, and Private James Gibson died of wounds. His father conducts a general store in the West, where the applicant worked until April. His mother died over a year ago. Exemption was disallowed.

Will Be Heard in Montreal.

John Joseph Clancy, 66 Aylmer St., married in August, claimed exemption on domestic grounds. If he were taken conditions would be intolerable for his wife, he wrote. Clancy has gone to Montreal with the Metal Products Co., and his appeal was transferred to the Montreal Tribunals.

The same action was taken with Joseph McLure, 307 Townsend St., who has also gone with the Metal Products Co.

Stanley Scott, Chamberlain St., was placed in Category "A2," but his knee was injured since that time and on a second appearance before the doctors, he was placed in Category "B."

TRIBUNAL No. 275

COURT HOUSE

Judge Huycke, Police Magistrate Dumble, Members
Lt.-Col. E. B. Clegg, Military Representative

George Nelson Andrews, 454 Chamberlen street, and an "A2" man, asked for exemption on the rounds of domestic position. Applicant said his father was an old man and not able to work.

"How old is he?" enquired Magistrate Dumble.

"About seventy or seventy-five," replied Andrews.

"I am ten years older than he is, and I work every day," volunteered Magistrate Dumble.

Applicant also had a lame knee, which he desired to put in. The claim was disallowed.

MORE EVIDENCE.

John Joseph Murphy, 64 Aberdeen Avenue, a machinist and an "A2" man. Applicant's father is fifty-five years of age and is in ill-health. He worked for a while this summer. The firm employing the applicant put in a claim for Murphy's exemption, which was said to be too vague to merit the consideration of the Board. Judgment was reserved to enable Murphy to secure evidence to substantiate the claim that his services are of national importance.

WAS EXEMPTED.

Gordon Thomas Rosborough works a one-hundred and sixty acre farm in Smith Township. Applicant was commended by Judge Huycke for the manner in which he conducts his farming operations under present labour conditions. Two brothers work a couple of farms between them and by helping one another, manage to get along. Rosborough's father is dead.

The claim was allowed.

JUDGMENT WAS RESERVED.

Edward Francis Riley, an employee of Oak Hall, Clothiers George street, has two married brothers residing in the city. Applicant said he was the sole suport of his mother.

Mr. Dumble contended that the two should assist as the mother had first claim. Another sister resides in Toronto.

"Do you think it fair that your brothers and sisters should wander over the face of the earth and leave you to keep the house?" enquired Judge Huycke.

Riley said he tried to enlist in the Mounted Rifles, but was turned down.

"You can turn over part of your pay" observed Mr. Dumble.

Mr. Maher put in a strong plea for Riley.

"We admit all his good qualities," said Mr. Dumble. "We want good boys in the Army," he added.

"Why in the world your brothers and sisters should not turn in and do their share and let you go and do your share, is more than I can make out," said Judge Huycke, addressing Riley.

"You have enough Irish in you to make a good fighting man," said Mr. Dumble.

Mr. Maher took exception to this remark, claiming that it was irrevelent.

"We have endeavoured to present all the facts obtainable in connection with this case," said Mr. Maher.

Judgment was reserved.

W. C. McBride claimed exemption on the grounds of domestic position. The claim was disallowed.

Fred Barrett, 75 Park Street, a labourer and an "A2" man, claimed exemption on the ground of ill health. The applicant's father, who is in ill health, is employed at the Canadian General Electric Company's plant. A brother has been placed in "E" category. Barrett said he contributed ten dollars every two weeks to the family treasury.

"You pay your board?" enquired Magistrate Dumble.

"Yes."

"You get the worth of your money?"

"Maybe I do and maybe I don't," replied the applicant. The claim was disallowed.

Thomas O. Young was exempted until he ceases to be a farmer.

The claim of Norman G. Lewis, 319 Boswell Avenue, was disallowed. Joseph S. Fontaine, 477 Rubidge street, was exempted until February 1st, 1918.

Had Richard Doris been one month younger than he is he would have escaped the first draft, without the necessity of applying for exemption. As it was Doris was exempted until he ceases to be employed as a farmer.

H. A. Owen, Munro House, Peterborough; T. G. Tindle, a farmer; D. Pearson, 494 Park street; G. D. Boreham, 525 Patterson street; J. M. Fraser, 76 Aylmer street; G. H. Bidgood, a farmer; W. T. Hill, 140 Murstreet; T. J. O'Brien, 648 Concession ray street; M. H. Galvin, 187 Stewart street, all "E" men, were exempted until their class is called. T. W. H. Taylor, 472 Mark street, a "B" man, was also exempted until B Category men are called.

A PATRIOTIC FAMILY.

Thomas S. Perdue, son of Mr. M. Perdue of Ennismore, appeared before the tribunal this afternoon. Mr. Perdue has three sons at the front, one of whom has been wounded, one an invalid at home, another going to school, and the sixth applied for exemption this afternoon upon the justifiable grounds that he was needed on the farm and his work of national importance. The exemption was granted and a few words of commendation were voiced by the Board.

A DEPUTATION FROM TOWNSHIP OF BELMONT

A deputation from Belmont township, consisting of A. Leeson, C. Elliott, J. Fremont, R. McCutcheon, J. Kitchen and G. Steinburgh, appeared before the County Council this afternoon in the interests of county roads or a better system of road making.

Councillor W. E. Griffith of Belmont township, reminded the Council that this matter had been left in the hands of a committee early in the year and that a report should be forthcoming. Councillor Anderson, who was a member of the committee referred to, said that the committee had not attempted to go into the matter as it was patent that under present labour conditions the adoption of a county roads system could not be undertaken until after the war. "Men who are not sent overseas to fight are being left at home to produce and not build roads," said Councillor Anderson.

Councillor Rye did not think that the Council should neglect the roads. He was of the opinion that steps should be taken to adopt such a system at the close of the war and now was a good time to complete such arrangements.

Councillor Walsh was opposed to the adoption of a county roads system at the present time.

Councillor McKee admitted that the roads needed attention, but was not prepared to inaugurate such a scheme under present war time conditions.

Editor of the Examiner.

Sir,—This clipping which I have enclosed, from The Globe, Toronto, exactly expresses my feelings towards your valuable daily publication for printing such proceedings as take place at the Exemption Tribunals.—Yours, A Subscriber.

Peterborough, 20th Nov., 1917.

The clipping is as follows:

A PROTEST.

To the Editor of The Globe: May I voice the very strong, strong feeling of resentment which is felt in this district? Why are the papers allowed to publish the details as brought out before the Exemption Boards? They seem to assume that every young man who did not enlist is a fit subject for abuse—even though he may have had very good reasons for not enlisting. It seems to me a shame to expose a man's financial position, family history, etc., in the way that is being done. Could they not publish the summary of exemptions and postponements and omit the details? —Yours for fair play,

L. G. Hopper,
23 Cardigan Street.

Guelph, Ont.

Editor of the Examiner.

Sir,—Will you please inform me if relatives of a nursing sister overseas have the same right to vote as have those of a soldier overseas?—Yours,

Citizen.

The War Times Elections Act gives the nurse on active service the same status as a soldier, so that her mother and sisters, if any are over 21, will have a vote in the coming election.—Editor of the Examiner.

Editor of the Examiner.

Sir,—Please publish and let me know.

A county judge makes a decision in a case, an appeal is made from that decision to another Court.

(a) Can that county judge act again on that case as supreme judge?

(b) Osler, of Toronto, I am told, would not allow it on exemption cases in that city last week. Why are those cases in Peterborough to be tried twice by the same judge?

(c) Is there one law for Toronto and another for Peterborough on the same case?

(d) Who is the judge to act on the appeal cases on exemptions in Peterborough city and county?

Thanking you for the space,—I remain, yours, Ignorance.

Keene, Nov. 20, 1917.

The personnel of the appeal Tribunals has not yet been announced, and it is not known who will act on the one in this district. Judge Huycke has been appointed to an Appeal Tribunal, but expects that it will be in some outside district.—Editor of the Examiner.

To the Editor of Examiner:

Dear Sir: Will you be good enough to inform me through the columns of your valuable paper if those who have appealed from the findings of the Tribunals will be allowed to have any counsel when their case is being heard at the court of appeal.

I am not personally interested but would like to have the information.

Subscriber.

The Military Service Regulations says in regard to the procedure of Appeal Tribunals that an "appeal tribunal may in its discretion hear counsel." That leaves the matter wholly to the judgment of the tribunal so that some may allow counsel present and others may not.—Editor of The Examiner.

5,000 WOMEN ON RAILROAD.

In Many Jobs on Pennsylvania Lines East of Pittsburg.

PHILADELPHIA.— Approximately 30 per cent. of the entire force of employes of the Pennsylvania Railroad lines east of Pittsburg are women, according to a report of the General Manager. All told, there are slightly in excess of 5,000 women on the payroll to-day, as compared with 1,956 June 1.

These women are holding all kinds of jobs, from train dispatcher to section hand, the list including signal tower operators, station cleaners, drafting, station agents, machinists, watchers at dangerous crossings, drawbridge attendants, clerks, stenographers, and telegraph and telephone operators.

WAR-TIME BALLAD OF BRITISH FLYERS

LONDON — Though Kipling has stopped writing "Barrack Room Ballads," the ballads themselves have not stopped. He is one of the favourites of the British Air Service. Note the fine chance for "close harmony."

"A handsome young airman lay dying (Chorus: Lay dying),
"And as on the er'drome he lay (he lay),
"To the mechanics who round him came sighing (came sighing)
"These last dying words he did say (he did say):
"Take the cylinder out of my kidneys (of his kidneys),
"The connecting rod out of my brain (of his brain),
"The cam box from under my backbone (his backbone),
"And assemble the engine again (again).

Try it over on the piano to the tune of "The Dying Lancer."

Hey Bill! where you'se runnin'? Can't stop now Joe, I'm going to Paskin's Store for some Fish

I just heard he's got a new shipment this morning and if you'se don't get there early he'll be sold out, there's such a rush.

Well, you'se can get it somewhere else.

Not for me, I ain't supportin' no bloomin' trusts; I'm going where I gets a square deal, and he sells cheaper than the darn city fish combine. Why he sells Herrins at 8c a lb., Cod Steaks at 13c a lb., Fresh Haddock 12c., Fresh Salmon 18c, and he's got a fine lot of potatoes just arrived, he's selling at $2.10 a bag.

Oh, gosh, come on Bill, I'm comin' too. That's the place for me and my old woman to spend our money and blow the fish trust. How far is it?

"Seven Day's Leave"

By Walter Howard

Speaking of the play which opened its Canadian Tour at The Russell Theatre, Ottawa, last Monday Evening, direct from Boston, the Ottawa Citizen in part says:

One word about the scenery. To describe it would be to spoil the effect for those who have not yet seen the play. But let it suffice to say that the scenic effects are really beautiful and are well worth high praise. The whole offering is excellent.

Finns Starving Implore Help From America

DROUGHT IMPAIRS HARVEST

NEW YORK, Nov. 22.—Finland is on the verge of starvation. Her people are mixing ground pine bark and moss with flour. This statement of conditions is brought to America by Dr. Kaarlo Ignatius, Special Commissioner from the Government of Finland who, equiped wipth credentials also from the Kerensky Government in Russia, is now in Washington to intercede with the American Government for a supply of breadstuffs for his people.

Dr. Ignatius was formerly Judge of the Court of Appeals of Viborg, but resigned in 1913. He has been a strong sympathizer with the Allies since the war broke out, and, although insisting that his mission has no political character, he points out that aid to Finland at this critical moment will be of material effect in promoting sympathy for the Allies in that country.

"Finland's plight," he says "is the result of the cutting off of imported supplies, aggravated this year by a particularly bad harvest. We have never been self-supporting as regards food. Our normal consumption of breadstuffs is about 800,000 tons a year. We produce at home only about 350,000 tons, leaving a deficiency of 450,000 tons.

"In the past this deficiency was covered by imports of rye and wheat from Russia, and of wheat from America. This year, owing first to frost and later to drought, our home production severely declined. A provisional but reliable estimate puts our harvest for 1917 at 200,000 tons, leaving a deficiency of 600,000 tons, so that we have only a quarter of the breadstuffs consumed in normal years.

"We have reduced the deficiency by drastic State regulation limiting consumption. How far we have been obliged to go is shown by the fact that in the last summer our daily card allowance has been only 150 grams, which is less than half the allowance in Russia. This measure is inflicting serious suffering upon our whole population. But even with these limitations upon consumption we cannot keep going unless we obtain foreign aid.

"From Russia we now get nothing. Owing to transportation difficulties, Russia cannot even supply us with breadstuffs which have been contracted and paid for, and I fear that we have no chance of getting supplies from her within measurable time. Importation from the United States is broken off by the war.

"As a result, we are within sight of literal starvation. Many communes have practically no reserves. Their population has been obliged to resort to an expedient painfully common in Finnish history — the mixing of ground pine-bark with grain flour, the product being a distasteful and injurious bread known as 'pettuleipa.' Even in relatively rich parts of the country grain is so scarce that people are collecting lichens for desiccation, grinding and mixing with fuold.

"We desire to obtain from the United States licenses to buy and export to Finland sufficient grain to relieve our extreme need. The Swedish Government has granted us transit licenses free of compensation, so that America's consent is all that we need. I appeal to the American press and the American people who are so magnanimously championing the causes of the small nations, for sympathy and suport."

Asked about the political situation in Finland, Dr Ignatius expressed the hope that an agreement would be made which would satisfy both Finland and Russia.

"The supreme of Finland's needs" he concluded, "will materially serve the Entente cause, as it will prove to my countrymen that they, too, are included among the small nations which the Allies are attempting to help."

Social and Personal

Miss M M. Carr, graduate nurse, has arrived from the West, and will stay with her sister, Mrs. W. J. Abraham, East City, during the winter months.

Driver Leon Feeley, of the 74th Battery, returned to Kingston to-day after spending seven days' leave at his home in Peterborough.

Major and Mrs. Horsefield (nee Alma Frowde) of this city arrived last week in Quebec, after an extended absence in England. Mrs. Horsefield is at present the guest of her mother, Mrs. Frowde, in Sydney. Major Horsefield has gone to Edmonton.

Miss Olive Gooding, who has been visiting Mrs. Stratton, is at present the guest of Mrs. J. H. Ardiel, en route for her home in Kenora.

St. Peter's Ladies' patriotic tea enjoyed unusual success and popularity yesterday afternoon, when a large number dropped in to tea after the matinee, who, added to the usual number, kept the hostesses, Mrs. James J. Doris and Mrs. W. Roland Hunter, busy. The tea table, which was tastefully decorated with ferns, was presided over by Mrs. (Dr.) Gallivan, who was assisted by the Misses Madeline Rutherford, B. Lalonde, and M. Merrell. During the afternoon Mrs. F. Hickey played some very enjoyable selections.

Lieut. Peel Dennistoun has joined the R.N.A.S. in Toronto.

Mr. and Mrs. James Lundy, London, are visiting Mr. and Mrs. D. J. Lundy, Aylmer street.

Lieut. Peele Dennistoun has successfully passed his examination in Toronto and sailed recently for England to join the Royal Naval Air Service.

Mrs. Rhys D. Fairburn, Toronto, will be the guest of Dr. and Mrs. Neal during her visit in the city to attend the meeting of the Council of Women.

Lady Falconer will be the guest of Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Harstone whilst in the city.

The following ladies will be present at the meeting of the National Council of Women, which will be held in the city on Wednesday and Thursday of next week: Lady Gibson, Miss Machar, Kingston; Mrs. Sanford, Hamilton; Dr. Ritchie, England; Lady Falconer, Toronto; Mrs. Lavell, Kingston; Mrs. Hamilton, Toronto; Prof. Carrie Derick, Montreal; Mrs. Watt, Brantford; Mrs. McNaughton, Montreal; Mrs. Carpenter, Hamilton; Mrs. Fairbairn, Toronto; Mrs. Boomer, London; Miss Carmichael, Miss Murray, and Miss Fraser, New Glasgow, N.S.

Britain Will Have All Pamphlets Sent to Press Bureau.

LONDON.—The Home Secretary announced in the House of Commons to-day that the Government would seek power under the Defence of the Realm act to compel all pamphlets relating to the war or the conclusion of peace to bear the authors' and printers, names and be submitted to the Press Bureau for approval.

Philip Snowden, Socialist, sought to move the adjournment of the House to debate what he called an attempt to suppress advocacy of the peace propaganda, but was unable to obtain sufficient members to support his motion.

Faille silk and felt are combined in millinery.

PENETRATE EIGHT MILES

British Troops Advance Far Beyond Hindenburg Line

(By Wm. Philip Simms.)

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES BEYOND THE HINDENBURG LINE, Nov. 22.—At some points on what used to be the impregnable Hindenburg line, British troops this afternoon had penetrated more than eight miles.

No late official announcement has been made of prisoners captured or guns taken.

My personal estimate, from numbers reported by various companies, is that more than ten thousand Germans have been captured.

The penetration of eight miles at some points is from headquarters reports to-day. By this time, the indications are that the Tommies have swept on further than this. Seven counter attacks have failed to stop their progress.

The German efforts were very weak. All failed miserably in the victory inspired onslaught of Byng's men. The German casualties were heavy.

Great numbers of German guns have been taken. No effort has been made as yet, because of the very enormity of the task, to make a detailed count of prisoners and material.

CAPT. EASTWOOD'S CONDITION IS VERY SATISFACTORY

The many friends of Captain Vincent Eastwood, formerly of the 93rd Battalion, will be glad to hear that his condition is considered as very satisfactory. His father, Mr. Vincent Eastwood, has received the following cablegram from the manager of the Royal Bank of Canada in London:

"Hospital report, shell wound in shoulder; condition very satisfactory.—Whitley."

MR G.A. GILLESPIE WAS RE-ELECTED

At a meeting of the District Dairy Association, held yesterday afternoon at Westwood, Mr. G. A. Gillespie, M.P.P., was re-elected director of the Association. Instructive addresses were given by Mr. R. W. Ward and Mr. Publow, Chief Dairy Instructor.

JUDGE HUYCKE IS ON APPEAL TRIBUNAL

His Honour Judge Huycke has received notice of his appointment on "Appeal Tribunal Number Thirty-Three." The location of this Tribunal has not been announced, although it is hardly likely that it will be in Peterborough County.

Third American Battalion Is In Front Trenches

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN FRANCE.—The second American detachments to enter the trenches have returned to their billets. The relief was accomplished successfully and without the knowledge of the Germans. The third series of battalions is now occupying the first line, having marched in on a brilliant starlight night.

Among the returned troops is the company which bore the brunt of the raid on the trenches by German shock troops. The battalions in the trenches had a good taste of shell fire during the first hours, the Germans using their artillery more heavily than usual and continuing steadily and the American batteries replying energetically. There has been active patrolling in No Man's Land by the Americans and the enemy, but no clash between patrols has so far been reported.

The lieutenant who was knocked down three times by shell fire during the recent German raid in the American sector described his experiences to the Associated Press. His face is covered with scratches from flying gravel.

"When the firing began I started back to the trench," he said. "The first thing I knew there was a crash. I seemed to see sparks shooting from all over my body. I started to crawl, and it seemed ages before my face hit the mud at the bottom of the trench. The same thing happened again a minute later. Then I picked myself up and started in another direction, a corporal and two men joining me. A shell burst a few feet from us on the parapet and I lost consciousness.

"When I came to all was black, and grenades were flying in all directions. I had lost my shrapnel helmet, but, feeling around with my hands, I found one by the head of a man who was lying near me. I put it on and started away, stumbling over the body of the man, who was a corporal.

"I went on and gathered some men. We spread ourselves out, expecting a heavy attack. As a matter of fact, I found out later that the raid was over and that the grenades we saw were being thrown by retreating Germans."

It is the opinion of all the officers that the troops are bearing up excellently under their first experience in the trenches. All are learning how to conduct themselves under fire, and also that shell fire, even when intense, is not as dangerous as it sounds.

So much shrapnel has fallen since the battalions of the second contingent in the trenches have taken their posts that the men have ceased to worry about it, hardly paying any more attention to it than to rain. The commander of one battalion said that since the men had entered the trenches mumps had caused more of them to go to the hospital than the enemy's fire. The firing in this battalion's sector has been rather more intense than is usual for several nights. A heavy shell fell in a machine gun ammunition dump and exploded thirty boxes, bullets flying in all directions. The men nearby threw themselves on the ground, and no one was hurt.

The soldiers are rapidly becoming expert at patrol work, and their officers say they carry on in No Man's' and as if they had been at it for years. This is explained partly by the fact that activity in No Man's Land along the sector held by the Americans virtually is open warfare, which is distinctly an American game.

Already stories of the heroism of individual soldiers during trench raids are coming to light. Some men hesitate to tell what they have done, but are anxious and willing to tell what they have seen other do. The latest incident discovered involved five privates, who rushed from their dugout as the Germans entered the trenches. Standing, kneeling and lying in front of the entrance, they fired on the enemy so successfully that they prevented the Germans, who made several attempts, from entering.

SEIZED CZAR'S SUGAR.

Ten Thousand Tons Was Stored in New York City.

NEW YORK, N.Y., Nov. 21.— Ten thousand tons of sugar, which had been purchased for the Imperial Russian Government before the revolution and stored in a warehouse here, was seized by Federal Administrator George M. Rolph today. It will be placed upon the market immediately and will be distributed to retailers by the American Refiners' Sugar committee.

The sugar was bought for the Government of former Emperor Nicholas by the Marine Transportation Service Corporation. After the overthrow of the Russian dynasty there was no claimant for the sugar. Yesterday the transportation corporation attached it as part of the personal property here of Nicholas Romanoff, the deposed sovereign, in a suit to recover $2,800,000 for alleged breaech of contract.

The fashionable suit is rather severely tailored.

Americans Are Elated At Victory

Success of Great Drive Proves Breaking of the Foe's Morale

NEW YORK, Nov. 23—Newspapers here express elation at the British victory. Under the caption, "Who said that the famous Hindenburg line was impregnable?" the Herald says: "Whether the British advance between St. Quentin and Arras is a prelude to the fall of Cambrai or not, it has already achieved what the heaviest attacks before have held and have been expected to hold, or bespeaks a Hindenburg line weakened by withdrawals to new positions in the rear, the moral effect is the same.

"The successors to Britain's 'contemptible little army'—citizens drawn from the civilian life — have shown that for them the vaunted Hindenburg line has no terrors. They have accomplished against a line defended by the Kaiser's own supermen all that the picked shocked troops of a dual Kaiserdom could accomplish against an Italian line undermined by a Bolsheviki Socialism."

The Times, commenting on the remarkable use of the tanks, declares that Germany must no wbe convinced that there is something about the war to be learned from the British.

In These War Times you want real food that contains the greatest amount of body-building material at lowest cost. The whole wheat grain is all food. Shredded Wheat Biscuit is the whole wheat in a digestible form. Two or three of these little loaves of baked whole wheat with milk and a little fruit make a nourishing, strengthening meal.

Crop Report Issued By The Dominion Census And Statistics Office

Increase in Area Devoted to Root and Fodder Crops—The Potato Yield—Fall Wheat and Fall Ploughing

THE ESTIMATED YIELD

OTTAWA, Nov. 22.—The Census and Statistics Office issued the following report on the yield, quality, and value of the root and fodder crops of 1917, the acreage and condition on 31st October of fall wheat sown for 1918, and the progress of fall ploughing.

Root and Fodder Crops.

The area this year under root and fodder crops, consisting of potatoes, turnips, etc., hay and clover, alfalfa, fodder corn, and sugar beets, amounts to about 9,521,500 acres, as compared with 8,843,500 acres in 1916, all crops except sugar beets sharing in the increase. In total value, at local prices, these crops amount for 1917 to $267,664,300, as compared with $246,781,200 in 1916. The total yield of hay and clover is estimated to be 13,634,700 tons from 8,225,000 acres, as compared with last year's high record of 14,527,000 tons from 7,821,200 acres, and it is higher than in any year previous to 1916. The yield per acre 1.66 ton, comparing with 1.86 ton last year, is higher than in any year since 1910, when it was 1.82 ton. The average value per ton is $19.40, as against $11.60 last year. Potatoes yield a total of 79,892,000 bushels, as compared with 6,297,000 bushels last year and 62,604,000 bushels in 1915; but the increase for this year is due to the larger area planted (656,958 acres, as compared with 473,000 acres in 1916), and not to the yield per acre, which, averaging only 121.61 bushels, is the lowest on record, excepting the year 1910, when the average was 119.36 bushels. The average yield last year was 133.82 bushels; in 1915 it was 130.81 bushels, and in 1914, 180 bushels, the record year. The average value of the potato crop is $1 per bushel, as against 61 cents last year, and the total value of the crop is $81,355,000, as compared with $50,982,300 last year.

Potato Yield.

By provinces, the potato yield is highest in Prince Edward Island and Nova Scotia, 175 bushels, the remaining provinces being in order of yield in bushels per acre as follows: British Columbia, 166.55; Alberta, 151.46; New Brunswick, 149.80; Ontario, 133.67; Saskatchewan, 133; Manitoba, 106; Quebec, 80. The prices per Manitoba and Alberta, 76 cents; and Quebec, $1.38; Ontario, $1; Nova Scotia, 92 cents; British Columbia, 91 cents; Saskatchewan, 85 cents; Manitoba and Algerta, 76 cents; and Prince Edward Island, 75 cents. The quality of the tubers is 92 per cent. of the standard in Nova Scotia, and 65 per cent. in Quebec; in the other provinces the quality is between 80 and 89 per cent.

The total yield of turnips and other roots is estimated at 63,451,000 bushels from 218,233 acres, as compared with 36,921,100 bushels from 141,820 acres in 1916. Of fodder corn the yield is 2,103,570 tons, as against 1,907,800 tons in 1916. Alfalfa yields 262,400 tons, against 286,750 tons last year, and sugar beets 117,600 tons, against 71,000 tons.

Fall Wheat and Fall Ploughing.

The area estimated to be sown to fall wheat for the season of 1918 is 711,112 acres, or 4 per cent. less than the area sown in 1916 for the crop of 1917; in Ontario the hard and dry condition of the soil made it difficult to sow fall wheat, and the area sown is estimated to be about 4 per cent. less than last year. In Alberta there is shown to be a slight increase, or 61,384 acres, as compared with 60,776 acres. There are also small areas sown to fall wheat in Manitoba, 4,129 acres, Saskatchewan 11,883 acres, and British Columbia 3,476 acres. The condition of fall wheat on 31st October for all Canada is 80 per cent. of the standard, as compared with 76 per cent. last year. In Ontario the condition is 80 per cent., and in Alberta it is 91 per cent. Of the total land intended for next year's crops 35 per cent. is estimated to have been ploughed by 31st October, the percentage proportions in the West being 40 for Manitoba, compared with 47 last year, 37 for Saskatchewan as against 28 and 38 for Alberta as against 21.

GRAIN MARKET

Cash oats were a little firmer yesterday, but quotations are not very materially changed, the range being about a quarter of a cent higher. The scarcity of mill feed is becoming more acute and the Board of Trade quotations yesterday were $1 to $2 higher.

Manitoba wheat — No. 1 northern, $2.23 1-2; No. 2 northern, $2.20 1-2; No. 3, $2.17 1-2, No. 4, $2.10 1-2, including 2 1-2 cent tax, in store Fort William.

Manitoba oats—No. 2 C.W. 75 1-4c; No. 3, 72c; extra No. 1 feed, 72 1-4c, in store Fort William; No. 1 feed, 72c.

Barley—$1.22 to $1.23.

CATTLE MARKET

Union Stock Yards—Receipts: 50 cars, with 200 cattle, 63 calves, 3,172 hogs, and 1,371 sheep and lambs.

The market closed strong at the week's advances for anything with quality in the line of butcher cattle. Choice heifers and steers are quoted strong from $10.50 to $11, but very few of these available in the week-end offerings. Choice heavy beef steers and baby beef are in a class by themselves, and as yet are hardly quotable, but are bound to command high prices. Choice fat cows are strong and higher than earlier in the week. Prices, in fact, for the best butcher cattle are 25 to 40 cents higher than the opening prices for the week.

Hogs were practically steady for yesterday at $18.25, fed and watered, but a few lots selling a quarter lower, and prospects lower for next week.

"THE FILM OF FEAR"

By ARNOLD FREDERICKS

"Anyone coming up by way of the fire escape could, of course, have raised the window from the outside, and closed it again after leaving the room," he said, more to himself than to Mrs. Morton. Then he got out on the fire escape and made a careful examination of its surface.

"When was this woodwork painted?" he asked Mrs. Morton through the window.

"About ten days ago."

"—m," Duvall examined the newly painted iron surface with rather a blank expression. That anyone had walked upon it since it had received its newly applied coat was, he felt out of the question. The paint was so new, so shiny, so yielding in its fresh glossiness that even treading as lightly as he could the marks of his shoes were plainly visible. He leaned over and pressed the palm of his hand upon the grated iron floor. The pressure of his hand was sufficient to dull the freshly painted surface. It seemed impossible that anyone, even in bare or stockinged feet, could have been upon the fire escape, without having left tell tale marks upon it. He re-entered the room and turned his attention to the other window.

Here the opportunities for entrance seemed even more unfavorable. The window was situated on the fourth floor. There was still another floor above with a window similarly located. Anyone might, of course, have been lowered from this window above, to the sill of the one at which he now stood, and entered the room in that way. He examined with care the white woodwork of the window sill, also freshly painted. It showed no marks. This of course, was not conclusive. He determined to investigate the occupants of the apartment on the top floor.

The wall of the brown sone dwelling house next door, which formed the east side of the narrow court, was of brick, covered with ivy. There were no windows in it whatever. Apparently it had once adjoined the wall of a similar house, where the apartment building now stood, and when the second house had been torn down to make way for the new building, the partition wall had remained as originally built, without windows.

Duvall examined the house next door with a great deal of interest. It was four stories high, with an attic, and rose to almost the same height as the fifth floor of the apartment house, owing, no doubt, to its ceilings being somewhat higher. In the sloping roof of the attic were three small dormer windows, facing the court, but the nearest one was perhaps twenty feet from the window of Ruth's room, in a horizontal direction and some eight or ten feet above it. There was no way in which anyone could have passed from the attic window to that of Ruth's room, even supposing such a person to be an expert climber. Anyone lowered from this window by means of a rope would merely have found himself hanging against a bare brick wall, 20 feet from the window of the girl's room. Duvall, accompanied by Mrs. Morton, made his way back to the library.

"You feel quite certain about the cook?" he asked.

"Sarah?" Mrs. Morton smiled. "What do you think? You've seen her."

"She certainly appears to be above suspicion," Duvall replied. "But one can never be sure. Suppose you send her out on some errand. I should like to search her room."

Mrs. Morton left him for a few moments, and presently the old colored woman passed down the hall and left the apartment. Then Duvall, accompanied by Mrs. Morton, made a thorough examination of the woman's room.

His search disclosed nothing of interest, nor was a similar search of the room of Nora, the maid, productive of anything that could in any way connect her with the mysterious warnings. There remained only the occupants of the fifth floor apartment. Duvall requested Mrs. Morton to summon the janitor of the building, and explain to him in a guarded way that he wished to ask him certain questions.

The janitor proved to be a good-natured fellow who seemed extremely anxious to please Mrs. Morton in every possible way. In answer to a question from the latter, he said that the apartment on the top floor was vacant, and had been vacant for nearly two months.

The family that had occupied it, he explained, had moved away and had requested the management of the building to sub-let it. This they had not succeeded in doing.

"May I go up and look it over?" Duvall asked.

"Sure you may," the janitor replied, and he and Duvall went to the elevator, leaving Mrs. Morton waiting in the library.

The apartment on the top floor had been newly done over, and smelt of fresh varnish and paint. The shiny floors had scarcely been walked upon since they had been refinished. The air was close and warm, by reason of the tightly closed windows. Duvall proceeded at once to the room directly over Ruth's bedroom.

To his disappointment the two windows were not only closed and fastened but so tightly stuck on account of the fresh paint that it required the combined efforts of the janitor and himself to open them. That they had been opened, since the painting was done, some ten days before, was clearly out of the question. Duvall made up his mind at once that however the person who had placed the mysterious message in Ruth's room had effected his or her entrance it had not been by way of the apartment on the top floor.

Somewhat disappointed he went to the floor below and thanked the janitor for his kindness, and rejoined Mrs. Morton.

"What have you discovered, Mr. Duvall?" the latter asked, eagerly.

"Nothing, so far. I confess the thing is somewhat of a puzzle.

"Someone must have been in Ruth's room."

"Not necessarily."

"But—why not?"

"You will remember that you found the letter on the floor. That would seem to me to indicate rather the opposite. If anyone had actually been in the room they would have been far more apt to place the message on the dressing table. That it was found on the floor indicates to my mind that it was in some way inserted, thrown, perhaps—through the window from without."

He took the letter in question from his pocket and sitting down, gazed intently at the surface of the envelope. Presently he passed it over to Mrs. Morton. "What do you make of that?" he said indicating with his finger a curious row of indentations, extending in a semi-circular line about mid-way of one of the lower edges of the envelope.

The marks were very faint but by turning the letter about in the light, Mrs. Morton at last managed to make them out. What they were, how they had been placed there, Duvall could not say. Yet their presence indicated something of value, of that he felt sure.

"I don't understand them at all," Mrs. Morton replied, returning the letter to him. "It looks as though someone had held the letter in a pair of pincers."

The suggestion conveyed by her words interested Duvall greatly. The same thought had been forming in his own mind.

He rose to his feet, his eyes shining with interest. Why could not such a pair of pincers or forceps have been attached to a long pole, such as a fishing pole and the letter in this way pushed through the window and released by pulling on a cord attached to one of the forceps' handles? The thing was perfectly practical, except for the fact, there seemed no place from which such a pole or rod might have been extended. He gazed out of the library window across the court to the row of dormer windows in the house opposite. The distance from the nearest of them to Ruth's window was, as he had before observed at least twenty feet horizontally, or some twenty-three feet on the diagonal. Then there was the distance from the window to the dressing table, at least eight feet more, to be added, making necessary a rod over thirty feet long. And he saw at a glance that even could a rod of this length be secured and handled the angle made by a line from the dormer window through Ruth's window was such that the end of the rod or pole would strike the floor only a few feet beyond the windowsill, and in no possible way could its further end be elevated sufficiently to deposit the letter in front of the dressing table. The thing was manifestly out of the question, even had the window of the girl's room been wide open. And Mrs. Morton had assured him with the greatest positiveness that it had been open at the time the letter was found, but a few inches. He returned the letters to his pocket and rose.

"The thing is astonishing—remarkable," he said to Mrs. Morton, who was regarding him intently. "I confess that so far I am quite in the dark. I feel sure that whoever entered the room or left the message, must have done so by means of the fire escape, and yet, how was it possible, without marks having been left upon the paint? I think I shall make another and even more careful examination, in the hope that some slight clues may have escaped me." He once more made his way towards the girl's room, followed by Mrs. Morton.

The room was precisely as they had left it. The window facing to the rear was wide open, Duvall having omitted to close it after his examination of the fire escape. The window fronting on the court was raised perhaps six inches. And yet to the utter amazement of them both, there lay on the floor of the room, near its centre, a square white envelope addressed in typewriting to Ruth Morton.

PILES ENTIRELY CURED.

Mr. Wm. Woodell, 367 St. John St., Carlton, St. John, N.B., writes:—"I have used Dr. Chase's Ointment for itching, bleeding piles, and as a result have been entirely cured. For years I was a great sufferer from this distressing ailment and can say that three boxes of Dr. Chase's Ointment cured me. You may use this letter for the benefit of others.

So Digestible That Even Babes Thrive Upon It

ASK your doctor what sort of cereal food is best of all for easy and thorough digestion. Answer: A balanced food that is non-constipating, granulated to allow free play of digestive juices, and complete with the natural salines and coarse brans retained. All of these essentials are abundantly provided by

Dr. Jackson's
Roman Meal

Even babies may use it freely (from the eighth month) with greatest benefit to not only their health but their development and growth.

When grains are "refined" the brans, salines and nutritive dark parts are removed. Only the highly starchy white parts are retained. These fine, starchy particles pack and clog the digestive tract, and ferment. The poisons thus produced enter the blood—and you feel the nasty, debilitating sensation due to indigestion and self-poisoning.

Roman Meal prevents indigestion, and helps other foods to digest, too. It is porous because granulated. The digestive juices can reach every particle quickly, thus promoting digestion. The brans also help to bring out the digestive juices. Result: Quick and thorough digestion, no fermentation and no self-poisoning, hence the sense of wellness when you eat freely of Roman Meal.

If Roman Meal does not positively relieve constipation we will refund your money. If you load up your system with foods that are impoverished and lack waste, the muscles of the digestive tract just stop working, and then you have constipation. Let Roman Meal relieve it.

Roman Meal is also a perfectly balanced food. Your digestion is never upset by too much starches or too much protein. That is why it "agrees" with everybody—it is properly balanced. Ask your doctor about it.

Roman Meal has all the nutritive value of entire berries of wheat and rye, and the seed of flax rendered both tasteless and odorless by electricity. Roman Meal makes the most satisfying porridge (must never be stirred except while mixing meal and water). It is also used for making pancakes, gems, bread, etc. At all grocers.

MOTHER OF FOUR CHILDREN

How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Kept Her Well and Strong.

Lincoln, Illinois.—"I have used Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for ten years with good results and I have four healthy children. This summer I was in a very run down condition and the very hot weather seemed more than I could stand, but I commenced taking your Compound in June and from then until September 25th, when my last baby was born, I got along much better than I had before. My baby was a girl and weighed 14 pounds at birth, and I recovered very rapidly which I am sure was due to your medicine. I am well and strong now, nurse my baby and do all my work. I had the same good results with your medicine when needed before my other children came and they are all healthy. My mother has taken your medicine with equal satisfaction. She had her last child when nearly 44 years old and feels confident she never would have carried him through without your help, as her health was very poor."—Mrs. T. F. CLOYD, 1355 North Gulick Ave, Decatur, Ill.

Expectant mothers should profit by Mrs. Cloyd's experience, and trust to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

NINE BOILS

Kept Coming On Neck One After the Other

Anyone who has ever suffered from boils, knows how sick and miserable they make you feel.

When you think you are about cured of one, another seems ready to take its place and prolong your wretchedness. All the poulticing and lancing you may do will not cure them and stop more coming.

Boils are simply bad blood bursting out, and the bad blood must be made pure before the boils disappear.

Burdock Blood Bitters is the greatest blood purifier known. It cleanses the system and removes every particle of foul material from the blood, then never another boil comes and the cure is permanent.

Mr. Geo. Ayers, 302 Gloucester St., Ottawa, Ont., writes: "I wish to tell you what I know about your wonderful Burdock Blood Bitters. In the spring I suppose my system needed cleaning out, for I had nine boils come on my neck one after the other. I quickly got a bottle of B.B.B., and before it was half finished I felt a great change, and it certainly put an end to my boils, otherwise I might have had a lot more. I recommend B.B.B. to all I can, for I know it to be a great remedy."

MUST NOT HOARD POTATO SUPPLIES

Or Food Controller May Find It Necessary to Fix a Maximum Price.

OTTAWA, Ont., Nov. 21.—A survey of the potato situation was made at the Food Controller's office to-day, and the opinion was expressed that it would be in the best interests of the growers to let their potatoes go on the markets freely at the present time, rather than to hold them for later delivery. The Food Controller stated that in case there was evidence of hoarding, or withholding supplies, he might find it necessary to fix maximum prices, allowing to producers and handlers only reasonable prices. The statement reads:

"The four Western Provinces have in sight a surplus of 2,830,000 bushels of potatoes, or about fourteen per cent. above their needs at the normal rate of consumption. The surplus is chiefly in Alberta and Manitoba.

"At present the prices to consumers in the Western Provinces range from 80c. per bushel in Alberta to $1.25 per bushel in the other three Provinces.

"In the five Provinces of Ontario, Quebec, New Brunswick, Nova Scotia and Prince Edward Island, there is an estimated surplus of about 4,000,000 bushels or about eight per cent. above the normal requirements. The surplus is chiefly in Prince Edward Island, New Brunswick and Nova Scotia.

"It is evident that there will be enough increased consumption of potatoes, from the substitution of them, in part for bread, to absorb the whole of the surplus of 4,000,000 bushels in the five Provinces, providing they are offered and delivered freely at reasonable prices in the cities of Ontario and Quebec, where they will be consumed. In some sections where there is a local surplus, the local price should be lower by the amount of the freight rate to the section or city when and where the supply from the surrounding district is not sufficient.

"If farmers in the Provinces do not let their potatoes get on the market freely at the present time it is altogether likely the price during the months of 1918 will not net them as much money then after making allowances for losses from shrinking and wastage in storage.

"In meeting the international food situation, it is very probable that the United States will not expect any shipments of potatoes from Canada, since there is a large surplus in their own country, estimated at 100,000,000 bushels.

"The Food Controller for Canada in case there is evidence of hoarding, withholding supplies by growers or dealer, may fix maximum prices, allowing to producers and handlers for alleged breach of contract.

15 TIMES THE MONEY

was spent on doctors' bills, without any benefit, as was spent in Zam-Buk, which effected a complete cure," says Mrs. Fred Gervais of 126 Stearry St., Montreal.

"A rash broke out on my baby's skin, and she became very fretful and lost weight. I took her to a doctor, who gave me some lotion to apply, but it did not do baby any good. I then took her to another doctor, but with the same result.

"Then a friend, who saw the condition baby was in, brought me some Zam-Buk, which she so highly recommended that I commenced using it. In one week's time baby looked much better, and before a month had elapsed she was quite well again.

"Baby is now the picture of health, and I think it wonderful that $2 worth of Zam-Buk brought about this cure when $30 spent in doctors' treatments did no good whatever! I certainly advise other mothers not to experiment with useless remedies, but to save their little ones unnecessary suffering and themselves needless anxiety and expense by using Zam-Buk in the first place."

Zam-Buk is also best for eczema, ringworm, scalp sores, boils, ulcers, abscesses, bad legs, blood-poisoning, piles, cuts, burns and scalds. All dealers or Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, 50c. box, 3 for $1.25.

JAFFA FAMOUS IN HISTORY OF WORLD

In Jaffa St. Peter restored the benevolent widow Tabitha to life. It was there St. Peter had the vision in the house of Simon the tanner of the sheet let down from heaven and the universality of Christianity.

It was destroyed by the Roman Emperor Vespasian in 68 A.D., and thousands of years before that paid tribute to the Egyptian Emperor Thothmes III.

King Solomon established it as the seaport of Jerusalem, and there he landed the cedars with which he built the Temple.

The Germans established a colony there thirty years ago, and it was there Prince Eitel Friederich landed to consecrate on the Mount of Olives the hospital which later turned out to be a fortress.

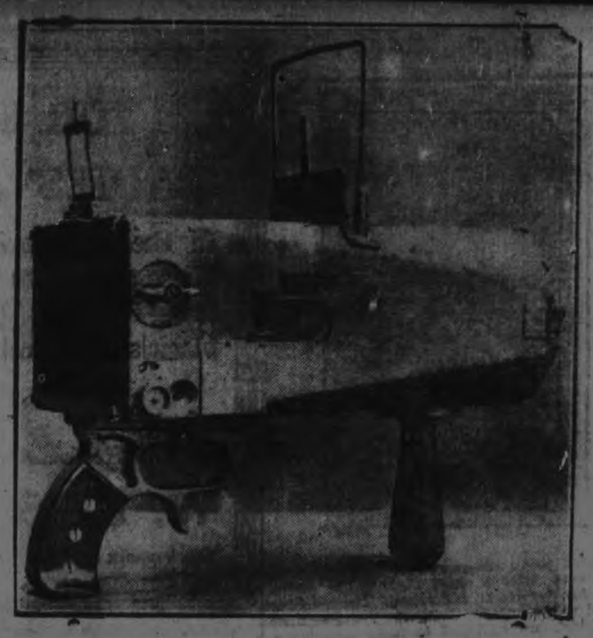
SAGE TEA TURNS GRAY HAIR DARK

It's Grandmother's Recipe to Bring Back Colour and Lustre to Hair

That beautiful, even shade of dark, glossy hair can only be had by brewing a mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Your hair is your charm. It makes or mars the face. When it fades, turns gray or streaked, just an application or two of Sage and Sulphur enhances its appearance a hundredfold.

Don't bother to prepare the mixture; you can get this famous old recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients at a small cost, all ready for use. It is called Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound. This can always be depended upon to bring back the natural color and lustre of your hair.

Everybody uses "Wyeth's" Sage and Sulphur Compound now because it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied. You simply dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through the hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair has disappeared, and after another application it becomes beautifully dark and appears glossy and lustrous. This ready-to-use preparation is a delightful toilet requisite for those who desire dark hair and a youthful appearance. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.



FIND PISTOL CAMERA EXCELLENT FOR AIRWORK—The difficulties experienced by aeroplane camera men in making photographs of enemy movements below has brought about the invention of a new device, the Pistol-camera, which greatly facilitates their work. The camera is very much like the graflex, except that the extention of the release to the trigger permits greater ease in making photographs of objects directly below.

Management the Key to Success.

Alexander J. Hemphill is chairman of the board of directors of the largest trust company in the world. He believes that the most important point that should be taken into account before investing funds in the securities of any company, particularly a new company, is the ability of its management. Mr. Hemphill gives this advice to prospective investors:

"In considering employment of funds in any concern the greatest emphasis should be placed on the ability of the management. I would say the most important consideration in any investment is management, management, management, and again management. It is not enough to know that it is honest. Its ability in that particular business should be established. Ninety-five per cent of the worth of an undertaking, I should say, is in the management."

Eleven Acres of Land.

The earth has a trifle less than 197,000,000 square miles of total surface. A little over a fourth of this surface is land, 55,000,000 square miles of it. And of this 28,000,000 square miles, or a scant fraction over a half, is soil that can be used for food production. The rest is desert, mountain range and polar regions. A little of this might possibly be reclaimed, but not very much.

So here we have two vital facts in the practical geography of today: There are 1,000,000,000 people on the earth to feed, and 28,000,000 square miles of tillable land with which to do it. Or, reduced to figures in which we are more accustomed to think, this means that one person must live off the production of every eleven acres on an average the world over. Don't say "It can't be done," for it must be done or somebody will starve.

Bubbling Cups and Germs.

A professor in a western university has discovered, says Popular Science Monthly, that small organisms lodge in a great many kinds of bubbling cup drinking fountains and for a curious reason based on an ancient physical principle.

A rubber tube and spout arrangement was prepared in such a way that it could be attached to an ordinary water faucet and a small jet of water projected directly upward. In this jet a small ball would remain in the air almost stationary, held up by the jet. The sphere might oscillate up and down slightly, but otherwise appeared to be settled permanently in place. The western professor mentioned has discovered that bacilli may oscillate up and down in some kinds of bubbling cups all day long day after day in the same way and for the same reason that the sphere does.

The Solitary Breakfast.

At first blush breakfast seems a sociable meal; at that hour a man is best satisfied or least discontented with himself and in a mood to make the most of the world. Human vitality is at its maximum; mere existence lugs exhilaration along with it; good humor mantles everything. But there is an uncertainty in company, even when you may choose it, for temperament is never to be wholly trusted (artists are dangerous people to meet at breakfast), and there are a thousand happenings—troubled sleep, early awakening, mosquitoes, a surmised mouse, no hot water, buttoned boots, putting studs in a shirt—that may occur between going to bed at night and coming down to breakfast in the morning, and ill adjusted feelings in even one member of the company may dampen the spirits of all. Company is no doubt the better state and brings out the full capacities for pleasure that lie in breakfast, but a solitary breakfast is safer; solitary pleasantness is more tempered, but it is more certain.—Henry Dwight Sedgwick in Yale Review.

Poise and Power.

The man of poise is the man of power. He has taken time to find himself. He knows his abilities and limitations. He knows when he is encroaching too far on his reserve vitality, and he has will power enough to stop—yes, quit—when he has gone the limit. As you cultivate poise you generate power. It is the silent yet powerful dynamo that gives momentum to your life and work.

Epilepsy.

The word lunatics is used twice in the New Testament (Matthew vi, 24, and xvii, 15). The word evidently refers to some disease affecting mind and body. By the description given in Mark ix, 17-26, it is concluded the disease is epilepsy.

A Psalm of Thanksgiving: Psalm 103.

1. Verse 1. It reads well in type to call upon our soul to bless the Lord, but is it wise and devout, and in good form to literally do this out aloud, etiher privately or in public? Why?

2. Verse 2. What is the benefit of the habit of frequently mediating on the wonderful goodness of God to us?

3. Verse 3. Why is not possible for God to forgive a part of our sins without forgiving all of them?

4. Many persons claim to have been cured of dangerous diseases by God, without any human aid; would you say or not, and why that it is God's plan for all sick people to be so cured?

5. Verse 4. In my lifetime I have had at least a dozen experiences where my life has been in eminent peril, and been rescued uninjured by what appeared to be the direct act of God; have any such experiences come under your own notice; if so, when and where?

6. Verse 5. What are the loving kindnesses, tender mercies, and other good things of the Lord, which have renewed your youth, and made your heart glad? (This is one of the questions which may be answered in writing by members of the Club.)

7. Verse 6. In view of a great many poor who are oppressed by the rich, and other glaring injustices which have not been made right, when does God intend to have these wrong things righted?

8. Verse 7. Why would you say or not, that Moses and the children of Israel to whom God made known his ways, are only types of all other spiritual people whom God has made his confidants?

9. Verse 8. What are God's qualities of mercy grace and anger?

10. What is your personal experiences of God's plentitude of mercy, and slowness to anger?

11. Verses 9, 10. At what stage in a sinner's career does God cease to "chide" him and why is it so?

12. What is the evidence that God has not dealt with us as our sins have deserved?

13. Verse 11. God's mercy is beyond all our conception of the most wonderful mercy; how can you demonstrate this from history, biography, personal acquaintances, or your own experience?

14. Verse 12. How far would the east be from the west if the earth were flat, and infinitely extended; and if God removes our sins from us that distance, what does that imply?

15. Verse 13. What is the pity of a loving father for his children; how is it manifested, and how does that represent God's love for us?

16. Verses 14-16. A very small thing disorganizes our bodies; we are more frail than a spider's web; our life at the longest is but as a dream in the night; we are here to-day and gone to-morrow; in view of this how should we live?

17. Verses 17, 18. Seeing that we can so absolutely depend upon God for here and over there, how may we make ourselves practically believe it, so that we shall have the glorious comfort and the wonderful power it implies?

18. Verses 19-22. What kind of a place will heaven be, seeing the kingdom of God will rule over all its inhabitants?

19. If angels spend their time in praising God what should prevent us from doing the same thing?

20. Seeing this psalm and the entire tenor of Scripture urges us to bless and praise the Lord, why is there no spontaneous praise in our church services?

"The next solacing fact is this: That most of this debt will be a debt we owe to ourselves. Great Britain is borrowing in the main from her own children. The debt is in the family . . . and the more we lend the less will Great Britain owe to others. And that is the most important fact in our national security and national wealth."

Happy will be the Nation which Owes its War Debts to its Own People

THE interest on Canada's war debt is now about $25,000,000 a year.

If that interest is paid in Canada to the Canadian people it will go back into circulation in Canada, instead of being sent out to foreign creditors.

Likewise when the principal comes due it will be kept in Canada for re-investment and thus will aid in the development of the nation and its resources.

And that is a most important fact in Canada's national security following the war, just as it is important to Great Britain's National security that her war debt shall be owed to her own children, when the war is over.

So when you buy Victory Bonds you not only directly help Canada to fight the war but you contribute to the national security after the war.

Little Boy, Innocent Cause Of De Saulles Tragedy, Will Cheer Mother During Trial

Twice a Week Joy, However, Fails to Cheer Dazed Defendant Does Not Greet Mother in Court

NEW YORK, Nov. 23. — Whatever fate may be in store for Mrs. Blanca de Saulles when the jury, eight members of which had been impanelled at the close of court in Mineola yesterday, shall have recorded their verdict, she has won a little victory which for the moment cheered her stricken heart. A boon precious to the mother, a privilege for which her counsel have been fighting, has been conceded.

After the adjournment of court yesterday afternoon, and again on Saturday she is to be permitted to clasp to her bosom her baby boy, Jack de Saulles, Jr., the child for whose possession in a frenzy of rage she shot to death the man who had begotten him.

Henry A. Uterhart, her counsel, said that however long the trial may last his sad faced client is to have that privilege twice a week. The lawyer added that he had forced that concession from relatives of the child's father, in whose keeping the boy has been since the tragedy, only under his threat of a writ of habeas corpus.

News Cheered Defendant.

The tedious proceeding of examining talesmen was suspended for a few minutes yesterday, when, at the request of defendant counsel, all the lawyers, accompanied by Justice Manning, retired into the privacy of the Justice's chambers. There was a conference there, at the conclusion of which this statement was passed across to the press tables; with the authoritative sanction of A. C. Vandiver, of the law firm of O'Gorman, Battle & Vandiver, retained in the interests of the De Saulle family and little Jack;

"Pursuant to the request of the defendant, Mr. Charles A. H. de Saulles, uncle of John Louger de Saulles, Jr., has arranged to have the latter visit the defendant after the trial Wednesday afternoon, and again on Saturday next, in the jail."

Mr. Uterhart said the reunion between mother and child would take place in Sheriff Seaman's quarters in the county jail. When he told the wan-faced little woman, who sits so pensively through the tedium of jury making—a task fraught with such vital import to her—she brightened perceptibly, but there was no demonstration of happiness on her part.

Appears as if Dazed.

Indeed, though at times she seemed to take a more lively interest in her surroundings than on Monday, those flashes of awakened interest were fleeting. For the most part during the dragging hours she appeared like a woman dazed. Her bearing suggested that of a much overwrought personality either in a state of semi-hypnosis or under the sedative influence of a drug.

Another feature of the day in court was the presence in the courtroom for the first hour and a half after the noon recess of the mother of the defendant, Senora Vergara Errasuriz, who attended the trial for the first time. She arrived just before the opening of the afternoon session, attended by Dr. J. Sherman Wight, of Brooklyn, and by Senor Castra-Ruiz, the Chilian Consul. The party was seated in the front row of spectators' seats a few feet directly behind the defendant. The young mother, who is on trial for the forfeiture of her troubled life, did not see the entrance of her mother. But one of her attorneys whispered the news to her and the ghost of a smile stole across her pale features. But she did not look around in greeting. Later, after court had adjourned, mother and daughter met for a few brief moments in the Sheriff's quarters.

Before that tense meeting took place, however, the strain had been too much for the mother, and Dr. Wight and Sheriff Seaman had led her out of the courtroom suffering from a recurrence of those attacks of heart failure to which she has been subject. It was a few minutes after two o'clock when she swayed weakly toward the Brooklyn physician. With his assistance she was led out of the room and to the Justice's private chambers, where she rested for a time. A cup of tea was brought to her later, and then she was taken in an automobile to Crossways, the estate near Roslyn whence her daughter on the night of August 3 last had started on the pilgrimage that ended in tragedy.

Physician Important Witness.

Dr. Wight, who has been in attendance upon the mother, and also since last summer upon the daughter in the Mineloa jail, is to be one of the important witnesses for the defence when the trial reaches that phase which is expected to demonstrate the mental irresponsibility of the defendant at the time of the commission of the crime. For months he has had every opportunity to study the mental and physical condition of the prisoner.

Another expert who is expected to strengthen greatly the fabric of the defence based upon emotional insanity and mental incompetence is Dr. Louis C. Johnston, who is described as a physiological chemist and alienist of high attainments.

The prostration of the defendant's mother recalled the fact that twice after she had started on her long voyage from Chili to join her daughter, once at the port of leaving and again in Havana, attacks of heart failure had compelled her to defer her arrival here so that she might undergo treatment. The elder woman is remarkably young looking and distinctly handsome. Her regular features, her radiant hair and supple figure prove at first glance that the classic beauty of the daughter was the child's born heritage.

The Chilian senora was garbed in mourning. Above the glossy wealth of hair she wore a black silk "mushroom" hat. A black spotted veil was drawn over the hat and down beneath her chin, but it could not conceal the facial colour that proved in turn that however hereditary may have been the daughters beauty, the present chalk-like palor of her skin is no part of that birthright. Once a black tailor-made suit the mother wore a cloak of the same sombre hue, buttoned to the neck, and surmounted by a fur collar.

Prisoner Impassive, Mother Faints.

Until the moment of her illness the senore seemed to have her emotions well under control. She sat between Dr. Wight and the dark skinned counsel of her native country, exchanging a word with them now and again, and occasionally smiling as the reply of some stupid talesman awoke her sense of humor. Many observers thought it was one of these obtuse talesmen whose stupidity precipitated her prostration.

The lawyers were struggling with a member of the panel, who seemed to be unorthodox on the theme of capital punishment. "Well," said the examiner "supposing that the statutes of the State prescribe for the crime of murder in the first degree the penalty of death—what we call capital punishment—would the fact that the defendant in this instance chances to be a woman, a young and attractive woman, make you hesitate to vote for conviction any more than you would in the case of a man?"

The question, blunt perhaps to the point of brutality ,aroused no responsive sign of emotion on the impassive face of the woman on trial for her life. There was not a twitch of those taper fingers, although most transparent in their bloodlessness, as they lay clasped on her knees. She seemed utterly oblivious of such portents of possible doom. But the mother, sitting just behind her, turned pale and swayed toward her escort. A moment later she was hurried from the room.

In a second row of seats, directly in rear of the senora, were her other daughter, Amelia, and her son, William. Across the court room seemingly as far as possible from the Chilean party, sat Charles A. H. de Saulles, brother of the slain Yale athlete and uncle of "Little Jack." The child has been of late in the custody of the Heckshers, who were partners of his father in the real estate business.

News of Interest From Hastings

HASTINGS, Nov. 21.—The public auction sale at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. Londerville on Saturday afternoon was quite a success. Mr. and Mrs. Londerville are going to reside in Peterborough.

The death occurred of John Pickens in his 66th year. Deceased had been in failing health for some time, and gradually sank until the end came. The funeral was held on Sunday afternoon to the T. V. Cemetery, where interment was made.

Rev. Isaac Snell was in Fenella on Sunday, preaching anniversary sermons for the pastor of the church.

A number of the boys of Hastings and vicinity have been called to Campbellford to answer before the Exemption Tribunal there.

Mr. Dutton, of Peterborough, occupied the pulpit in the Methodist Church on Sunday evening, and was most acceptable. His subject was "Clouds," and he drew attention to several of the clouds mentioned in the Bible, and drew from each one a number of practical lessons.

Rev. Isaac and Mrs. Snell are visiting friends in Toronto for a few days.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Armstrong are moving into the house on Albert St., recently vacated by Mr. and Mrs. Petrie.

Mr. and Mrs. Whitney, of Havelock, spent Saturday with friends here.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Hore, of Campbellford, spent Sunday with friends near Hastings.

Mr. Albert Brooks and Mr. Arthur Fleming arrived home on Saturday, after a pleasant outing deer-hunting.

Mr. Dutton, of Peterborough, spent Sunday, the guest of Mr. and Mrs. A. Fleming.

Mr. Ed. Dodd left during the week for Oshawa, where he has secured a position for the winter. We wish Ed. success in his new venture.

Mr. Boehm, of Toronto, was in town for a short time last week.

Mr. Julian Carter, of Havelock, spent Friday with his mother in town.

Following the rain of Sunday, the weather has turned decidedly colder.

The regular monthly meeting of the W.M.S. of the Methodist Church was held on Thursday afternoon. The members are prepearing a box of quilts, clothing, etc., to be sent as a Christmas reminder to some needy station.

Mrs. Stenson, of Peterborough, spent a few days, the end of the week, with her sister, Miss A. Peters.

Mr. Wattin, of Peterborough, was in town during the week on a business trip.

A rousing rally was held in the Epworth League on Monday evening, when a good miscellaneous programme was rendered, the most interesting item being a debate. Resolved that women are more useful in the world than men. The affirmative was sustained by Miss O. Doxsee, Miss Laura Smith and Miss Jessie Wilcox, while Messrs. James Hormel, Willie Tate and Jack Parsons upheld the negative side. The judges were Mrs. N. Beavis, Miss Conley, and Mr. Wm. Warner. A number of very important points were advanced by either side, and after considerable thought the decision was given in favour of the affirmative, but only by a very slight margin.

The town flag is again lowered to half-mast, the sad news having just arrived that Mr. Leo Logan had shed his life's blood on the far away battle line. The news has come as a shock to the family, to whom universal sympathy is extended.

Mr. Daniels Tells Of New Success In Locating U-Boats

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Out of the more than forty thousand suggestions made to the Naval Consulting Board since the beginning of the war none has yet led to the evolution of a device which will insure the elimination of the submarine as an element of naval warfare.

The Navy Department, according to a statement authorized by the Secretary, Mr. Daniels, has abandoned the idea that the submarine will be overcome by a miraculous invention. This does not mean that the undersea vessels are invincible. Experience has proven, on the contrary, that the most effective weapon against them is the service boat typified by the modern destroyer. The success with which they are being hunted down has been shown in the reports of sinkings of merchant vessels, which are constantly growing less.

Of the forty thousand suggestions many have afforded some aid to various branches of the war service. All have been given careful consideration. Some, involving new principles, have been studied very carefully. Most of them have been found to be impracticable because of a lack of understanding of the fundamental problems involved. The Naval Consulting Board is distributing a pamphlet to inventors in order that they may understand the nature of the task.

The statement authorized by the Secretary of the Navy divides the suggestions into three classes, as follows:

First—Methods to accomplish the destruction of submarines, involving detection and destruction after detection.

Second—Means of avoiding submarine attack, involving instructions for merchant vessels, proper handling of vessels, camouflage, smoke screens and boxes and other confidential information known to our naval authorities.

Third—Protection of ships against torpedo hits.

The idea that the submarine will be overcome by a miraculous invention," the statement said, "is not now seriously considered. The more intimate knowledge the civilian obtains on this subject the more convinced he is that the submarine can be conquered by persistently hunting him down with the weapon of which he is most afraid. This is the armed service boat, equipped with all the latest scientific devices and typefied in the modern torpedo boat destroyer. Foreign naval authorities have frankly stated their admiration of the degree of perfection of American designs.

"In regard to the protection of ships against torpedo attack, the undeniable evidence of recent months of submarine activity has demonstrated that the immunity of a vessel depends very largely on its speed and manoeuvring ability. It is significant that the percentage of vessels having speed of fifteen knots or more which have suffered from submarine attack is very small, while the losses of slow vessels, whose speed is less than that of a submerged submarine, have been very large. There is a possibility that some artificial means of protecting cargo carrying vessels may be found practicable. In no other field have so many suggestions or so many duplicate inventions been presented to the Board.

MAKE PROGRESS IN DETECTION

"The detection and destruction of submarines is the most important subject under consideration. It is generally conceded that the destruction of a submarine is a comparatively simple matter if she can be located. There is important progress in this direction.

"The Naval Consulting Board, composed of twenty-four distinguished American scientists and inventors, of which Mr. Thomas A. Edison is president, is constantly at work on problems of warfare, and careful consideration is given to the suggestion of any citizen and a searching investigation made if the idea is promising. It is recognized that the seeming impractical device of to-day may find application to-morrow, and the endeavour is to give due study to each separate idea and render full justice to the inventor. The task of sifting the material submitted is a heavy one, widely assisted by the engineering genius of the country. In three days in May, when the record was established, more than two thousand separate pieces of mail were received."

FUEL IN ONTARIO.

A Peterborough correspondent of the Globe writes the following letter:

Some days ago I noticed a letter from one of your correspondents suggesting that the Ontario Government should lay aside the sum of $25,000, to be paid to the first man who discovers coal in Ontario.

In view of the shortage of fuel now in Canada—a condition that has arisen previously—the suggestion is a good one.

But why wait for such a discovery, which may never be made, when it is a well known fact that there are millions of tons of peat throughout Ontario, within easy access of present railwa facilities, only waiting for development?

It is a known fact, which can be verified at the Department of Mines in Ottawa, by anyone who desires, that the peat development by the said Department of Mines on the Alford bog, near Ottawa, and subsequently carried on by private parties, produced peat on a merchantable basis, which was sold in both Montreal and Ottawa in considerable quantities, and which gave eminently satisfactory results as fuel.

That plant, owing almost entirely to conditions arising out of the war, was forced to close down in 1914, but it is still intact, and ready to prove its efficiency if it were only backed up with sufficient capital.

Why not induce the Ontario government at this critical time to boost this very important industry with the necessary funds to develop an industry which is lying at our very doors? Thus we could keep our money in our own country, and effect an enormous saving at this time, when economy is so vitally important.

It is more than probable the sum quoted by your correspondent would place the above-named plant in successful operation and if past records are correct would supply several thousands of tons of excellent fuel for next season at a profitable rate, and lend a great stimulation to further effort in that direction.

The government should lead, not follow. Peat.

Peterboro, Ont.

If the government offered the amount of the Victory Loan for the discovery of coal in Ontario, the money would not be claimed. The geologist—and science is virtually infallible—tells us that there is no coal underlying the province of Ontario, unless possibly in the Hudson Bay region; so that we may as well make up our minds that we shall never have Ontario coal.

But, as the correspondent points out, we have immense peat deposits in this province within reasonable reach of railway transportation.

We have a fuel crisis now that makes us regret that our government and private enterprise have neglected a supply source of fuel that would be of great value at the present time, when fuel of all kinds—coal and wood—are almost unattainable.

It has been demonstrated by government experiments at the Alford peat beds in Eastern Ontario, that the commercial conversion of peat into fuel that would command ready sale, is a practicable thing. It is also stated that owing to war conditions the plant was closed down in 1914, but is still in working order.

War conditions may be an excuse, but not a justification, for government inaction. It is war conditions that have created, to a very large extent, the fuel shortage. It is war conditions that demand that instead of "quitting," we should make greater endeavour.

It was war conditions that inspired Canada to making munitions, and to an extent that three years ago would have been thought impossible.

The government, instead of letting plants go out of business, provided the money to finance munition production.

We have governments to do things that the unorganized, unequipped and unaided people cannot do for themselves. If the government financed munition production; if it is preparing to finance the purchase of food, it can find money to finance greater production of food, and if it can find money for this, it can find money for developing Ontario's fuel deposits.

The government with a very commendable enterprise demonstrated at the government peat works at Alford, that the conversion of peat into good fuel at reasonable prices is a commercial possibility.

With energetic government action, the manufacture of peat fuel from our inexhaustible deposits could be carried on, on a large scale.

Look at the immense amount of complicated machinery that has been produced to make munitions. The money was provided to meet an emergency.

There is a similar emergency existing now in the matter of fuel.

The immediate supply of peat fuel might not be large for a time, but it would fill a gap and supply a large number of persons, leaving more coal to be distributed among those who might not get peat.

The Union government is pretty busy now trying to win an election. But money will do almost anything—work marvels of productive enterprise. And the people are pouring money into the government coffers by the millions daily; and the supply of fuel is an emergent duty.

Lack of fuel in our homes conduces to the national ill-health and a lowering of the national vitality and capacity for service which in some form is now demanded of everybody.

The other day lack of fuel killed a man in Toronto. He was chilled into fatal pneumonia while waiting to be examined for military service. Cold, unheated or impartially heated homes will increase the death rate.

Fuel for our homes is absolutely necessary to keep our people fit, to preserve health and life.

Much more than academic action by the government is needed. Food Controllers and Fuel Controllers, who chiefly confine their activities to talk, may be good in their way. But we want something with, as Lord Northcliffe says, "more punch and pep"—we need not so much Fuel Controllers and Food Controllers; we need Fuel producers and Food producers.

The government is not energetically enough handling the Greater Production Campaign. We need millions more of food production. We have the soil, the farms—but we haven't the "punch and pep."

When food production is such an indispensable requisite, should there not be extensive and intensive mobilization of production forces?

We have organized and sent overseas, Forestry battalions, and Railway Construction battalions.

Why not organize in Ontario and Canada Food Production battalions?

We have many men, not fit for the firing line, who could be enrolled in such battalions.

The government has at its command millions of untilled wheat lands in the west, close to railways.

Some such extensive scheme of production could be financed by the government, organized by the government, and a big thing done to meet the exurgent demand for winning the war—more wheat—more food.

GEORGE STREET NEXT HOOPERS

THE SAME SPIRIT AS NOW WAS IN CANADA A CENTURY AND A QUARTER AGO

A gentleman who has many valuable historical documents, has compiled the following showing that the spirit of imperial loyalty that prevails now was in evidence in Canada a century and a quarter ago:

At this time when Canada is doing its part in an Empire War, it may be of interest to some of your readers to be reminded of the stand taken by the then sparsely settled Province of Upper Canada in the year 1793, during the war with France, and we find from the Journals of the House of Assembly, the following interesting particulars.

At the second session of the House held on the 31st May, 1793, a message was received from Lieutenant-Governor Simcoe which opens with the statement that the persons who at present exercise the supreme authority in France, having declared war against His Majesty, he thought it proper to recommend to their early attention the new modelling of a Militia Bill, and proceeds to state that it was with great satisfaction that he was able to say that the insidious attempts of those who envy the prosperity of the British Nation have been completely counteracted and defeated by the wisdom of His Majesty's councils, and by the affectionate attachment and spirited resolves of all ranks and descriptions of His Majesty's subjects, and that the principles on which those who exercise authority over the French Nation support the war, which they have so unjustly begun against His Majesty's allies, cannot fail to call to recollection how often it has been necessary for Great Britain to stand forth as the protector of the liberties of mankind, and expresses a hope that His Majesty's arms directed to the security of His allies, will be crowned with success, and that it will be the felicity of the British Empire to maintain the independency of Europe against all modern aggressions upon those equitable principles which our ancestors so wisely contributed to establish.

HAS AN ECHO IN THESE DAYS.

This reads almost as if it might have been written at the time of the commencement of the present war. From the reply by the House to this address it would appear that there were also spies and traitors busy in England then, as it states "that the House had heard with pleasure that those whose secret engines of destruction had vainly endeavoured to disturb the laws of the parent country, had been discovered and frustrated. The House also adopted an address for presentation to the King, stating that in that remote, but flourishing, part of His Majesty's Dominions the fame of those tumults and disorders that live in Europe had but lately arrived, but conceiving that at a period so important, it was the duty of all good men and faithful subjects to manifest themselves to their King and country, begged to lay before the King their loyalty, and assured him that if it should be necessary to add to their tried zeal, that no exertions on their part would be found wanting.

CANADA OFFERS AID.

The war is also referred to in the reports of the third session of the Second Parliament held on the 29th June, 1799, in an address from the House to the Lieutenant-Governor, which expresses their most serious concern at finding the Mother Country still obliged to maintain a war against restless destroyers of the peace of mankind, a war as unprecedented in lawless outrages from her unprincipled enemies, as necessary for the preservation of everything that is sacred to her or us, and after stating that Upper Canada had not felt the more immediate evils of the war or the heavy charges attending it, that the assembly would do all in its power, however little it might be, to alleviate them, and also that as the accounts of the year showed a surplus, the House requested the Lieutenant-Governor to accept this sum, at the same time expressing regret at not being able to do more, and the expectation that with the blessing of God on their industry and the protecting hand of the Mother Country, the means of being more useful would increase.

It afterwards appeared, however, from the Provincial Treasurer's report, that there was no surplus in 1799, but a deficit, so nothing was sent to England. At the session held on the th of June, 1800, the Lieutenant-Governor's address expressed his satisfaction for the loyalty which the House had manifested to the King and its readiness to support his exertions for the security of the Empire by the rant of the surplus of their resources. The address also proceeds as follows:

"The guilty and deluded nation which has so long been the scourge of Europe still wastes its strength and exhausts its resources, in enslaving its own subjects and oppressing the Nations around it, consistent in nothing but in basely crouching to the Tyrant of the day, and yielding to usurpers a degree of obedience which its lawful Sovereign never exacted. Force and artifice are alternately employed to violate neutralities to break the most solemn treaties, to overturn established authorities and to trample on liberty, property and life." The reply from the House laments that there is no prospect of peace but states that however so much aware of its beneficent effects, they are more sensible of the necessity of a war so essential to the support of their constitution, and the dignity of the nation.

At the second session of the Third Parliament, held on the 25th May, 1802, in the Lieutenant-Governor's address he congratulates the House on the preliminaries of peace having been signed between Great Britain and the French Republic.

It is interesting to note that up to the Session held in 1802, the proclamation calling the House together, described George III. as "King of Great Britain, France and Ireland," but apparently by reason of the union of Great Britain and Ireland having taken place in 1801, and the war with France being in process of settlement, this was changed in 1802 to "King of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland," the word France being omitted.

At the third session of the Third Parliament held on the 27th of January, 1803, the Lieutenant-Governor's address announced the termination of hostilities between the Mother Country and the other belligerent powers of Europe and that official information of the signature of the definite Treaty of Peace had been received.

In the reply by the House the hope is expressed that the peace may be a lasting one. This was a vain hope, as at the session held on the 8th February, 1804, the Lieutenant-Governor announced that hostilities had again been renewed, and stated that among the first objects that he would recommend to their deliberations was the security of this part of His Majesty's Dominions by some wise and salutary law, calculated to protect the King's government against aliens, and to afford His Majesty's subjects in the province all the internal security which could be derived from timely and well concerted legislative precaution.

The reply by the Assembly stated that it was full convinced of the good effects to be derived from timely precautions against the insidious designs of hostile aliens and of the indispensable necessity of assisting by every means in its power to give energy to the government in the province, and promised to give such aid, and to make such laws as might best protect the persons and prosperity of the inhabitants.

JAFFA, CAPTURED BY THE BRITISH FORCES—The picture shows the town of Jaffa, which is the terminus of Jerusalem railway, which has been occupied by General Allenby's forces. The Turks are continuing their retreat northward.

Were Treated Like Dogs.

The revolting cruelty to which British prisoners are subjected in German military camps was described by repatriated soldiers who arrived in London recently. Private George Elsley, of a Welsh regiment, who was captured in September, 1914, said:

"Although wounded, we were kept without food or water for days, and when one of us begged for something to drink, the nurse brought him a glass of water and threw it in his face. Later we were removed to a hospital at Schwerin, where we were well treated, and later still to the Gustrow internment camp, where we were treated like dogs.

"Although we were badly wounded, on our arrival at Gustrow we were kept standing in the snow, without boots, from 1 a.m. until 10 o'clock at night. Several of us nearly died of starvation. When we complained we were either prodded with bayonets, or the 'English blockade' was given as a reason for the shortage of food. The bedding was covered with vermin, and we slept on straw on the floor.

"After weeks of this hell we were set to work to build a canal. All the wounded men with arms and legs had to work, and if a man slacked off he received the butt end of a rifle. One day we saw several wounded men stabbed by their guards, and they were afterwards carried to a hospital. One man who refused to work was taken away and we never saw him again."

BYNG!

The commander of the Third British Army that has smashed the Hindenburg line is Sir Julian Byng, who was for a year commander of the Canadian forces in France, and won their respect and enthusiastic admiration.

AUSTRALIA INSURES SOLDIERS

"Sheep King" of Commonwealth Responsible for Scheme.

A scheme for insuring soldiers from Australia in this war which was launched early in July by Sir Samuel McCaughey "the sheep king" of the Commonwealth, is now in operation.

Sir Samuel is an octogenarian bachelor pastoralist who lives at North Yanco, New South Wales. To him Australia owes much. He was a pioneer irrigationist, and his sheep ranch at North Yanco is one of the finest on this continent. A few years ago his sheep properties totalled 2,800,000 acres, ad the number of sheep shorn on them was a million yearly. The wool often reached more than $2,500,000 in value. He came to Australia 60 years ago from his native town in the north of Ireland and is a member of the Legislative Council, the upper house of the New South Wales Parliament. Prior to the war he made important contributions to patriotic funds, including one for equipping troops for the Boer War, and his charities then and now are numerous.

Sir Samuel's latest patriotic gift, the terms of which are contained in a deed of declaration now made public, is an undertaking to insure the lives of 500 Australian soldiers. Each policy is to be a special one in an Australian company for $1,000 payable if the insured soldier meets with death or total disablement. Only recruits who have enlisted since early in July are eligible. The deed provides for other patriotic Australians joining with Sir Samuel in the scheme.

"Sir Samuel stipulates that the children of the men insured "shall include illegitimate as well as legitimate children, and dependents shall include the mothers of such illegitimate children." This liberal provision has excited favorable comment in Australia.

The work of carrying out the scheme has been entrusted to a board of four prominent citizens. A year after peace has been declared, should there be any unexpected funds, the money may in the discretion of this board be spent for the further benefit of the insured soldiers or their dependents, or it may be turned over to any philanthropic fund or institution connected with the war.

Snapshot Caught "U" Boat.

You can't catch a submarine by putting salt on its tail—but you can by using a camera. At least, that is the recipe of Lord and Lady Egerton.

Recently Lord and Lady Egerton were holidaying on the Irish coast. While strolling along the rocky shore his lordship decided to take a dip in the briney.

Lady Egerton was carrying her kodak at the time and in a spirit of play snapped him, as he cavorted in the water. Thereupon a suspicious officer on patrol pounced upon the couple. Of course, they told who they were, but nevertheless the camera was seized. Their names and address were also recorded for the authorities.

Afterward, the titled pair in fear and trembling waited for something to happen. They weren't sure whether imprisonment or fines or both, for photographing in "forbidden areas" stared them in the face.

Then came the letter from a high British official, enclosing a check for $500. It was Lady Egerton's bonus for the capture of a German submarine.

Weak with wonder her ladyship read the glad tidings. Afterward she gave the money to a war charity, it is said.

When developed by the authorities, the film had shown up two conspicuous objects. One was Lord Egerton in his watery garments and the other a hostile submarine's periscope. The British chasers started out for their unconscious prey. According to the story, they rounded it up before it could say "Jack Robinson."

Origin of Khaki.

Originally khaki meant a dust-colored fabric of the character of canvas drill, or holland, used by the British and native armies in India. It seems to have been first worn by the Guides, a mixed regiment of frontier troops, in 1848.

MOTHERS OF CANADA PREPARE FOR TROUBLE

When a girl becomes a woman, when a woman becomes a mother, and when a woman passes through the change of middle life, are the three periods of life when health and strength are most needed to withstand the pain and distress often caused by severe organic disturbances. Many thousands in this section would testify as do the following:

St. Catharines, Ont.—"Over forty years ago I was restored to health by taking Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It was after medicine and doctors had failed to help me or give relief. I had, through overwork, become all run-down in health. I was weak and finally became a nervous wreck. The 'Prescription' was recommended to me, and at the time I started to take it I had not been able to do anything for over a year. I took the "Favorite Prescription' and the 'Golden Medical Discovery' as well. It took several bottles, but I was completely restored to good health and since that time when I have felt the need of these medicines I have taken them and always with perfect satisfaction."—Mrs. Wm. Baker, 33 Page St.

Stratford, Ont.—I was all run-down, weak, nervous. I also suffered with severe pains through my back. I was very miserable when a friend advised me to try Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and one bottle seemed to give renewed strength. It stopped the pain in my back, also helped my nervous condition. It is surely a good tonic for women.—Mrs. Florence Cullum, 100 Milton St.

French Prisoner Senenced to Die For Million-Mark Fire.

COPENHAGEN, Nov. 22. — The trial by court-martial of a French prisoner of war has brought out the hitherto suppressed fact that the commissary storehouse at Augsburg, Bavaria, containing hay, straw, and flour from last year's crop, to the value of nearly 1,000,000 marks, has been destroyed by an incendiary fire.

The prisoner admitted having set the fire, and was condemned to death.

Always Had Headaches

Liver Was Torpid and Bilious Spells Brought Sick Headaches — Lost Much Time, But is Now Completely Cured.

Newtown, N.B., Nov. 23.— Here is convincing evidence that however much you may suffer from liver trouble and consequent biliousness there is cure in the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney Liver Pills.

Overeating is the most common cause of sluggish liver action. You lose your appetite, have distressing bilious spells, usually accompanied by headache and vomiting, the bowels become irregular, constipation and looseness alternating, digestion is upset and you get irritable and downhearted.

No treatment so quickly awakens the action of the liver and bowels as Dr. Chase's Kidney Liver Pills. For this reason this medicine is wonderfull ypopular and has enormous sales.

Mr. Charles R. Tait, Newton, N.B., writes: "I was nearly always troubled with headaches, and would often have to stop work for a day or two. I lost many a night's sleep ever month with bilious sick headaches, and although I tried doctors' medicines and also many other patent medicines, it was without success. When I had these headaches I would vomit, and could keep nothing on my stomach.

"I purchased a box of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills from G. M. OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

A Summer Cruise

It Involved an Adventure

By JAMES BRAINARD

There have been two cases of ships discovered in good condition, but deserted by their crews. One was found on the open sea under sail, the other at anchor on a coast. These two are all that thus far have been recorded.

It remains for me to record a third. I am a gentleman of leisure given to yachting. I am fond of cruising on my yacht either with a party of friends or a single male companion. During the last season I started from the New York Yacht club's dock at New York for a cruise eastward along the coast. I put in at several places on the route —New London, Marblehead, Portland and other ports—for fresh table supplies, then steamed on, intending to enter the St. Lawrence river and visit the Thousand islands.

We met a number of yachts, for it was in the season, and yachtsmen are prone in hot weather to occupy the cooler regions of the northeastern coast. One evening while steaming across one of those beautiful bays that indent the rocky coast of Maine we saw near the shore a steam yacht riding at anchor within a cable's length of the shore.

Alec Wingate was with me on this cruise. Alec was the son of a British baronet and had domestic troubles. He had married the daughter of a colonel in the English army, a very beautiful girl, who, after a couple of years of married life, during which she and her husband had lived very happily together, suddenly disappeared. Whether she had been kidnaped or had gone off with a lover no one could tell. There was no evidence, at least none that any one had ever got hold of, to point in either of these directions. The only other theory was that she had been murdered. Wingate had hunted for her all over the world and had come to America for the purpose. I had met him and, having taken a liking to him, begged him to divert his mind from his loss by going on a cruise with me.

Our course lay near enough to the anchored yacht to enable us to see with glasses what she was—that is, we could have seen any flags, people or other distinguishing marks. But there were neither people nor flags. She was a steamer yacht, but no smoke was being emitted from her stack. Her stern was at one time toward us, and what was my astonishment to see no name on her.

We slowed up, expecting every minute to see some one appear on the deck, but after waiting half an hour without any one appearing it began to look as if either a party had gone ashore from her for some purpose or she had been deserted. The first of these theories was not very likely correct. In the first place, at least one member of the crew would have been left in charge, and, in the second, this was a perfectly wild coast, and there could be no object for any party to go ashore unless for water.

I gave orders to steam up alongside the nameless yacht. The hour was about 7 in the evening, and a fine dinner was set in the cabin. A fire was burning in the galley. Every boat belonging to the yacht was in its place. In the lockers in the after part of the vessel were articles of male and female wearing apparel, the latter indicating that ladies had been aboard.

And here the mystery changes from those sea secrets I have mentioned, or, rather, another mystery is added. Alec Wingate recognized a dress contained in a rosewood locker as one that had belonged to his wife. He at once became wild with varying emotions. There was pleasure at this evidence that his wife at least had been recently alive. There was bitterness lest she might have been living on this yacht with a paramour. There was fear lest, though she had so recently lived, she had met with some misfortune.

To allay this excitement I told Wingate that he might easily be mistaken in the dress. But he said that it was the one in which he had most liked to see his wife arrayed and the only one of her wardrobe that he would surely recognize.

We went through the yacht from stem to stern looking for some explanation of the mystery. Every stateroom, every receptacle, was ransacked. The firebox door stood partly open, and I looked in to see if materials had been put in to light a new fire. The old fire was still smoldering. The only thing we discovered was that the yacht had undoubtedly been made in England. And the maker's marks on the finishing and furniture were English. The upholstery had been purchased of a well known upholsterer in London.

Having satisfied ourselves that there was no one aboard, we left "the nameless" and returned to our own vessel. I induced Wingate to sit down to dinner—he would eat nothing—and discuss the matter. He wanted to go ashore the next day and search the coast. This seemed to me a useless expenditure of time. I had come out for a cruise and did not like the prospect of waiting while a search party beat the beach in a desolate country where there was nothing but wild moose or caribou. But Wingate suggested that the party on "the nameless" might have gone ashore for hunting purposes, and I at last consented that the next day he might take three of the crew, go ashore and spend twelve hours in looking for the deserters of the yacht.

But over night something occurred to render this inadvisable. We set a light on "the nameless" and left one man to watch on our own vessel, which was all that was necessary since we were at anchor in a small bay in good weather. One man watched till eight bells, midnight, when another man took his place. Wingate wished me to put a man on "the nameless," and I did.

At two bells in the morning Wingate, who had slept little during the night, looked out of the porthole in his stateroom for the yacht. Not seeing her and supposing that he was not on the right side to see her, he got up and went on deck. "The nameless" was nowhere to be seen. He came to my room to announce the fact. I asked him what the watch reported about the disappearance, and he said that he had found the man sound asleep.

Putting on a bath robe, I went on deck. The first watch said that "the nameless" was in position when he was relieved, so she must have pulled out during the second watch. I asked if anything was known of the man who had been stationed on her, but was told that he had neither been heard of nor seen since he had been put aboard. He had disappeared with the mysterious vessel.

Among my crew there were several ignorant, superstitious men—sailors of low rating—who were paralyzed with terror. They rushed without orders to pull up the anchor, but I stopped them, though I feared they were going to brain me with capstan bars they had taken up. I didn't propose to take any action till I had received further information and had consulted with my guest, Alec Wingate. One of my men said that during the night he thought he heard the sound of oars.

Wingate was very much agitated over this part of the mystery. Indeed, he seemed more disturbed at the disappearance than he had been at the discovery of the yacht. I suggested that he make a reconnoitering trip ashore, as had been intended, but with a different purpose. He might find traces of people having been there. He followed my advice, but the keenest eye in the party could discover no indications of human beings. For my part, I believed "the nameless" had been taken possession of by shore desperadoes; that they had been in hiding somewhere near by; had gone aboard in the night, surprised the man on watch, killed him and towed the yacht out of our hearing with muffled oars; then they had lighted the fires and steamed away. There was nothing against this theory except the fact of Wingate's having found one of his wife's dresses aboard. But I took no stock in this, for Wingate had suffered so much at her loss that probably his mind had become afflicted and he had himself created the remembrance of this dress.

After consultation with Wingate, whom I told that I would adopt any course he wished, it was determined that we get up the anchor immediately and go out to the open sea with a view to discovering if "the nameless" was in sight. This we did, running directly southeast in a direct line from the coast, but notwithstanding that we had a clean sweep either way and excellent glasses we saw nothing of her. I believed she had got too much start, but nearly all of my crew by this time considered her a phantom.

Nor did we afterward hear anything of her, though we spoke every vessel we met, asking if she had been seen. One vessel described her pretty well, but the yacht observed was the Acadia, with the name painted on her stern. We completed our voyage without any other information.

But the mystery of "the nameless" was destined to be solved. During the winter Wingate got wind of his wife's being in Montreal. He went there and found her.

Though the story of her disappearance was never made entirely clear to me, the mystery of the nameless yacht was explained.

A case in litigation was before the courts which involved English people in high life and the inheritance of one of the most beautiful of the old castles of England. Many people were called as witnesses, and Mrs. Wingate was to have been one of these. This latter fact was unknown to her husband. In order to get her out of the way she had been kidnaped and kept at sea in a yacht.

The lady's kidnaper while on the New England coast saw by a New York social paper that her husband had embarked on a cruise with me. As soon as my yacht appeared his sailing master recognized her. At the time a leak in the boilers was being repaired, and there was no heat in the firebox, so the yacht could not steam away.

The kidnaper, supposing Wingate knew that his wife was on the Acadia and that he was on her track, ordered a paint brush to be run over her name on the stern.

An idea occurred to him. There was at the time no one on board but himself an engineer and his captive. He drugged the captive, carried her into the firebox and got in there with her. The engineer got in also, and the party, two on one side of the door and one on the other, were hidden from view of any one looking straight into the box, especially as there was very little light there. They all stayed in this confinement until we left the yacht and returned there when we put our watch aboard. During the night they surprised, gagged and tied him; then, having cut the cable, the two men got in the dinghy and with muffled oars pulled out of hearing. To get up steam and speed away was the next move. The Acadia, being one of the fastest English yachts, was soon at a safe distance.

"We couldn't help it, father."

"Could you not have settled your differences by a peaceful discussion of the matter, calling in the assistance of unprejudiced opinion, if need be?"

"No, father. He was sure he could whip me and I was sure I could whip him, and there was only one way to find out."

VALUE OF THE COCONUT.

It Might Pay Well to Cultivate the Plant In This Country.

Americans have entirely ignored or else have never known of the really wonderful possibilities which exist to accumulate a fortune by growing coconuts for exporting or for the production of the coconut tree's numerous marketable byproducts.

In the West Indies, Central and South America the fruit is used chiefly for local consumption, the water from the green coconut being a beverage decidedly cool and refreshing, with medicinal values. The leaves from the center of the top of the tree make an excellent salad and are to be found in all Latin American markets in the zones in which they grow. The hewn tree serves the native for a habitation, and a roof is made from the gigantic fronds. From the smaller leaves excellent hats of a high grade are fashioned, but few of which reach this country. From some localities ripened nuts are exported in bulk in the holds of ships, often as ballast, to this country, where a few concerns are engaged in grating coconut meat for the use of confectioners and bakers.

In the West Indies housewives make their own butter from coconuts, four nuts yielding a pound of high grade butter at a cost of less than 10 cents.—W. E. Aughinbaugh in Leslie's.

THE BANK TELLER.

His Title Comes From the Old English Use of Wooden Tallies.

Formerly accounts were kept and large sums of money paid and received by the king's exchequer in London, with little other form than the exchange or delivery of tallies, pieces of wood notched or scored, corresponding blocks being kept by the parties to the account. From this usage one of the head officers of the exchequer was called the "tallier" or "teller." These tallies were often negotiable. Adam Smith in his "Wealth of Nations" says that "in 1696 tallies had been at 40 and 50 and 60 per cent discount, and banknotes at 20 per cent."

The system of tallies was discontinued about 1830, and the destruction in the night of Oct. 16, 1834, of the old houses of parliament is thought to have been occasioned by the overheating of the flues when the furnaces were employed to consume the tallies, rendered useless by the alteration in the mode of keeping the exchequer accounts. An account of the ancient tally system was written by William Hone.

CHILDREN MUST BE PROTECTED

The children must be safeguarded, for, if they do survive the frequent coughs and colds, it is often with the lungs so weakened that they become chronic sufferers from bronchitis or consumption. Being composed of simple ingredients of undoubted value, Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine is admirably suited as a treatment for children. It is pleasant to taste. So much so that children delight to take it on this account, as well as because of the quick relief it affords them.

Hay in Church.

A curious custom has been observed from time immemorial at Old Weston, Huntingdonshire, in England. The church there is dedicated to St. Swithin, and on the Sunday most nearly approaching St. Swithin's day (he edifice is strewn with new mown hay. The tradition is that an old lady bequeathed a field for charitable purposes on condition that the tenant provided the hay to lessen the annoyance caused by the squeaking of the new shoes worn by the villagers on Feast Sunday. There are other explanations — one that it is an offering of the first fruits of the hay harvest, and another that it is a survival of the custom of strewing the church (when the floor was only beaten earth) with rushes.

Books in England.

According to the last available figures in Great Britain, 843 new works of fiction were published in a year, against 309 naval and military books. This shows that, even in war time, the reading public requires a change from grim realities to the realms of romance.

Mr. Bhupendranath Basu, A Famous Nationalist, Tells of Ideals of India

THE appointment of Mr. Bhupendranath Basu, a Calcutta lawyer and, politician and a former president of the Indian National Congress, to the Council of the Secretary of State for India, must certainly be regarded as marking another step towards that ideal of self-government for India which all statesmen, whether Indian or British, are increasingly united in setting before themselves. For many years Mr. Basu, in spite of his long connection with the Indian National Congress, which, until Lord Minto adopted a wise policy of recognition, was ever bitterly opposed to the Government, has always shown himself a statesman. His recent statements on the question of Indian self-government, a project which he has had at heart for many years, show clearly enough that he has, in a marked degree, that supreme gift of the real statesman, that of "knowing how to wait." I do not look for any large and striking immediate results, he said, in an interview, after giving his views on the present position of the question, but in twenty-five or thirty years, well, let us "wait and see."

The most important point brought out by Mr. Basu was, perhaps, that in which he urged the necessity of the British Government making a beginning. "I have no desire," he said, "to force the pace of self-government unduly, but a real beginning must be made, and definite steps must be taken to show that the end aimed at in Indian administration is self-government." Here Mr. Basu, with true political instinct, places his finger on the crux of the situation. For several years past—it is true with increasing definiteness—British statesmen have been discussing the inevitability of self-government for India. The British Government has,—moreover, been steadily giving the Indian a stronger voice in the government of his country, but the great question of self-government in any form, no matter how limited, remains the same shadowy "goal," which the Aga Khan, some five years ago, warned his followers was "still distant."

"We fix no time limit," declared the Hon. Ambica Charan Mozundar, at the annual meeting of the Indian National Congress, held at Lucknow early this year; "but there must be, henceforth, a distinct tendency visible in every branch of the administration to trust in the future policy of the Government." Indians, he said, in effect, would be content to ascend step by step, but it was time that they had set clearly before them what they were striving for. Mr. Basu means the same thing as Mr. Mozundar, and both mean the same thing as Mr. Montagu, who, in his recent famous speech on India, in the British House of Commons, declared roundly that it was impossible to "govern a great country by the despatch of telegrams." Mr. Montagu's vison as to the future of India is, it is true, different from that of the great majority of Indian nationalists, but all are agreed on these points: that there is urgent need of changes, and that there is still more urgent need that a definite beginning should be made in the task of effecting them.

Selecting an Audience.

"Biggins says he is fond of children."

"He is. He can impose on children and make them think he is a great and wonderful man."

Real Homes for Sailors.

A distinct feature of the standardized merchant ships to be built will be improved accommodation for the crews. The Shipping Controller, Sir Joseph Maclay, and the Board of Trade, have consulted the National Union of Sailors and Firemen. A sub-committee of the union, after considering the plans, expresses gratitude to Sir J. Maclay and his advisers and says the union's recommendations and more have been carried out.

The accommodation is aft. The men have a separate room for meals, and cabins with two bunks or cubicles, instead of open forecastles, to sleep in. Each cabin is provided also with a locker and a seat.

Another novelty is a common smoke room or "cosy corner" where both sailors and firemen can meet for a sing-song or "yarns" or both.

Consumption and Genius.

Fame, Anyway.

Scribbler—Did you hear the story about poor Streeter, the poet? Wrote—No. What was it? Scribbler—He wrote a poem, "Joys of a Dog," and the police came around the day it was printed and made him take out a dog license, which came to more than he got for the poem.

Man and the Dog.

We are alone, absolutely alone, on this chance planet, and amid all the forms of life that surround us not one, excepting the dog, has made an alliance with us. A few creatures fear us, most are unaware of us, and not one loves us.—From a Maeterlinck Essay.

AWFUL ATTACKS OF HEART TROUBLE
RELEASED BY SECOND DOSE OF Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills

One of the first danger signals announcing something wrong with the heart is the irregular beat or violent throb. Often there is only a fluttering sensation, or an "all-gone" sinking feeling, or, again you may experience a smothering sensation, gasp for breath and feel as though about to die.

In such cases the action of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills in quieting the heart, restoring its normal beat and imparting tone to the nerve centres, is, beyond question, marvellous.

Mrs. Frank Arseneau, Newcastle, N.B., writes: "I have awful attacks of heart trouble for the past five or six years, and as I had tried many kinds of medicine without getting any better, I decided to give Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills a trial, and to my surprise I found ease from the second dose. I continued taking them until I had used six boxes, and now I feel as well as can be.

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50c a box at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

THIRTY WOMEN TRAMPLED ON AT PUBLIC SUGAR SALE.

BROCKTON, Mass., Nov. 22.—Thirty women fainted and were trampled on when a crowd of 15,000 persons stormed the City Hall to-day to get a share of 8,000 pounds of sugar placed on sale by Mayor Stewart B. McLeod. Seventeen women were treated for cuts and bruises or because of fainting by Dr. W. D. Ducy city physician. Others were cared for in offices about the building.

Every available policeman in the city was called into service, but they could not control the crowd. Finally the Mayor addressed the people from a window in the City Hall. He announced that the sale had been called off. Then hundreds went away, and an hour later the sale was resumed, order having been restored.

Mrs. John Mathews was thrown against a wall, receiving a jagged cut on the cheek and her glasses were smashed. Mrs. Yada Koniskiski was so badly bruised that it was thought at first her leg had been fractured.

Tribunal Decisions Not Always Uniform

Such Inequalities Are Inevitable Among So Many, Declares Premier Borden

MAY MAKE APPEAL—ONLY "A" MEN TO BE DRAFTED — NEED FOR FOOD PRODUCTION.

OTTAWA, Nov. 21. — The Prime Minister has issued a statement respecting the inconsistent decisions of local tribunals dealing with exemptions. The first five paragraphs deal with the setting of making claims. The sixth paragraph is as follows:

6. The tribunals are about 1,350 in number. It is inevitable that amongst so many men selected for the discharge of judicial duties there should be some who would not fully appreciate the responsibilities imposed upon them by their position, and who might unintentionally disregard, to a greater or less degree, the manifest intention of the Military Service Act, and of the instructions thereunder issued to them by the Military Service Council.

After emphasizing in the seventh paragraph that national rather than individual interest was to be the paramount test in every case and that the importance of food and munitions production was emphasized to the tribunals, the statement continues:

IN CASES OF AGRICULTURE.

8. From reports received by the Prime Minister it would appear that in some instances tribunals have refused exemption where the circumstances distinctly required that it should be granted; as, for example, in cases where exemption has been refused to men long engaged in agricultural production, without whose labour such production could not be continued.

(a) In these cases the remedy is by appeal, the procedure for which is of the simplest character. A letter to the Registrar of the Province is sufficient, and the applicant need not engage the services of a lawyer. The Registrar may be addressed as follows:

In Ontario: "The Registrar, under the Military Service Act, Toronto"

In Quebec: "The Registrar, under the Military Service Act, Montreal," or "Quebec," as the case may be, and so on for the various Provinces.

The persons applying for exemption need not attend before the Court of Appeal. A statement of his case in writing will be sufficient. Attendance, however, is most desirable, wherever possible or convenient.

APPEAL SHOULD BE MADE.

(b) It appears that in many cases persons having legitimate claim to exemption have not appealed when exemption is denied. The appeal should be made within three days, but the time for appeal can be extended on application to the Appeal Tribunal or upon application to the Minister of Justice. There should, however, be no unnecessary delay in taking out the appeal in any case where it has not already been done.

9. In cases where exemption has been granted without sufficient grounds or in an indiscriminate manner, the representatives appointed by the Minister of Militia will see that all necessary appeals are lodged to prevent the intention of the Act from being defeated by the default of any tribunal or tribunals. In some cases it appears that these officers have not been sufficiently diligent in asserting appeals for this purpose. The Minister of Militia is taking steps to enforce the lodging of appeals in such cases.

TO INSURE CONSISTENCY.

10. Finally to insure consistency of decisions and imperial administration of the Act throughout the Dominion, and to afford the greatest possible protection to the national interests, an appeal is provided to the Central Tribunal at Ottawa, consisting of Mr. Justice Duff as Central Appeal Judge, who has power to secure the appointment of other judges of any Superior Court to assist him in the discharge of his duties in the various parts of the Dominion. It is the intention of the Government to enforce appeals on its own behalf to the Central Appeal Judge, and to assist in the lodging of such appeals by any persons who have just ground of complaint, so that there may be uniformity of decision in the application of the Act throughout Canada.

NO DRAFTING OF UNFIT.

11. The attention of those who are included within Class 1 is directed to the importance of the category within which they have been classed upon their medical examination. It is only men who have been included within category "A" who can be called out for active service in the trenches. The need at present is for infantry to serve at the front. As men included within categories "B," "C," "D" and "E" are not considered suitable for this service, there is no likelihood of their being drafted. The best services which they can give to the State in Canada rather than at the front. This statement is considered necessary, as they may be unintentionally misled by the form of certificate, which states that they are exempt until men of their respective categories are required.

12. The last preceding paragraph does not of course apply to defaulters, that is to say, contumacious persons who defy the law and who may be punished by civil or military process.

CAMBRAI IS FINISHED AS A GERMAN DEPOT

Enemy are Stripping Base of its Military Stores With The British and Teutonic Armies Locked in Violent Grasps Less Than Three Miles Away—Strength of Heavy German Reinforcements Felt Against New British Lines But General Byng's Men Repulsed Counter Attacks Although Fontaine Notre Dame Was Lost.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

(By Ed. L. Keen.)

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

LONDON, November 22.—The Germans began stripping Cambrai of its military stores to-day as the British and Teuton armies were locked in violent grips less than three miles from the city's outskirts. The full strength of heavy German reinforcements was felt against the new British lines to-day. But General Byng's men had consolidated and dug in on practically every inch of the reclaimed ground and repelled counter attacks. At only one point, Fontaine Notre Dame, were the Boches able to dull the edge of the British cutting edge, according to Field Marshal Haig. There they recaptured the village. Fighting of the most violent intensity was reported from this sector late last night, and by now the village may once again have changed hands.

CAMBRAI FINISHED.

Cambrai is finished as a German depot. It is now easily within range of British field artillery, and therefore even if the centre is not actually captured the menace of British shells will serve to make it untenable for the army. French refugees from nearby villages declared to-day Cambrai had long served as one of the distributing centres for munitions, troops and supplies of every character, being one of the vital links in the German chain of communication.

The full scope of the British victory and the minute care and painstaking attention to detail with which the British staff worked out the problem of the attack were made increasingly apparent to-day. Semi-official despatches for instance, told of new records made in highway and railway building by the engineers in keeping up the constant flow of munitions and supplies to the rapidly advancing troops. Miles upon miles of broad and narrow guage tracks were laid. The construction corps in many instances worked almost directly behind the "moppers up," and German prisoners with their arms still upraised while they echoed "Kamerad," saw the British track layers methodically and rapidly shoving the lines along. Their achievements enabled the British guns to keep up almost with the infantry in the movement forward.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, November 23.—Another German attempt to recapture ground captured by the French in their recent attack on the Aisne front, was checked by French fire, the War Office reports. The statement follows: Active artillery fighting continues in the sectors of Cerny and Juvincourt. In this section our fire checked an enemy attack against positions on our left which we captured November 21. Our patrols in operation near Ailette brought back prisoners and inflicted losses on the enemy. Northwest of Rheims and in Champagne raids on our small posts were without results. On the right bank of the Meuse the artillery fighting continued in a spirited manner through the night. There is nothing to report from the remainder of the front.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, November 23.—Admiral Verderevski has resigned as Russian Minister of Marine. Captain Ivanoff, lately commander of the Baltic cruiser squadron, is named as his successor.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, November 23.—The British have advanced the lines slightly in Flanders, southeast of Ypres, the War Office announces. The situation on the Somme front southwest of Cambrai is unchanged.

The announcement follows: Hostile raids attempted in the night south of Neuve Chapelle, northwest of St. Quentin, and northwest of Pontavust, were repulsed leaving prisoners in our hands. There is no change on our front southwest of St. Quentin.

A SEPARATE PEACE OFFER.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

STOCKHOLM, November 23.—According to the Tidnin, a Russian diplomat left Stockholm yesterday for Petrograd with orders to hand to the Russian revolutionary government, proposals for peace by the Central Powers.

PREPARING THE HUNS FOR LOSS OF JERUSALEM

Canadian Press Despatch:

AMSTERDAM, Nov. 23. — German newspapers are preparing the public for the loss of Jerusalem. The Norddeutsche Allgemeine Zeitung says that "to cling to places which would bring us no military advantage would be tantamount to the useless sacrifice of numerous Turkish forces and our own troops." After discussing the difficulty of reinforcing the defenders, the paper admits the abandonment of Jerusalem certainly would be an extremely painful loss.

VIOLENT BATTLE ON PROGRESS ON CAMBRAI FRONT

(By William Philip Simms.)

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES IN FRANCE, Nov. 23.—The fighting developed into a battle of the most violent character to-day over numerous parts of the great front. The British advanced at some places and consolidated their gains, and at others retired. The Germans apparently were concentrating their shelling of the British on the positions around Cantaing and Bourbon Wood. Tadpole Copse, to the west of Mouevrs, was wrested from the enemy after bitter hand-to-hand fighting. In Cantaing the battle progressed in the street and from house to house. Civilians were removed in the nick of time to prevent their being caught in a whirlwind German counter attack. The enemy was bringing reinforcements from every direction late to-day. Regiments were identified from positions far distant on the west front. They were thrown into battle with reckless abandon.

BIG PARTY OF RETURNED SOLDIERS REACHES PETERBORO

Seventeen Local Men the Majority of Them Former Members of the 93rd Battalion Invalided Home From Overseas Service Arrive Home

ONE 2nd BATTALION MAN

The largest party of returned soldiers that has reached Peterborough so far arrived home on the 5.35 G.T.R. train last evening. There were in all seventeen men in the party. The majority of them were former members of the 93rd Peterborough Battalion, invalided home on account of wounds or ill health. Very few people knew of the home-coming of the men, so outside of Mayor Duffus, Ald. Duncan, City Clerk Armstrong and other civic representatives there were only a few of the relatives of the returning soldiers on the platform when the train pulled in.

The youngest member of the party probably saw the most service. That was Pte. Charlie Mongour, Dublin street, who enlisted with the first contingent at the age of fifteen years. Pte. Mongour left here in August, 1914, with the 57th Regiment's quota and went to France as a member of No. 1 company of the 2nd Battalion; under Major G. W. Bennett. He went through the second battle of Ypres safely, but later on was badly wounded by a shell which struck the dugout in which he was, the same shell killing Bert Carpenter of East City. After a long course of treatment in English hospitals, Pte. Mongour returned to France with a Forestry unit. He has now been invalided home after an absence of over three years and five months and will have to undergo further treatment at Kingston.

Wounded at Vimy.

Sergt. Arthur Ringer, Aylmer street, formerly of the 93rd Battalion, was another in last evening's party. Sergt.

LOSSES WERE VERY LIGHT

Britain's Master Stroke Was Carried Through With Several Thousand Casualties Fewer Than The Number of German Prisoners Taken.

MACHINERY SAVED LINES

(By William Philip Simms.)

WITH BRITISH ARMIES IN THE FIELD, Nov. 23.— Britain's master stroke against Cambrai was carried through to victory with an almost incredible small casualty list. The total of German prisoners taken reached the point where it exceeds by several thousand the whole British losses in killed, wounded and missing.

Machinery saved the attackers several thousands of lifes.

The use of tanks to batter down the entanglements instead of artillery, and the surprise nature of the British blow, practically meant no retaliatory barrage fire.

When the Germans did get their shell screen working the missiles did not mow down infantrymen.

There was also life-saving machinery of the British supply system—the war machine which kept constructing yard after yard of supply railways as yard after yard of ground was taken by the British. Back still farther behind the lines was gigantic machinery which enabled Haig and Byng to mass enormous forces of men and war paraphernalia with the speed necessary to carry through their plans for a surprise attack.

STREAM OF PRISONERS.

The stream of German prisoners to the back lines was unabated to-day, while hot fighting went on up at the front. Tanks, cavalry and infantry were all in action. The enemy has now collected great forces of reserves, and these were striving to-day to press back the pinchers which the Tommies are squeezing around Cambrai. Joyful French civilians from German occupied towns now repatriated by the British blow, were being transported to the rear lines by motor lorry to-day. Most of the refugees had been concentrated at Masnieres. All declared that practically all the food they had eaten in months had been that furnished by the American Relief Commission. If this aid had not been forthcoming they said, they would have starved.

So many of these refugees were freed by the British stroke that special arrangements had to be made at the rear depots for their transfer. Load after load of them were brought to railway stations in motor lorries, under the care of the British Tommies, who were embarrassed by their affectionate and extravagant demonstrations of gratitude. No Frenchmen of military age were included in the groups—all were old men, women or children.

WAR BY MACHINERY.

The British victory around Cambrai means the war has entered a new stage. It was machinery which won the great stroke against the Hindenburg line. It was machinery that made the British casualty list so small as to be almost increditable in view of the gains achieved. It was machinery and strategy that permitted the cheapest victory in actual cost of ammunition expended, that a modern army has ever won. Foremost in the array of mechanism with which Byng clinched his victory was the tank. America, with the allies, can turn out this sort of machinery as fast as Detroit produces motor cars.

PTE. BLATCHFORD KILLED.

A cablegram on Wednesday to Mrs. Blatchford, Havelock, conveyed the sad intelligence that her husband, Pte. Alfred (Hugh) Blatchford, had been killed in action at the front on the 30th ult. Pte. Blatchford enlisted in Havelock in the famous Princess Pats at the beginning of the war.

PTE. ROBT. MICKS.

Pte. Robt. Micks, who enlisted here in the early autumn of 1915, with the 93rd Battalion, and went overseas as a member of the Machine Gun Section, under Lieut. Crisp, is officially reported wounded and missing. Pte. Micks was a chum of Pte. Jack Tutton, who died of wounds a few days ago, and like the latter, came from Port Hope to enlist with the 93rd. He was with the 5th C.M.R. at the front.

PTE. ALFRED SMITH.

"Missing" is the heading under which Pte. Alfred Smith's name appears in the official casualty list. Pte. Smith enlisted here early in October, 1915, with the 93rd Battalion, and after going overseas with the Peterborough unit, was transferred in a draft to the 5th C.M.R., going to France in September of last year.

FARMERS URGE THAT NO MORE MEN BE TAKEN FROM FARMS

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, Ont., November 23.—At a meeting of farmers at Kintail, a resolution was passed unanimously, and will be sent to Premier Borden urging that the exemption tribunal be dismissed and no more men taken. Every available man, they declare, has gone overseas, and if any more are taken, they can not plant or harvest the crops which will be so urgently needed.

SURPRISE ATTACK BY FRENCH WAS COMPLETE SUCCESS

Friendly Fog Gave Poilus a Chance to Wipe Out a Troublesome Salient and Capture an Important Observation Point.

ENEMY WAS CONFUSED

(By W. S. Forrest.)

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

WITH THE FRENCH ARMIES IN THE FIELD, Nov. 23.—A friendly fog which steamed up opportunely, gave French troops a chance for a surprise blow Wednesday that knocked another chunk from the German hold on Northern France.

The attack was against the eastern end of the Chemin Des Dames, South of Juvincourt. The French, it was established to-day, captured the last of the enemy observation points in the Chemin Des Dames sector. Not only that but the victory also wiped out a troublesome salient from which the Germans had been harassing the French lines.

Throughout the action the general in direct charge of the French assault did not get a sight of his men in action. He had occupied a hill observation expecting to have the fighting unfold under his glasses.

Instead a heavy London-like mist settled down. Objects fifty yards distant were utterly concealed. It did not make any difference to the French artillery. Promptly on the moment previously set for the attack, the guns ceased their resultory barking and started on a violent drumfire. The poilus went over the top completely hidden from the enemy view by the friendly fog. The famous French creeping barrage cut off the enemy positions which it was proposed to attack and the French waves went over position after position until every objective was taken. The enemy's confusion and ignorance of what was going on was shown by the fact that he hurried up reserves to back up a part of his line which was not even under attack. The Germans where the French were striking, until wher the French were striking, until it was all over.

ENCIRCLING MOVEMENT BY FOE FAILED

Canadian Press Despatch:

ROME, Nov. 23.—A great encircling attack was attempted yesterday by the Austro German forces against Mont Moletta, but the Italians held all positions it was announced to-day by the war office.

Frank Jenne Says:

When you come into my store I want you to feel that you are in your own home. You can go behind the counter if you like, look at anything you like, and help wait on yourself if the staff is too busy to give you that quick attention I like. "Come to me."

ARMISTICE WILL HAVE NO EFFECT UPON THE SITUATION

Germany and Austria Have Already Stripped Their Lines On The Russian Front To Almost Nothing—Huns Will Accept Truce.

THE BOLSHEVIKE PLAN

(By Webb Miller.)

LONDON, Nov. 23.—Russias formal armistice with the Teutons will merely make formal a cessation of fighting which is already in full force. No doubt whatever was expressed here today that the Bolsheviki would carry through their announced intention to establish a truce, and that the Germans would accept. Such a move, however, was not regarded as likely to have any effect on the military situation. Germany and Austria have already stripped their lines on the Russian fronts to almost nothing. Most of the troops used in the Italian drive came from this northern war zone.

The armistice offer illustrates the lengths to which the Russian extremists are prepared to go in their programme of idyllic internationalism. As observers saw it to-day, the move was undoubtedly made with the sympathy of a great part of the war weary army and citizenry. The Bolsheviki are emphatically disclaiming any intention of separate peace. The armistice offer itself is addressed to "all belligerents," and stress is laid in Petrograd despatches on the fact that the offer is merely the first step in the ambitious, if idyllic scheme of the Bolsheviki for world peace. In some circles the idea of an armistice between Russia and the Teutons was regarded favourably. It was pointed out by these believers that such a formal agreement might avoid a great German drive which would sweep thousands of square miles of Russian territory into German hands, a drive timed by the enemy against a Russian army which is already half starved, totally unprepared and inadequately equipped and which could be made with a minimum of German military effort. The armistice may enable a smoothing out of the Rusdian military machine and Russia will "come back" the quicker.

BUY A VICTORY BOND.

What The Storm Did

For all of November living conditions were so pleasant they were almost on the basis of summer. Fires had to be kept going, but very mild ones did what was required, and it affected business in about the same way. Things went along quietly, with no rush, but all at once conditions changed, as they can do so quickly in Canada in late November. Now the snow and cold weather has shown people that they require new articles of dress, and especially shoes and rubbers to protect the feet from the snow and wet. Peterborough Shoe Store is very thoughtfully repeating a special offer made last Wednesday of several fine lines of Ladies' Shoes, patents, with cloth or kid tops, and all gun metal, that should sell now at not less than $5, and their price for Saturday is only $2.50. Rubbers, all high grade, and all styles, at lowest prices. Don't miss this special. Peterborough Shoe Store, 291 George Street. 'Phone 260 (New Lundy Block).

Voice of The People

Correspondence under this heading containing or involving attacks on individuals, or violent or extreme statements, must, to secure insertion, be signed with which thus assumes the responsibility.

November 22, 1917.

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—Please allow me to have enough of your valuable space to ask a question, before "the more hog production" campaign is launched.

Who is going to clean out the hog pen? Our wives and daughters will help as far as their strength allows at almost any job on the farm, but at this they draw the line. They think it is not a very sanitary occupation for the cook or dairy-maid, and are afraid that the butter worked by one so employed might taste and smell of something more objectionable than "turnips."

Allow me to suggest a solution of the matter. We might instal a lavatory and running water system, and then perhaps some unoccupied government officials (and we expect many such after the election), could instruct the hogs how to use the innovation. Perhaps the (ever willing?) city help will come out and do this; of course they might be rather smelly when they went back to town, but they could persuade their friends that they were using a new brand of eau de Cologne. Another thing they may expect is that cream, fresh eggs, etc., are rather scarce just now, although the porridge with or without salt (as the cook remembers) is yet plentiful and just the same as some of them praised (?) last summer. Hoping some one who is interested in this department of the production campaign will offer suggestions, and also remember that we farmers want something more tangible than chimerical promises made by interested government suckers, I am,

Yours expectantly,
FAR MER.

Peterborough, Ont., Nov. 23rd, 1917.

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—The importance of the matter involved and the great number of complaints that cannot, however, be considered as coming within the scope of "appeals" makes it necessary for me, in the public interest, to make known to the public in this way what the Government has to say regarding such complaints.

As I am not at liberty, of course, to interfere in any way with the tribunals and do not wish to do so, I hereby notify all those who have complaints to make them to "The Deputy Minister of Justice, Ottawa," as indicated by the following letter. No stamps needed.

J. H. BURNHAM.

Military Service Branch,
130 Sparks Street,

Ottawa, November 22nd, 1917.

Captain J. H. Burnham, M.P.,
Peterborough, Ont.:

Sir,—Your telegram of the 19th inst. to Sir Robert Borden has been forwarded to the Military Service Council for attention. As you are no doubt aware, there are some 1,350 tribunals distributed throughout the length and breadth of Canada, and it is inevitable that some of these should make mistakes, and that some should fail to conduct themselves with entire propriety. General complaints as to the conduct of tribunals are of little assistance. If you can furnish us with the particulars of any complaints in respect of named tribunals, I would be glad to see what can be done in the way of setting them in the right path.

Yours truly,
(Signed) E. L. NEWCOMBE,
Deputy Minister of Justice.

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Dear Sir,—Would you kindly allow me a small space in your paper to thank two ladies and one gentleman for the interest they took in the welfare of my husband, myself and family in the balcony of the Opera House on Wednesday afternoon. I would like the pleasure of meeting them. My name and address can be had at the office of this paper.

Thanking you Mr Editor.

A 59TH BANDSMAN'S WIFE.

Thursday, Nov. 22, 1917.

Editor of the Examiner.

Sir,—The Review, in defending the action of the Tribunals of Quebec in granting exemptions, states that the Mount Forest Tribunal has exempted every man appearing before it. If this is so, we would almost think that the Mount Forest judges had done their duty, and it does not improve the case that there is in Ontario one case where he Tribunals have failed to carry out their duty.

This cannot be said of the Tribunals in Peterborough County, where the exemptions have been very few and the judges have been trying to live up to the law impartially.—Yours truly, Conscripted.

IT'S NOT WHAT YOU EARN

IT'S NOT WHAT YOU EARN—

It's not what you earn; it's what you save. The man who gets a salary of $10,000 per year and saves none of it is poorer at the year's end than the man who gets $1,000 per year and lays something by. The one is only accumulating expensive tastes; the other is accumulating real money.

Then how best to save—that's the question?

The employment of funds in an enterprise which promises an exorbitant return but which involves risk of total loss is a gamble, not in investment. The wise man will make a choice among absolutely SAFE investments and will be guided to a large extent by the rate of interest which these offer.

Where can he get a better investment than Canada's Victory Bonds? Safe? They have the guarantee of the whole country behind them. Sure? The interest will come along every half year as regularly as clockwork. The man who buys a stock may get interest one year and none the next, but a Victory Bond never fails. And the rate of interest is such as to tempt anyone. The bonds will be sold in denominations as low as Fifty Dollars and on the easy payment plan. Anybody can afford to buy.

It's not what you earn; it's what you SAVE.

PTE. HARRY WASHBURN.

Pte. Harry Washburn of Lasswade, who went overseas with the 93rd, has been reported wounded in the recent heavy fighting at the front.

PTE. GEO. WILLIS.

Mrs. Willis of Kingston, who is at present visiting her niece, Mrs. Hollingsworth, 205 King street, has received official word from Ottawa that her son, Pte. Geo. Willis, of the Transport Section of the 21st Battalion, was admitted to the 9th Field Ambulance on November 12th, suffering from gun-shot wounds in the left thigh and in the head. Mrs. Willis has three sons overseas and this is the second to be wounded, another son, Fred, having been hit some time ago. The third son, Leonard, is in England with the 12th reserve Battalion.

PTE. PERCY McNEELY.

Pte. Percy E. McNeely, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Thos. McNeely, of Belmont, was among the large number of Canadian wounded in the recent big action in Flanders. The word was received here by telegram from Militia Headquarters. His wounds were stated to be from gunshot in the arm. Percy, who is an old Norwood High school boy, enlisted in the West with the Ambulance Corps, giving up a good position at Regina with the Imperial Oil Company to serve "King and Country."

CORP. H. S. PAULL.

Corp. H. S. Paull of Peterborough, who enlisted with the 39rd Battery in the early autumn of 1915, is officially reported wounded his name appearing in to-day's list from Ottawa.

PTE. L. D. PALMER.

Pte. Leonard Daniel Palmer, who enlisted here in October 1915, with the 93rd Peterborough Battalion, and went overseas with that unit, is officially reported wounded and gassed. Pte. Palmer's relatives are now living in Muskoka.

PTE. ALBERT H. HILL.

Private Albert Hill, of Bobcaygeon who enlisted with the 109th Battalion, in Lindsay, is reported killed in action on November 4th. He was a nephew of Robert McCracken of Hall's Glen.

SERGT. HERBERT PORTSMITH

Mrs. George Portsmith, 576 Stewart street to-day received official notification of the death, at the front, of her son, Sergeant Herbert Portsmith. The latter enlisted in Alberta in the first Canadian Division, and was a member of the 5th Battalion. He was killed in action on Nov. 10th. Sergeant Harry Portsmith, a brother of Sergt. Herbert Portsmith, is also at the front with the Canadian Mounted Rifles. The latter was twenty-six years of age and was well known throughout the city, where he resided before going west. His widowed mother and the other members of the family will have the sympathy of the citizens, generally.

PTE. LEONARD O. MILLERSHIP.

Official word was received from Ottawa to-day that Pte. Leonard Oliver Millership, formerly of the 93rd Battalion, is officially reported killed in action on Nov. 6th. Pte. Millership joined the 93rd Battalion in September, 1915, and was appointed to the Military police during the winter the Battalion trained here. He went overseas a Sergeant, but with other members had to revert to the ranks to go to France. His wife resides on Dickson street.

PTE. WM. SIMS.

An official message received to-day stated that No. 865134 Pte. Wm. Sims (Clarady P.O.) is reported killed in action, on Nov. 9th. Pte. Sims enlisted outside of this district.

SAPPER W. J. McKNIGHT.

Word from the Director of Records was received to-day that Sapper W. J. McKnight, Canadian Engineers, 609 Concession street, is officially reported wounded and admitted to No. General Hospital, Etaples. Sapper McKnight went overseas with the 2nd Battalion and was invalided home from England. Later on he re-enlisted with the Canadian Engineers, and after training at the depot in Ottawa, returned overseas. He had been in France for some time.

PTE. J. L. BATH.

Mrs. Bath, 535 Aylmer street, has received official word from Ottawa that Pte. J. L. Bath, formerly of the 93rd Battalion, has been wounded, and admitted to hospital at Camieres. Pte. Bath, who was a letter carrier at the Peterborough Postoffice before he enlisted, went overseas with the cook section of the 93rd.

It is singular to note that Pte. Andrews is the second returned soldier by the same name to arrive her, in the past couple of weeks. His cousin, Pte. W. J. Andrews, son of Mr. W. B. Andrews, returned from overseas only a short time previous. A third representative of another branch of the Andrews family also returned a month or so ago, Sergt. Percy Andrews, son of Mr. David Andrews. The patriotism of the Andrews family can hardly admit of criticism.

The Lindsay Post says:

Pte. Jack Magee, of Omemee, has lost one leg, it having been found necessary to amputate it at the knee owing to the nature of his wound. Pte. Magee, who lived in Omemee for a number of years prior to enlisting, was a member of the 93rd Battalion (Peterborough).

The Norwood Register says:

Pte. W. J. Andrews, son of Mr. James Andrews, of this village, arrived home on Saturday from overseas. Pte. Andrews enlisted in Havelock platoon of the historic 93rd, and has seen service in France in the trenches. Latterly, owing to physical incapacity, he was stationed behind the lines, where he took a full course as chef in the cooking corps.

Mrs. Andrews is also visiting here with her husband. Like many others of the fair sex she has been serving her country, too, by entering the ranks of the munition workers in Toronto.

FOREST, Ont., Nov. 23.—The Forest local tribunal has heard 158 claims for exemption and has granted exemption in every instance. The military representative has appealed five cases and secured another hearing in one case.

Bolsheviki Will Last Four Weeks

HAVE WON SUPPORT BY FALSE PROMISES SAYS KERENSKY'S SECRETARY.

STOCKHOLM, Nov. 22.—"No matter how dark the situation in Russia is to-day — and it is dark indeed—it must not be forgotten that Russia is a country of unlimited possibilities," said Dr. David Soskice, confidential secretary to A. F. Kerensky, the deposed Russian Premier, and his right hand man, to the Associated Press correspondent to-day.

"The Bolsheviki were in control of Petrograd and many other places when I left the capital on Friday," continued Dr. Soskice "but they cannot maintain power. I consider four weeks the utmost length of time they can last.

They have no support except that which they have won by false promises. They are to-day saying to their adherents: 'We have given you peace and land,' the decree issued on Friday declaring all the factories and workshops now the property of the workmen."

The future Government, Dr. Soskice believes, will be a homogenoun, all-Socialist Government. In regard to whether the future Government in Russia would be forced to conclude peace, Dr. Soskice expressed the opinion that this would not be the case.

311 Names on The Noon List

"Do or Die"

This is the soldier's motto as he looks at his responsibility regarding the war.

Why should we set a lower standard for ourselves? Our country calls to us at home—to Women and to Men—who cannot bear arms, to lend our money for the fight against the Hun.

Can we refuse, and still call ourselves Patriotic? Let us "Do or Die" in this matter of Canada's great War Loan

And put the last penny we can spare into

RICHARD HALL & SON LIMITED

Ladies' Auxiliary Of G. W. V. A. To Wait Upon County Council

The Convener (Mrs. Knox) and committee of the G.W.V.A. Ladies' Auxiliary, Mrs. Bartlett, Mrs. McNeeley, Mrs. Bugg, Mrs. Morris, Mrs. Robinson, Mrs. Broucher, Miss Peck and Miss Jean Layfield met in conference with the Mayor and a committee from the Great War Veterans' Society in the Council Chamber, last night, and definite lines for the fromation of the Auxiliary to the G.W.V.A. were discussed.

A PUBLIC MEETING.

A big meeting was decided upon when the public will be informed of what the Auxiliary means and organize into a strong society. At this meeting, which will probably be held in the Collegiate Hall, a detailed account of the approximate cost of the rooms for the War Veterans will be submitted. Special speakers will address the meeting.

COST OF FURNISHING $2,500.

Mr. Whatley, Secretary of the G. W. V. A., presented a list of the requirements for furnishing the rooms. These were reckoned to cost approximately $2,500. In this matter a sub-committee was formed to ascertain the definite cost of each item and report to the committee on Saturday, as the merchants who were to have met the committee last night to give an idea of the cost of the requirements failed to attend the meeting.

ASK COUNCIL FOR GRANT.

Mrs. Knox, Mrs. Morris, Mrs. Bartlett, and Mrs. McNeeley will wait on the County Council to-day and ask for an annual grant to the Auxiliary. They will invite the County to appoint a lady to represent the County on the Committee of the Auxiliary.

REPORT ON ROOMS.

No definite action on the rooms to be occupied was taken. A report from Mr. Eastwood outlined the rules of the suite over the Royal Bank which have been considered. The rental of this suite is $350 per annum, the taxes and light to be paid by the occupants. No band instruments could be used on the premises.

A BIG CONCERT

A concert, on big lines, was arranged for by the committees and Mr. Devey, to be held, probably, in the Opera House. The object of this will be the raising of funds for the furnishing of the rooms

TO PAY THE RENT.

Mayor Duffus hoped the City Council would undertake to pay the rent for the rooms decided upon by the Veterans.

TRIBUNAL No. 275

COURT HOUSE

Judge Huycke, Police Magistrate Dumble, Members
Lt.-Col. E. B. Clegg, Military Representative

Wilbur A. Bertrand, 631 Union street, and an "A2" man, claimed to be the sole support of a widowed mother. Applicant has a brother overseas with the Canadian expeditionary forces. A married sister, who was burned out in the spring, shares her mother's home. Bertrand received two dollars a day as driver for J. T. Braund, grocer, at the corner of George and Smith streets.

"You would make that much if you were in the army," said Lieut.-Col. Clegg.

The case will not be finally disposed of until further inquiries are instituted by the military representative.

Claim Disallowed.

Vincent Heenan, 797 Water street, claimed exemption on the grounds of ill health and the importance of continuing present occupation. Four brothers are dead and the applicant is the sole support of father and mother. One sister resides at home and three other sisters are married and reside in the city. Applicant suffers from rheumatism in the right leg and left arm. The father is a coil winder at the Canadian General Electric Company.

The Board declined to ignore the doctor's report of Heenan's medical condition and the claim was disallowed.

Patriotic Family.

Joseph H. Dummitt, 49 Alfred street, applied for exemption on domestic grounds. Dummitt has a widowed mother to support and has two brothers overseas, one of whom was killed in action. The second brother overseas has been wounded. A few days ago a fourth brother appeared before the Tribunal No. 276 and his claim for exemption was disallowed. The applicant told the Board this mornings that he would prefer to go in place of his brother.

Dummitt was instructed to appear before the Medical Board and be examined. Dummitt was also advised to talk the matter over with his brother and come to some mutual understanding as to which of the two brothers should go. Should Joseph H. Dummitt persist in his desire to go in place of his brother, the Board will endeavour to facilitate such an arrangement.

Temporary Exemption.

Mr. E. H. Howson, representing the Peterborough Lock Company, appeared before the Tribunal this morning to enter a claim for the exemption of Edward Hanrahan, an employee of the company. A couple of days ago Hanrahan's personal claim for exemption was disallowed. Mr. Howson said that Hanrahan was not altogether indispensable, but his removal would prove a handicap to the firm. The Board agreed to exempt Hanrahan until February the first next, which will take in the stock-taking period of the firm.

"You had better try and get a returned soldier or a girl to take his place before then," admonished Judge Huycke.

Exemptions Refused.

John Vincent Gallivan, 171 Perry street, was refused exemption.

A. J. Leahy, a farmer, was exempted until he ceases to be employed as a farmer.

"E" Men Exempted.

John J. Ahern, 423 Downie street, Samuel J. Bradley, 33 Lafayette avenue, Herbert E. Wormsworth, 610 Chamberlen street, Thomas H. Armstrong, 32 Lafayette avenue, John J. Condon, 218 Perry street, Bruce McMartin, 104 Stewart street, Robert Tudhope, 569 Homewood avenue, and Charles W. Porter, 583 Bethune street, all "E" men, were exempted until 'E' class is called.

James Woodcock, 438 Driscoll Terrace and Henry Lester Finnie, 287 Sherbrooke street, both "B" men, were exempt i until "B" class is required.

V. M. Friedly, 599 King street, P. C. Hill, 500 Chamberlen street, and G. W. Dartnell, 312 Pearl avenue, all "C" men, were exempted until "C" class is called.

REQUISITIONING CLOTHING FOR THE RUSSIAN ARMY

Canadian Press Despatch:

PETROGRAD, Thursday, Nov. 22.—The Bolsheviki have issued a decree providing for the requisitioning from the wealthier classes of warm material for the army. Tenants of residences, the rental of which is twenty-four hundred roubles, or more yearly, are required to furnish one blanket and one article of clothing in good condition.

BUY A VICTORY BOND.

Shipping Their Own Stock

Omemee and Reaboro Farmers Form a Club

The Reaboro and Omemee farmers clubs in Victoria County have been meeting with considerable success recently shipping their own live stock. Messrs. J. C. McNevin, of the Reaboro Club, and W. F. Fee, of the Omemee club, while in the office of Farm and Dairy recently advised us that since September 12th their club have shipped hogs to the value of $21,679.35. These hogs have been consigned direct to the packing house. In addition a considerable number of cattle and sheep have been shipped. The latter were sold on the open market.

The initial efforts of the club to handle its own live stock were not very successful. One buyer who had agreed to accept a consignment from them later turned them down. Another firm which had agreed to accept their shipments later refused to do so except through its local buyer in their district. Because of their failure to make these initial shipments the buyers later seemed to think that they had given up the idea of consigning their stock, with the result that when they succeeded in selling their first load of hogs, they received 75 cents a cwt. more than they would have received had they sold the hogs through the local buyers Later one of the firm which had refused to accept their consignments, offered them a price for their hogs which was so much better than their regular price, that farmers living near this packing plant found they could sell their hogs to better advantage by turning them over to the farmers' clubs and paying the shipping charges back to the packing plant than they could obtain if they took the hogs direct to the packing plant themselves. In other words, this packing plant offered more for the hogs of the members of these two clubs than it was willing to pay the farmers near its own plant, who were not organized, even although these latter farmers made their own deliveries without any shipping charges. Both the clubs are well satisfied with the results of their shipments to date and believe that this is a line of work that the United Farmers' Cooperative Company, Limited in Toronto, should endeavour to develop as quickly as possible.—Farm and Dairy.

General Byng Promoted for His Victory

Canadian Press Despatch:

LONDON, Nov. 23.— King George has promoted Lieut.-Gen. Byng to the rank of General in recognition of his distinguished service in the field in the recent operations.

Big Party Of Returned Soldiers

Ringer, who is a veteran member of the Peterborough Rangers, went overseas with the 93rd Battalion and was transferred to another Canadian battalion at the front. He was badly wounded at Vimy Ridge last April and has been in hospital practically ever since.

Canteen Sergeant Home.

Pte. James Mackin, who went overseas as the canteen sergeant of the 93rd Battalion and who went to France with a Labour battalion after the Peterborough regiment was broken up, was among last night's arrivals, having been invalided home.

Pte. Wm. Evans, another ex-member of the 93rd Battalion who went to France with a construction unit and Pte. Evans was employed at the Windsor Hotel before the joined the 93rd Battalion.

was on duty there for a number of months, was another happy arrival.

Corp. Bruce Cullen, a well known member of the 93rd, who was wounded some time ago while serving with another Canadian battalion in France, came in last night, as did Pte. Lawrence Gibson, who went overseas as a member of the bugle band of the 93rd Battalion. The latter's brother, Pte. Ernest Gibson, formerly of the 59th Band, was reported seriously ill a few days ago.

Pte. Ballard in Party.

Pte. Stanley Ballard, another former member of the 93rd who, after serving in France, has been invalided home suffering from trench fever was still another man from Lieut.-Col. Johnston's unit to get home last night. He is a brother of Pte. Horace Ballard of the 21st Battalion who returned from overseas several months ago.

Sergt. Stevens.

Sergt. R. W. A. Stevens, who before he joined the local quota to the 39th Battalion on January 21st, 1915, had already a record of twenty-one years' service with the colours, was another in last night's party. Sergt. Stevens went overseas with the 39th and has been doing a very useful work in training recruits with the 39th reserve in England.

Pte. W. E. Edwards, who went overseas with the 93rd Battalion, and was transferred in a draft to the 5th C.M.R., arrived last evening. Pte. Edwards' son-in-law, Pte. Tommy Hardman, also of the 93rd Battalion, made the supreme sacrifice in France.

247th Man Back.

Pte. W. Drain, who enlisted here with the 247th Battalion and went overseas with the 235th, was another of last night's arrivals. He is badly crippled with rheumatism. Pte. Drain has two brothers overseas.

Pte. Leonard Dunstan, a former member of the 93rd, who has been ill for some time, Pte. R. Godfrey, Pte. M. Killingbeck, Pte. J. Salter, Pte. A. Tamblin, Pte. W. Johnston, and Pte. J. Turner, were other members of the party.

EUCHRE WAS GREAT SUCCESS

Enjoyable affair held by church of Immaculate Conception Parish

A huge success, with "the standing room only" sign up, attended the euchre held in the Immaculate Conception Parish on Wednesday evening. Thirty four tables were in use, and all present were filled with the desire to enjoy themselves. Very Rev. Dean McColl was on hand early, as was also Rev. Fathers McGuire and McCauley of Ennismore, who were warmly welcomed.

Twelve spirited games were played, with Mrs. Frank McCoughley, ladies' winner and Mr. W. McCauliffe, the winner of the gentlemen's contest.

The prizes were kindly donated by Messrs. Vough and D. McCabe.

New tables are to be procured to provide ample accommodation for the next at home. Watch for the date.

What is your guess in the wheat guessing contest for the automobile? This is affording keen interest and entertainment in computing the number of grains of wheat in three quart sealers. Again, what is your guess? guess?

Returned Soldiers Were Welcomed At Halifax

Good Work is Accomplished by a Citizen's Committee

A returned Peterborough soldier who arrived home a couple of days ago has nothing but praise for the warm reception that was accorded the men by the citizens of Halifax and other towns along the route, also the Y.M.C.A. staff at Halifax. The steamer which brought the boys to this side of the Atlantic had hardly come to a standstill when a basket of apples was hoisted up on board. A few minutes later a Citizens' committee went on Board and took off the mail which was stamped at the committee's own expense. For the few days that the men remained in Halifax they were royally treated. Concerts were provided each night by the different churches of the city and free tickets for the moving picture shows and the theatres were issued to the boys during their stay. The men were banquetted on several occasions and when they left Halifax a plentiful supply of tobacco, fruit and magazines were provided.

This work has been carried on by the citizens of Halifax for the past two years, and it is the intention of the people to continue it until the war is over and the last boatload of veterans have reached Canada. Similar treatment was accorded the boys when they reached Amherst and other points along the line, where fruit and cigarettes were provided. The men who return home are particularly grateful for the work of the Y.M.C.A. at Halifax, where everything was done to give the boys a fitting welcome home and make the journey comfortable when the veterans left Halifax.

THE UNEXPECTED HAPPENS

Everybody knows that leather has risen in price till it has reached a figure about double what it was before the war. Knowing this, it was hardly looked for that any store would sacrifice its stock, and put on a sale that would naturally greatly reduce its supply, and necessitate heavy buying at higher prices. D. Zacks has given the surprise, and his big advertisement on the front page of the first section to-day tells the story.

Prices quoted show that thrifty buyers can save a lot of money by buying ahead, as the values are evident to all.

FISHERMAN CAME HOME WITH FINE AUTO TIED TO DECK OF TRAWLER

BASE AMERICAN FLOTILLAS IN BRITISH WATERS. — Irish fishermen along the coasts where the U-boats operate, have made some remarkable catches during the past year. The story of the fisherman who found a $15,000 box of diamonds from the Lusitania in his nets one day, and whose honesty in returning them to their rightful owners, was rewarded by a check for $1,000, is well known. There is another fisherman who came home from a fishing expedition with a fine new American automobile lashed to the deck of his little trawler. There are hundreds of fishermen who have made modest fortunes out of salvage of one kind or another. Wheat, flour and coal salvage are all profitable businesses in the coast towns nowadays.

The story of the man who came home from the sea with a brand new automobile is a household favourite in the Irish ports. Accompanied by his son he was mackerel fishing when he was aroused by the report of an explosion. On the horison a cargo steamer com America was settling by the stern. It had been torpedoed. The fishermen headed for it and soon met the captain and crew in two open boats. "She's loaded with American automobiles, you might get one before she goes under," said the skipper jokingly as he and his shipmates passed on toward shore.

The torpedoed ship was still well above water when the fisherman ran alongside. He at once sent his son on board to look around. The latter found the hold full of automobiles. "Run one through this gangway" directed the father. With the aid of some tackle the machine was dropped into the fishing vessel. A few moments later, as the trawler steamed away the ship disappeared. The fisherman with an automobile is now the envy of his village.

Many torpedoed vessels manage to reach shore where they are usually pounded to pieces on the rocks. But before the cargo is lost forever people come from miles around to salvage it. Anything that will float is used and everyone helps himself. Men, women and children attack cargo and removing brass fittings and anything else of value. Flour and canned meats, fruits and vegetables form the larger portion of the salvaged articles.

One village has had the good fortune to have a couple of foodships break up on its very doorstep Most of the ships of course go down at sea. But this does not dishearten the alert fishermen who have been known to transfer several hundred sacks of the best American flour from a vessel while it is sinking many miles from land. If the exxplosion tears a big enough hole in the victim much of the cargo will become loosened and wash ashore, where it is quickly spied by the watchful eyes of the natives.

Salvage companies also are very active and are making huge profits. Some have transformed their whole staffs to this coast. Their agents can bid on a wheat cargo without seeing it, and can tell just how far into a sack of flour the water will have penetrated in a given period.

The Fraser Mission Band of St. Paul's Church will hold their Annual Christmas Sale of Aprons, Fancy Work, Home-Cooking and Candy, on Saturday afternoon, December 8th, from 3 to 6 o'clock, in the Sunday School Room. Afternoon Tea will be served, to which the public are invited. 2d-121

Alien Officials Started On Trip To Their Homes

German and Austrian Agents From Orient Are Closely Guarded

NEW YORK, Nov. 23.—Guarded by government agents under Captain Wm. M. Offey, of the Department of Justice and members of the American Protective League, sixty-eight German and Austrian diplomatic and consular agents formerly stationed in China were escorted from their hotels yesterday to the steamship Bergensfjord, which will take them home. The Teutonic group came to this country on a guarantee of safe conduct for their transportation abroad.

In automobiles with lowered curtains they travelled through the city to South Brooklyn, where they boarded the steamship. Federal agents accompanied each limousine to insure a strict compliance with the government's orders that the aliens should carry away no knowledge of America's military preparations. The party appeared contented, and an Oriental touch was given by the Chinese wife and two children of a member. With a number of the Austrians were their wives and children.

Foremost in the party was Baron von Rosthern, who was the Austro-Hungarian Minister to China. The group consisted of thirty Germans and thirty-eight Austrians, who have been stopping at hotels in this city since their arrival last Friday.

Ever since they arrived in this country they have been guarded carefully by members of the American Protective League.

When the alien group reached San Francisco they were met by members of the league, who guarded their every movement until relieved by representatives located in the next city the party stopped at. In this way the government made certain to preclude any information reaching them in their trip across the continent.

During their stay in this ountry they were treated with marked courtesy, but it was firmly impressed upon them that the government would not countenance any violation of the safe conduct order.

While in New York Baron Von Rosthern and eight members of his legation stopped at the Holland House while the remainder of the party went to Wallick's Hotel. Sixty well-known business men in charge of Captain Wm. A. Callahan, of the league, constituted a volunteer guard during their stay here and maintained a watchful eye on the group.

Some of the guards arranged automobile rides for the comfort of the group, contributing their own limousines for that purpose. In each instance, however, precautions were taken to prevent the members from venturing near the water front or from observing any of the nation's military preparations. No telephonic communication was permitted.

When the hour approached for their trip to South Brooklyn Captain Offley approached with his agents. A score of automobiles was sent to both hotels and caused some commotion, word spreading that raids were being conduted. Police reserves were summoned from nearby stations to handle the crowds which gathered, and the aliens hurried into the waiting vehicles.

A NINTH ANNIVERSARY

An event that always creates a mild sensation with the buying public is the annual Anniversary Sale of H. J. Zacks. Its opening date is on November 24th, and this year it comes on Saturday of this week. Their big, full-page advertisement in this issue is even fuller than ever of remarkable money-saving bargains in ladies' and children's ready-to-wear, and the prices are much lower than the public could expect under present conditions. However, the reputation gained by these annual sales is that the store always gives what it advertises and no doubt there will be the usual big rush to-morrow morning.

Gordon Frederick Holland, 384 1-2 Water Street.

John Morrison, R. R. No. 3, Peterborough.

Gerald B. Desautels, 40 George St.

Daniel Holmes.

"I'm learning the trade of buffer at the Peterborough Lock Works," said Robert Wilson, 891 Water Street when asked why he claimed exemption.

"They don't use locks in the war," Mr. Aylmer replied.

"I guess not," Wilson admitted.

"We can hardly call your work an industry of national importance. It isn't like producing food for the soldiers," Mr. Aylmer explained. Decision deferred.

His Claim Unsupported.

Frank H. Emmerson, 297 Park Street, regarded his occupation as draughtsman at the C.G.E. Company as sufficient reason for his exemption from the draft. He said he was one of a dozen draughtsmen in the C.G.E. office and about eight apprentices. Looking up the statement of Mr. Wardle's appeal, which was refused, Mr. Aylmer showed that there were fifteen expert draughtsmen and thirteen apprentices.

"Why did the company not ask for your exemption?"

"That's something I can't explain," Emmerson said. "They simply can't get other men now."

"Probably they knew they couldn't show that your work was of national importance," Mr. Aylmer commented.

"They're going to miss us if we're taken," Emmerson declared.

"But they apparently don't object to your going," Mr. Moore remarked.

Exemption disallowed.

Samuel Henry Abbott, R. R. No. 3, Peterborough, a carpenter at the Quaker Oats plant, applied on domestic grounds. He stated that he was the sole support of his parents and sister. He added financial reason. Abbott hadn't been examined by the Medical Board. He had been at the Armouries several times, but the farmers had received the preference. Decision deferred.

Two Brothers Wounded.

John Joseph Guerin, 120 Sophia Street, was transferred to Class 2. His two brothers went over the top with the 93rd Battalion. Guerin appealed on domestic reasons arising out of his brothers' service. Both of them were wounded and are now in English hospitals.

A Farm Helper.

Joseph L. Shaughnessy, a young Otonabee farmer, hired with David F. Crowley on 13th July.

"The Conscription law went into effect on 6th July," Mr. Aylmer remarked. "Doesn't it look like the scattering of the flock when the fox comes?"

Shaughnessy has three brothers, two of them married. He was the wanderer of the family, he said. Last winter he worked in the Henry Hope Company, but had generally hired out with farmers.

Shaughnessy and Mr. Crowley's son had harvested the whole 250 acres this summer. The owner was unable to help. Decision deferred.

Sole Suport at Home.

Alexander Loucks, 666 George Street, chief inspector of fuse forgings with the Imperial Munitions Board, applied for exemption as the sole support of his mother. He also referred to the importance of his work, but the Board declined to consider that phase of his appeal. Decision deferred.

Frederick Joseph Lajoie, Gladstone Avenue, said he was the sole support of his father and sister. He was employed as a munitions maker for two years until the Metal Products Company folded its tents, when he went to the Quaker Oats plant, and is engaged with the Otis-Fenson Company putting up electric elevators. Mr. Lajoie stated that his wages was the only money received into his home, as his father was too old to do much work. Decision deferred.

Clayton Sanderson, who lives with his father, Alex. Sanderson, on the Chemong Road, at the 4th Line corner, asked for exemption for the reason that he was needed at home. He and an eighteen-year-old brother do practically all the work as the result of their father's disability following an operation. Decision deferred.

Carmen Edward Deck, of Otonabee, was granted exemption until he ceases to be engaged in farm work.

Arnold William Bidgood, a young farmer living in Monaghan, appealed on occupational grounds. One brother purchased a farm this fall and another works out, returning home at night. Exemption disallowed.

Silas Oscar Robinson works a farm on the 8th Concession of Smith in partnership with his uncle. They have a verbal agreement, which the applicant rather vaguely detailed. Exemption disallowed.

Famous Screen Artists To Visit Peterboro In Person

It will be of interest to the many movie fans in Peterborough to know that they will have the unusual opportunity of seeing two screen stars in real (not reel) life. Miss Bea Martin, the clever actress of whom the New York critic, Alan Dale, said, "the greatest juvenile actress in America," is to appear at the Grand Opera House on Wednesday, 28th November, in Oliver Morosco's great laughing success, "The Brat," coming here after record business in Toronto.

Miss Martin plays the title role and this pretty little actress who was so long associated with the Biograph, and more recently featured in the Kalem screen offering, "The Coquette." In the same Broadway cast will also be Miss Edna M. Holland, the beautiful and talented daughter of America's greatest character actor, E. M. Holland. Miss Holland has just left the Vitagraph Studios to play once more in a speaking part, and prior to that was seen on the screen in support of Pauline Frederick in "The World's Great Snare," and with Hazel Dawn in "The Feud Girl," both releases of the Famous Players Studio.

Miss Holland and Miss Martin will be pleased to meet any young ladies who are interested in these matters.

FAREWELLS WERE AFFECTING, BUT WAS WRONG MAN

It Was the Other Smith, After All, Who Had to Go to War

LOS ANGELES, Cal.—If you had offered your services to your country, been passed by the examining board, given a farewell party to your friends and had been feasted by them in return; if you had packed up and gone to the station to entrain for Camp Lewis, and if your sweethearts, mother and friends had wept half a barrel of tears over you—if after all that, the officials should suddenly inform you that they had taken you from the wrong district and that you'd have to go back home, wouldn't it get your goat?

This was the experience of one J. C. Smith—and the expression "one J. C. Smith" is used advisedly, for the whole trouble arose from the fact that there is more than one J. C. Smith in Los Angeles. The Smith of this story is an artist and his good intentions toward the government have never been doubted.

PLANS HIS DEPARTURE.

When Mr. Smith registered on June 5th his name and address were taken by Mrs. E. Wood, registrar of precinct 406, district 15. Soon afterward Mr. Smith left for San Diego and when he returned to Los Angeles he sought to find out if he had been called. Not being sure of his district, he inquired of the nearest examining board and was informed that he belonged to district No. 16. There he was told that he had been misinformed and that his district was No. 15. The board of that district, finding his name on the records, examined and passed him.

He was allowed three weeks in which to prepare for the journey to American Lake, but he waived his leave and reported that he was ready to go at once. Then began a series of parties and banquets at which J. C. Smith was alternately host and guest and at which innumerable toasts were drunk to the hero of many coming battles. At 8.30 one night recently Mr. Smith appeared at the Santa Fe station, accompanied by a host of sorrowing, though admiring friends.

PLOT GROWS THICK.

In the meantime another J. C. Smith of district No. 15 had seen in the newspaper that he was among those who were to leave Los Angeles for American Lake Oct. 1. Not daring to disobey the summons, yet wondering why he had been called after having filed an appeal for exemption, he appeared at the station notably excited.

It was then discovered that J. C. Smith, the artist, did not belong to district No. 15, and that the board of appeals had not yet passed on the other Smith's plea for exemption. The artist discovered later that he had been right in the first place, that his district was No. 16, and that it would probably be some time before he was called. And so it turns out that he who was toasted and banqueted now feels it a duty to his friends that he join something, so he is going to try to get in the camouflage division.

"Olivet To Calvary" On Thursday Night

"Olivet to Calvary" will be sung by the Choir of St. John's Church on Thursday next. St. Andrew's Eve. Nov. 29th, at 8:15 p.m., instead of Friday, Nov. 30th, on account of the visit of Premier Sir Robert Borden.

Hid Six Months To Escape Draft, Gets Half Year In Jail

NEW YORK, Nov. 22.—Daniel Regan, an American of draft age, who when the selective draft law became operative went into voluntary retirement "for the period of the war," decided last Monday that he would like to see if New York had changed during the six months he had remained indoors, and so he sallied forth on Broadway before the white lights were dimmed. Daniel's home is on Ninety-sixth Street, near Columbus Avenue, and the neighbours who had known him before the war, were surprised when he suddenly appeared. The had been led to believe that he had left the country.

Regan had not one a block before he ran into Policeman John Cannon, of the West 100th Street Station. Cannon looked at Regan and Regan blinked back at Cannon.

"Where have you been these six months" asked Cannon.

"Oh I've been gallivantin' 'round," Regan answered.

"Let me see your registration card," said Cannon.

"I do not happen to own one," replied Regan.

"You are under arrest," said Cannon.

Regan was turned over to the Federal authorities. He decided to plead guilty, and told James S. Johnson, Assistant United States District Attorney, that for six months he had remained in his room to escape service in the national army. All this was told to Judge Julius M. Mayer in the United States District Court.

"Well, I will sentence him to six months in the Mercer County jail," said the Judge, and Regan leaves for that prison to-day.

CAPTIVE GERMAN'S DIARY DESCRIBES DEPARTURE OF DRAFT FOR THE FRONT.

BRITISH HEADQUARTERS IN FRANCE.—Illustrations of the changing attitude of many German soldiers towards the war are contained in captured diaries. Describing the departure of draft men from a depot town the author of one diary writes:

"First battalion is to supply draft of ninety-nine men. To conduct them to ——— station three hundred men are detailed, some with rifles to escort draft, others to act as pickets. In the afternoon our men are eagerly waiting for their comrades of the first convalescent company, who at last arrive. But what a sight it is.

"In front marches a squad of guards with rifles and another squad in the rear to guard German soldiers, our brave lads in field grey who—as the newspapers relate in such beautiful language — are joyfully going forth to restroy our enemies, inspired by love of the fatherland. The draft is ready. The band strikes up a march and the column begins to move. Guards are so numerous that there is one for every two men. It is not a scandal that our boys in field grey are led out into the field to fight and give their lives for the fatherland like criminals to the hangman, or worse, like cattle to the slaughter? It is not enough that hours before—in fact as soon as the departure of draft men is announced—men not forming part of the draft should be prevented from going to town by pickets every five yards in every direction. No, we must also endure the shame of being escorted to the station by guards. Do not the beautiful lying stories of our German papers place our brave lads in field grey, who for love of the fatherland fight and destroy the enemy, in a totally false light when such things as this happen? Free sacrifice, indeed!"

Another diary related how the men of one company refused to obey the orders of their lieutenant, and only did so when the captain declared he would have one man in every four shot unless the orders were obeyed.

Wholesale Exemptions To Be Appealed

Military Advisory Council Will Carry Cases Through to Central Appeal Judge.

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

OTTAWA, Ont., Nov. 23.—Steps are already being taken for extensive appeals from exemptions granted by tribunals in certain points of the Dominion, and the Military Advisory Council expresses the confidence that in no province or district will men who should be taken be left at home. The appeals will be taken by the military representatives of the boards in question to a Provincial Judge and then, if necessary, to the General Appeal Judge, Mr. Justice Duff. Some time may be lost through such appeals, but it is fully expected that the combing out process will be complete. So far the percentage of exemptions granted in all provinces but Quebec have been about equal. Of the A class a little better than half are being enrolled for service, while there are a considerable number of conditional exemptions which will expire on a certain date. The enrollments of registered A class men will ultimately average better than 50 per cent. In Quebec exemptions granted are much in excess of those of other provinces. Not only is this so in the rual districts, but also in the cities where the most specious claims in many cases are allowed. No estimate as yet has been made as to the total number of men accepted for service, but the results are said to be satisfatcory.

Army Of 100,000 To Repress Plots

Home Guards' Services Wanted—Germans Must Quit Washington by December 15.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 15. — The most complete machinery used for the purpose of any nation will be erected by this government to enforce the President's proclamation to put down destruction of property by enemy influences. It was learned that President Wilson is firm in the view that one of the most important tasks of the Government at present is to destroy the malign alien influences crippling industry. A force of at least 100,000 men will be needed.

Acting under the President's direct orders, Secretary of War Baker today instructed the Bureau of Militia affairs that it would be the central organization authorized to execute the plan for watching enemy aliens and enforcing the President's proclamation. These seasoned regular officers are instructed to create a guard to protect the prohibited area around warehouses, piers, and shipping points, and to be the eyes of the nation in the enforcement of the registration of Germans.

Regular army men will be used as guards in some instances, but as far as possible Home Guards, State Constabulary and municipal police will be employed in guarding the prohibited districts and in enforcing the registration and other provisions of the proclamation. Under the terms of the proclamation the Attorney-General is authorized to protect all industries within three miles of a river or navigable stream. In this zone are most of the war industries and shipyards.

Epsom Salts Will Cure Lockjaw

New Cures Reported at The Rockefeller Institute. A Cure for Tetanus

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 22.—Announcement of two discoveries of world-wide importance in the cure of tetanus and syphilis were made at the annual fall meeting of the National Academy of Science held at the University of Pennsylvania.

Both discoveries were made at the Rockefeller Institute in New York under the direction of Dr. Simon P. Flexner, who announced the discovery of the new cure for syphilis amid the cheers of the scientists in attendance at the meeting. They regarded the discovery as a triumph over the scientists of Germany, who had given the world "606," the only other cure for the dread disease.

Discovery of the new drug, known as A-189, was made at the Rockefeller Institute after collaborative experiments dating from the outbreak of the world war.

In announcing the discovery Dr. Flexner explained that it was sought for because of the danger attendant upon the injection of Salvarsan, or 606, and owing to the fact that the war had made it virtually unobtainable in the United States. The new drug, an organic arsenical compound, can be prepared in his country at a nominal cost of 5 cents a dose, wholesale, whereas the wholesale price of Salvarsan is now $3.50 a dose.

Less Damage to Body Cells.

The most important feature of the new invention is the fact that it develops greater resistance to the spirochaeta infections without doing as much damage to the cells of the body.

Dr. Flexner pointed out that although Salvarsan has been of much benefit to thousands of sufferers, many experiments with it have resulted fatally, due to the potence with which it attacked the body cells while combatting the disease. Salvarsan is about ten times as poisonous as the spirochaeta is to the body cells, while the newly discovered drug will have a partial effect of from one to twenty to one to thirty. In other words, a great deal more of the potency of the new drug will be concentrated on the syphilis germ than was the case with Salvarsan.

Will Cure Tetanus.

The Flexener remedy will be only one-half to one-third as poisonous to the human system as the German invented cure, while acting with relatively the same effect on parasites. Hence the drug can be used in smaller doses.

Announcement that tetanus, or lockjaw, can be cured by an injection into the veins of a 4 per cent. solution of ordinary Epsom salts amazed the gathering of scientists and prepared them for the announcement of the greater discovery. Dr. Samuel J. Meltzer, also of the Rockefeller Institute, made the announcement of the simple tetanus cure.

Bank Statement Shows Canada's Great Prospects

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

OTTAWA, Ont., Nov. 23. — The bank statement for October reflects the great prosperity of Canadian people. Total demand deposits, notice deposits, and Canadian deposits, outside Canada, in October, approximated $1,662,000,000, which was sixty millions ahead of September, and two hundred millions more than in October, 1916.

BRITAIN'S LOSS--GENERAL MAUDE

It is the irony of fate that death claims Sir Stanley Maude the British commander in Mesopotamia, when he seemed to be immune from the mischances of battle and safe from the stealthy assaults of one of the wrost climates in the world. The British medical service at Bagdad is now most efficient and does not lack for supplies, so that the commander of the forces could count on the best of care if his health should be affected. The campaign which restored the prestige of British arms in the East was finished; at least active operations would not be necessary unless the Germans organized a great army to dispute the ascendancy of the British. Temporarily, General Maude was ruler of Bagdad.

It seems only the other day that General Maude issued his proclamation in which he reminded the people of Bagdad that "for twenty-six generations" they had "suffered under strange tyrants who have endeavoured to set one Arab house against another," and called upon them to take part in the management of their civil affairs "in collaboration with the political representatives of Great Britain who accompany the British Army." And now, at the height of his fame, when the field of usefulness was opening more and more to him, this brilliant commander is lost to Great Britain. Perhaps in one of his able lieutenants, Lieut. Gen. W. R. Marshall or Lieut. Gen. A. S. Cobbe, a worthy successor can be found, but Maude was regarded as indispensable. He had won the affection as well as the confidence of his troops. More popular than Kitchener, he was as scientific in his methods, as thorough, and as uniformly successful. Sir Stanley Maude promised to be a greater soldier. It is no reflection upon the merits of K. of K. to assert that the Mesopotamian campaign was a more difficult business than ever fell to him.

But in appraising the deserts of General Maude, it must be borne in mind that when he took over the command of the mixed British forces from Sir Percy Lake, they were a newly organised and admirably equipped army, with river communications down the Tigris to the Persian Gulf that left almost nothing to be desired. Furthermore, railroads had been laid in the desert up from Basra. Townsend, who waited vainly for relief at Kut, never had good tools to work with. The equipment of his small force was a reproach to the Indian Office, and in the end there was a great scandal. No matter what gallantry the rank and file displayed, Townshend was doomed to failure.

When Maude succeeded that accomplished organizer Sir Percy Lake, the British Army had been increased to 150,000 men, and it was served by an aviation corps that could detect the slightest move of the Turks and join in attacks upon them with an inexhaustible supply of bombs. At the same time, the sinuosities of the Tigris gave the Turks no mean advantage, and in their intrenchments they fought as stubbornly as Osman Pasha's men had done at Plevna. An incompetent or a temporizing commander would have failed in Maude's place. But he was most versatile in attack and never gave the enemy any rest. With him it was one feint after another and a grand assault where one was least expected. The strategy of Maude in the Mesopotamian campaign will always be a delight to the students of wars. He was never at fault, nor had a wasted moment. When he could bring the naval flotilla up the Tigris, after the Turks were routed out of Kut, they were always kept on the run, and could never make a real stand.

In the death of Sir Stanley Maude the British have lost a master strategist and there will be no sorrow in Berlin.—New York Times.

Women's Part In The War

Mrs. Pankhurst Believes Women Should Keep the Men "Carrying On"

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)
(By Lowell Mellett.)

LONDON, Nov. 23.—No longer a suffragette—for the period of the war she is only an English woman—Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst believes women should play an important part in the work for victory by keeping the men "carrying on." Mrs. Pankhurst was asked if she thought national service was a better vote winner than militancy.

"Now you mustn't expect me to criticize the suffragettes," she responded quickly. They are my friends. As for myself I am no longer a suffragette, but for the period of the war only an English woman. As far as the women's social and political union is concerned it forgot all else than the war when the war began and devoted itself to helping win. True, we got the vote, but I think I can honestly say that wasn't the purpose of our work. You must remember the W.S.P.U. always included more objects in its programme than suffrage. It is because our old name was identified completely with suffrage that we have changed it now to "women's party."

"We have a definite programme in the nation's behalf besides suffrage. Our aim is to keep England "carrying on." "Reports received here indicate that is the aim of most all American women. Women must exercise their fine sustaining force in these times. I found it true in Russia that no matter how well the men do, the women keep the country "carrying on." I am sure the same will be true elsewhere."

THE WEATHER

Four or five inches of snow on the ground, and the jingle of sleigh bells give things a winter aspect but these conditions are hardly likely to remain. This morning, however, the thermometer was down to 16 degrees, the lowest to date. More severe weather was experienced last year previous to this time, and we should have several weeks yet of fairly open weather.—W. P.

700 Exemptions To Be Appealed

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

MONTREAL, Nov. 23. — Many Quebec exemptions will be appealed by the military representatives on the tribunal. It is announced that protests to higher tribunal will be made in 700 cases of 1,723 exempted yesterday. Word was received from Ottawa to push these appeals to the utmost.

No Exemption Is Sought For Ball Players

PRESIDENT OF THE NATIONAL LEAGUE THINKS IT WOULD BE MOST UNPATRIOTIC

NEW YORK, Nov. 22.—The National League will not ask special exemption for any of its ball players, and is not in sympathy with any selfish plan of discrimination in favour of its business or players, declared John K. Tener, president of the League, here to-day.

The executive of the National League in discussing the proposal to exempt eighteen on each club of the two major leagues as suggested by President Johnson of the American League, said:

"I think it most unpatriotic to suggest that baseball should even appear to shirk a duty at this time, when so many parents are giving their sons and when other business interests are giving their best men to the service of our armed forces, and are making other sacrifices for the purpose of baseball. We cannot ask the Government to grant us the slightest favour.

"I cannot state too strongly that the National League is not in sympathy with any selfish plan of discrimination in favour of its business or players."

To the Electors of East Peterboro

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN:—

I believe no greater disaster could, at the present time, befall our country than the defeat of the Borden Union Administration at the polls on December 17th.

The Policy of this Administration is the speedy and continuous reinforcements of our Canadian troops on the battle front; and the putting forth of all our National strength, for the cause of civilization and freedom.

To carry out this Policy, a number of Canada's ablest Public men of vision—sinking for the present—all political differences now stand together—strong to battle for the right—united to WIN the WAR.

For over three years thousands of Loyal Canadians of many creeds and of different Nationalities, have stood shoulder to shoulder on the Battlefields of Europe, gallantly fighting a common foe, and sometimes standing; sometimes falling, have won for the name of Canada undying fame. Shall we, with all possible speed, send help to these, our heroic defenders now holding the battle-line or shall we, break faith with them as well as "with those who die"—delay—vote—while the enemy advances?

As a Union Candidate in this Riding, I am putting forth every effort to win East Peterborough to the support of the Borden Union Administration and if elected shall to the utmost of my ability support the same.

To this end I now earnestly solicit the co-operation and influence of every loyal, patriotic man and woman in East Peterborough.

I have the honor to be, faithfully yours,

J. A. SEXSMITH

HENRY FORD SUBSCRIBES TO VICTORY LOAN

Official Total Up To Noon To-day was $152,000,000

Canadian Press Despatch:

TORONTO, Nov. 23.—Official figures given out at the Dominion Victory Loan headquarters to-day, show a total of 152 million subscribed in all Canada, but this is regarded as being below the actual amount taken up, as several large divisions have not reported for some days. It is believed that the actual total to noon to-day will be easily 160 millions. Big subscriptions announced this morning included one million from the Quebec government and a half million from Henry Ford.

County Council Authorize Grant To Red Cross

Mill and a Quarter Will be Levied On County for British Red Cross

Two original motions and six amendments were required before the County Councillors could record a majority vote in favour of a grant of twelve thousand dollars to the British Red Cross Society. The matter was dealt with this afternoon at a meeting of the Finance Committee of the Council. One mill and a half will be levied on next year's rate, and the money will be paid on or after the first of January next. Councillor H. G. Fitzgerald urged his colleagues to be equal to the occasion and make a substantial grant to a worthy cause. After much quibbling the committee endorsed a motion fixing the grant at one mill and a quarter. Councillor H. B. Rye supported this motion, while the opposition included Councillors Griffith and Bullied.

Solicited Aid.

Mrs. Knox, Mrs. E. Bartlett, and Mrs. McNeely, waited on the Council in the interest of the Provisional Auxiliary of the Great War Veterans' Association, who are soliciting financial aid with which to provide club rooms for the members of the Association. A number of Peterborough County boys are members of the Association. It was suggested that the ladies in the township send representatives to the Auxiliary meetings.

Sophia St. Dance Cost One Man $200 Another Fined $10

Two men appeared in Police Court this morning after a roistering evening at a Sophia Street dance last night. One of them, a resident of Parnell Street, anticipated a slow time by stowing a big bottle of whisky in his coat, after an eye-opener by way of stimulating his sociability and generally arousing his work-dulled spirits. If there was anything slow or sober to the "At Home," it must have gathered speed as the whisky forced the gaiety, and apparently wound up in a glorious revel. The Parnell Street man and another from Charlotte Street finally broke away about one o'clock, and after wandering a long distance in a short stretch to Mark Street, picked out a dark and sleepy house as home. They insisted that they be let in, and kicked up such a rumpus that the police were finally called out, and the social pair were helped to the Police Station. The Parnell Street man was in no condition to put up any kind of an argument, and admitted that he carried the whisky from home. He was fined $200 for having liquor in a place other than his private dwelling place. His companion was taxed $10 for being drunk in a public place. It was a big night, but big nights come high these dry and spiritless days.

VICTORY IS CELEBRATED IN TORONTO

TORONTO, Nov. 23.—All the "Big Bens" and school bells chimed a glad chorus here to-day in celebration of the victory last Tuesday and Wednesday of the British troops in France. Before adjourning for the noon recess the school children passed a special half hour in singing patroitic songs, concluding with the national anthem.

THE PLANETS IN WINTER

The predictions for the coming winter skies are that there will be four great planets shining at one time. They will be Venus, Jupiter, Mars and Saturn, and each, except Mars, will be at its highest.

Even the most casual observer cannot have failed to notice the bright star in the southwest at twilight. Hardly less conspicuous is a second blue-white star which rises shortly after dark. These two are the planets Venus and Jupiter.

The great brilliancy and similarity of colour of the two at once suggests that they have something in common. Venus is white, and reflects sunlight practically unchanged, while Jupiter's light is strongly bluish, and indicates powerful absorption due to the dense vapors in its atmosphere. Both of these worlds are heavily cloud laden. The sunlight barely touches Venus before it is reflected, but on Jupiter it penetrates to some depth before being turned back from the tops of the rolling clouds which completely encircle the ball.

Venus owes its dominant position among the planets to its nearness to the sun. If Venus and Jupiter were interchanged in space Jupiter would become a great light fifty times as bright as Venus is now, while Venus' brilliancy would decline until it would be an insignificant naked eye object.

Venus is approaching the earth, and even now it casts distinct shadows on the ground. When at its brightest, in the middle of next January, one will be able to read coarse print by its light.

Mercury is too near the sun to be found. This fleet little wanderer can only be seen at four or five brief intervals during a year. Uranus and Neptune, while of great scientific interest, are much too faint to be easily located.

Mars is also drawing near. Its coming is keenly watched by astronomers, for the canals, seas, and snowstorms can only be studied when it is nearest. Although still far off, Mars is a beautiful object. Its flat and featureless surface is an expanse of ocher yellow, interspersed with a wonderful variety of exceedingly minute markings of green, blue and brown, and capped over all with the dazzling white of its polar snows.

McDonald Estate Claims Timber for Galway by License

An injunction issued by the Alfred McDonald Estate to restrain Thomas Henderson, of Galway, from cutting timber on his property, on which the McDonald Estate holds a timber license, was heard by Mr. Justice Middleton at Osgoode Hall yesterday.

Mr. Henderson, through his solicitor, Mr. G. N. Gordon, claimed the right to remove the timber under the provisions of an Act that gives the owner priority over a license if the logs are to be used for buildings. The defendant states that he wants them for the building of a barn. The continuation of the injunction was ordered until 4th December, when the trial will be held at Lindsay.

Peck, Kerr & McElderry represented the McDonald Estate.

Social and Personal

Miss Phyllis Cumberland has taken a position in the Bank of Toronto, Toronto.

Mrs. Scolthorp, Port Hope, is visiting Mr. and Mrs. Chris. Graham, Gilmour street.

Mrs. Duncan Walker entertained the members of the 57th Chapter, I.O.D.E. at tea yesterday at the 57th Chapter tea rooms.

Mrs. Foote and Mrs. Fiske were the hostesses yesterday at the weekly tea given by the 57th Chapter I.O.D.E. Mrs. Schneider, who poured tea, was assisted by Miss F. Davidson, Mrs. Manson Comstock, Mrs. F. Neal, Mrs. (Dr.) Middleton, Mrs. Lech, Miss Flora Collins and Miss Langford. Several small teas were given at the tea, Mrs. (Dr.) Buchanan and Mrs. (Dr. Cameron being amongst the hostesses.

WEDDING BELLS

HOBBINS—COLLINS.

At St. Peter's Cathedral, Tuesday, Nov. 20th, was the scene of a quiet, but very pretty wedding, when Miss Mary Collins, youngest daughter of Mrs. D. Moher, Park street, became the wife of Mr. Dennis Hobbins, son of Mr. D. Hobbins, Queen street. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Father Phelan, who also said the nuptial mass. The groom was supported by Mr. Vincent Heenan, while Miss Katie Hobbins, sister of the groom, assisted the bride. After the ceremony the happy young couple motored to the home of the bride, where a dainty wedding breakfast was served.

The groom's gift to the bride was a lovely pearl rosary to the bridesmaid, cameo ring, and gold cuff links to the best man.

The young couple left on the 11.40 G.T.R. train for Toronto, Whitby and other points. On their return they will reside on Park street.

Fireman Geo. Degen Thought Discharge Freed Him From M.S.A.

Fire Chief Grange discovered to-day that he was employing a fireman who had not complied with the Military Service Act, and consequently he or the city was liable to a fine of $1,000.

George Degen was married on 28th July. He had obtained his discharge from the Army and was under the impression that this freed him from the Conscription law.

The information had come to Chief Thompson of the Police Department, who notified Chief Grange.

Degen's discharge followed immediately, and this afternoon he was expected to report to Chief Thompson.

FUNERAL YESTERDAY.

The funeral of the late James Baptie, who died at the family residence, Springville, took place yesterday and was one of the most largely attended funerals held in many years in that vicinity, being attended by practically all the country side, beside a large number from the city.

The pall-bearers were: Messrs. Ormand Ball, John McIntosh, Joseph Foster and Fred E. Wilson. Interment took place at the Ida cemetery.

Montreal Tribunal Thinks All Others Might Get Off.

MONTREAL, Nov. 23. — Judges of the Laurier Avenue Military Service Tribunal, discussing despatches from Toronto, complaining of the large number of exemptions granted in this district stated that in their opinion the reason why so many exemptions granted can be laid to the fact that the law is very wide and contains many loop-holes. For example, although, on the face of it, a student in the Faculty of Arts or Law is not studying for the national interest exactly, still the tribunal judges figure that it is these students who, when they complete their education, will form the ruling class of our country. In this event, they think that students of all faculties should be granted exemptions, as it is in the national interest, that they be kept in the country. They thought that practically everybody with the exception of those who spend their days in pool rooms and places of a like character could be exempted.

At the Westmount Tribunal, a judge pointed out that all the exemptions except in cases of physical disability were only temporary.

Use Up First Panel In De Saulles Case More Jurors Called

Only Two Men Found Thursday Sufficiently Unbiased to Sit on the Jury —Boy Visits Mother in Prison and is Sorry When He Must Leave Her

PRISONER GAINS CONFIDENCE

NEW YORK, Nov. 24.—The trial of Mrs. Blanca De Saulles for the murder of her divorced husband, John Longer De Saulles, was interrupted Thursday in the court-room of Justice Manning at Mineola, when, with only ten jurors seated in the jury box, the panel of 150 veniremen was exhausted.

The trial was postponed until 10 o'clock next morning to allow time to bring in fifty more residents of Nassau County. The two jurors selected Thursday were the only ones acceptable to both sides out of a total of forty-five veniremen examined. On two occasions six successive veniremen stated that they had formed trong opinions on the case from reading the newspapers, and that they could not be fair jurors. By asking if the State would have to produce testimony to overcome that impression, District Attorney Weeks admitted that he always assumed that these opinions were favourable to Mrs. De Saulles.

This exhibition of local public sentiment on the case all took place in the presence of the accepted jurors, who numbered eight at the beginning of the day and ten at the end. Some of the jurors commented among themselves as veniceman after venireman declared that he had strong sentiments regarding the case and that it would require very strong evidence to change his mind. The jurymen, apparently not pleased by the time required to complete their number, brightened up very much when an occasional, isolated venireman would say that he had not made up his mind about the guilt or innocence of the defendant. The jurors looked very much dispirited when a man of professed neutrality was sent away by a peremptory challenge.

Several of the veniremen admitted that though they knew they were on the list of those who might try the case, they had been reading and discusing the case right up to the moment when they were called. Justice Manning and District Attorney Weeks both cast expressive glances at those who made such admissions, but made no comment.

None Had Read Women's Stories.

District Attorney Weeks asked each prospective juryman what papers he read, and counsel for the defense usually repeated the question later, in order to establish definitely the sources of the venireman's information about the case. Mr. Weeks asked each one particularly if he had read certain accounts by special women writers, in which the beauty and forlornness of the defendant were pictured somewhat vividly. None of the jurors admitted perusing any of the impressionistic views of the case, but most of them said they had studied the accompanying photographs and sketches.

After a long series of veniremen had professed to have formed opinions from reading the newspapers, Justice Manning interested himself and began to interrogate William H. Seaman, who felt that he had become too biased to serve.

"Now do you really mean that?" asked Justice Manning.

"Yes," said Seaman, "I think I do."

"Are you accustomed to forming your opinions by what you read in the newspapers?"

"No."

"Well, then, why is it so in this case? The newspapers have only been printing news, haven't they? No newspaper that you have read has expressed an opinion as to the guilt or innocence of this defendant, has it?"

"No."

"They have been printing information for the public. That is what newspapers are for. They haven't been suggesting what opinion you should form. Now are you sure that you have formed an opinion from what you have read?"

"Well, I've got an opinion anyhow?"

"All right, then, you're excused."

Several men were excused because they had conscientious scruples against capital punishment or thought it ought to apply only to a certain group of criminals. William S. Flouress of Hempstead, a retired baker, who reads German newspapers and one English evening paper, said he had his own ideas about capital punishment.

"When do you think it ought to be applied?" said District Attorney Weeks.

"Well, for instance, if robbery is included with murder, I favour it. If a man breaks into a house to steal and then kills a man, I would send him to the electric chair."

"You would enforce the law only where murder accompanied burglary?"

"Well, in some other cases, too."

"But not in this case?"

"No,, not in this case."

Lawyers' Friends Excused.

James A. Sutphin of Freeport was also against capital punishment, except in certain murder cases. Asked when he would apply it, he said:

"Only in cases where a person with a bad character who has shown criminality in the past is on trial."

Other men were excused because they were either close personal friends of one or another of the lawyers or had once been a client of one of the lawyers.

The questioning showed that both the defense and prosecution had made minute inquiries into the past and the business connections of the entire panel of 150. The new list of fifty will come into court without having undergone the previous scrutiny, and this may lead to questioning at even greater length then heretofore.

While fewer jurors were obtained Thursday than on preceding days, veniremen were examined far more rapidly. Following the example of Justice Manning, counsel for both sides formed their questions in language closer to the plow than the inkhorn and used a series of simple questions in place of one complicated verbal structure. The speed thus attained enabled them to examine nearly as many jurors as they had on the two preceding days.

The relatives and friends of Mrs. De Saulles became greatly reassured when jurors by the dozen testified that they had formed an opinion on the case which they could not change, as it was believed that this manifestation of the sentiment of the outside world could not be lost on the already chosen. William Errazuris, the brother, who had sat as expressionless as Mrs. De Saulles herself during the two preceding days, listened very intently and occasionally smiled and talked, after a juror had asserted the unalterableness of his opinion.

Mrs. De Saulles More Cheerful.

Mrs. De Saulles looked more cheerful and more interested than she had before. When she entered the courtroom with a train composed of her own and Sheriff Seaman's family she greeted her lawyers with a smile. Several times during the day she held brief conversations with her lawyers and with Mrs. Seaman. When one juror, who was decorated with long and pointed moustaches which gave an air of great ferocity to an otherwise benevolent countenance, was on the stand, general attention was attracted to his unusual adornment. Mrs. De Saulles leaned over and said something to Mrs. Seaman which caused them both to smile.

The ninth juror selected was Harry Livingstone, of Seaford, a travelling inspector for the Long Island Railroad. He was 55 years old. He is the first juror to lack a family, but to the question on that subject he had answered: "I did have."

The tenth juror and the youngest was Nicholas Schneider, a blacksmith of Hicksville. He was 37 years old and had three children. One of the questions put to him was:

"Have you ever shod any horses for members of the Meadow Breek Hunt Club?"

This was a club to which "Jack" De Saulles and many of his friends belonged. Schneider did not remember doing any work for any of them, and the defense accepted him.

Visits Mother in Jail.

In accordance with the agreement reached between lawyers for Mrs. De Saulles, for her brother-in-law, Charles A. H. De Saulles, and Justice Manning, four-year-old John Longer De Saulles was allowed to visit his mother in her room at the prison. This was the first time she had seen the boy since last Thursday. Since the first week of her imprisonment she had been seeing the child regularly on Mondays and Thursdays.

The boy arrived for the visit with his mother in the company of Harry S. Dougherty, of the Dougherty Detective Agency, who has been employed to guard him ever since his father was killed against the possibility of an attempt to kidnap and carry him away to Chile.

It was almost dark, and two flashlights were exploded as the boy, dressed in a brown coat and white duck trousers and socks that left his legs bare, alighted from the automobile. Evidently warned against having his picture taken, the boy threw his arm up to his face and ran toward the door of the Mineola jail, calling out to Dougherty: "They didn't get my picture because I turned my face away."

When he went upstairs to the room in the Sheriffs suite, which the prisoner has been occupying, the boy found his bother in bed, in compliance with the orders of her physician. They greeted each other joyfully.

After they had spent a few minutes telling each other what they had been doing since they had seen each other last, the mother got out a box of colored crayons, according to her lawyer, who was present, and began to help the child with sketches of animals and airplanes.

After they had had enough of that Mrs. De Saulles began to tell the boy stories. She used to entertain him thus by the hour, according to neighbours, in the intervals when the divorce court allowed her possession of him. Mr. Uterhart said that she told about "Jack and the Beanstalk" and "Little Red Riding Hood" Thursday.

The boy arrived at the jail at 4:15 and left at 5:45. Mrs. Phineas Seaman, wife of the Sheriff, who called to tell them it was time for the boy to go, said the boy wanted to stay and that the last thing he said was: "I wish I didn't have to go away."

By ARNOLD FREDERICKS

Duvall sprang forward and seized it with an exclamation of astonishment. It bore the same seal in the same black wax and upon it was the same semi-circular row of indentations. He tore the letter open. Its typewritten message was brief, but significant. "Only twenty-seven days more," it read. The grinning death's head seal seemed to Duvall's astonished eyes even more terrifying than before.

With a bound he reached the rear window and swung himself upon the fire escape. There was no one in sight. The gray surface of the iron work showed not the slightest scratch, save those made by his own heels earlier in the day. The steps of the ladder leading up to the next floor were glistening immaculate. Those of the one to the room below were equally so. He re-entered the room, and going to the opposite window threw it wide open. The three dormer windows of the adjoining house were gray, dusty, as though they had not been opened for years. He turned to his companion with a look of amazement.

"In all my experience, Mrs. Morton," he said "I do not think that I have ever encountered anything quite so astonishing. That letter must have been placed there while I was in the apartment above. Your cook your maid, are out. Certainly you did not place it there yourself. And yet we know that someone has been in this room, or at least delivered the letter, during the past fifteen minutes. Had I not found it here myself I should have been almost tempted to disbelieve it, but I am forced to admit its truth."

Mrs. Morton stood wringing her hands.

"It—it seems almost supernatural," she exclaimed. "Poor Ruth! What are we to do?"

"There is nothing supernatural about the matter, madam," Duvall remarked. "I don't doubt the explanation is simple enough could we but hit upon it. But so far I confess I am unable to understand it." He went over to the wall which adjoined that of the house next door, and sounded it inch by inch with a small hammer he took from his bag of tools. The operation required several minutes. When he had completed it he tossed the hammer back into his kit in disgust. "Brick, of course," he said, and perfectly solid." He turned toward the door.

"What are you going to do now?" Mrs. Morton asked.

"Try to find out something through this telegram. And also investigate the house next door."

"But, you will come back? I am afraid."

"I shall be at your call at all times, Mrs. Morton. If anything of interest occurs, notify me here." He drew a card from his pocket and wrote on it the name of his hotel. "Say nothing to your daughter about these new threats. I shall probably see you again later in the day." Shouldering his kit of tools, Duvall left the apartment. He was by no means satisfied with the results of his visit. In fact there had apparently been no results at all.

CHAPTER V.

Duvall's first move, after leaving Mrs. Morton's apartment that morning, was to enter the taxicab which had been waiting for him at the door and return to his hotel. A light overcoat which he had in the vehicle concealed his workman's disguise sufficiently to enable him to reach his room without exciting comment. Once there, he changed his clothes, putting on a professional looking frock coat, and adjusting a pair of shell-rimmed eyeglasses to complete the slight disguise. Thus equipped, he once more set out.

Grace had left a note for him, saying that she had gone shopping. Beside it lay the photograph of Ruth Morton, which he had, he remembered, left on his chiffonier while putting on his workman's clothes that morning. At the foot of her hastily written note Grace had added a postscript. "Is this the reason for your sudden interest in motion pictures?" it read. "Well, I'll admit she's a raving beauty, Richard, but I'll be she isn't half as nice as I am." Duvall read the note with a smile. Grace was always such a thoroughly good comrade.

Leaving the hotel, he went to the telegraph office from which the message to Ruth Morton had been delivered that morning. It was on Columbus Avenue, some four blocks from the Mortons' apartment.

"Can you tell me where this telegram was sent from?" he asked. The message showed that it had been filed, as well as delivered, within the city limits.

"It was sent from the main office on lower Broadway, at 8.30," he said briefly.

Duvall thanked him, then turned away. Although he realised that he could scarcely hope to obtain even a scanty description of the sender of the telegram from the main office, he determined to go there. First, however, he walked back toward the Mortons' apartment, and going up the steps of the brownstone house adjoining, rang the door bell.

A neat maidservant opened the door. Duvall favored her with a smile, at the same time taking a notebook and pencil from his pocket.

"I am making some corrections in the city directory," he said, "Will you please give me the names of all the persons living in this house."

The girl stared at him for a moment but his prosperous appearance, his businesslike manner, disarmed any suspicion she may have felt.

"There's—there's Mr. William Perkins," she said, "and Mrs. Perkins, and Mr. Robert, that's Mr. Perkins' son, and—and Miss Elizabeth, although she's away at boarding school, and—andEmily Thompson, the cook, and—and me. My name's Mary, Mark Wickes."

"Thank you, Mary," Duvall replied entering the names carefully in his notebook. "And Mr. Perkins, the elder Mr. Perkins, I mean, is he the lawyer?"

"No, sir. It's Mr. Robert that's the lawyer, sir. Mr. William Perkins is in the leather business."

"Ah, yes. I see. Thank you very much indeed. And there are no boarders, or other persons whatever living in the house?"

"No, sir. Not any, sir."

Duvall closed his book and put it carefully in his pocket.

"Now, Mary," he continued. "Just one more question. Does any one sleep in the attic?"

"The attic, sir? Why, no, sir. Cook and I sleep on the fourth floor, sir, but the attic isn't used, except for storage, sir. Are you going to put that in the directory too, sir?" The girl regarded him with wondering eyes.

"No, Mary. Not in the directory. But we want to be sure not to omit any names, and I thought that if there was anyone living in the attic——" he paused.

"No one, as I've told you. Nobody ever goes up there, so far as I know. Is that all, sir?"

"Yes. That's all. Thank you. Good morning."

Duvall went down the steps, and proceeded to the subway station somewhat mystified. He had handled many curious cases in the past, many that had been notable for their intricacy, their complexity of motive and detail. But here, he felt, was a case of a very different sort, the peculiarity of which lay in its astonishing lack of clues of any sort. Usually in the past there had been motives, evidence, traces of some kind or other, upon which to build a case. Here there was nothing, except the three mysterious letters, the one equally mysterious telegram. He felt baffled, uncertain which way to turn. In rather a dissatisfied frame of mind he made his way to the telegraph office in lower Broadway.

There were several clerks engaged in receiving messages. He approached one of them.

"This telegram," he said, holding out the slip of yellow paper Mrs. Morton had given him, "was sent from this office at half past eight this morning. Can you by any chance give me a description of the person who sent it?" He leaned over and addressed the clerk in a low tone. "I am a detective," he said. "The telegram is part of a blackmailing scheme."

The man looked at him for a moment, and then consulted with an older man, evidently his superior. The latter came forward.

"I received this message myself, sir," he said. "I remember it, because of its peculiar wording. What is it you wish to know?"

"I would like a description of the person who sent it," Duvall told him.

The man thought for a moment.

"I'm not able to tell you much," he said. "It was a woman—I didn't notice particularly whether she was young or old. In fact, she didn't give me a chance, just laid the message and the money down, and went right out. She evidently knew the rate, for the amount she left was correct. I took the message and read it, without noticing her particularly, and then, when I had finished reading it and looked up, she had gone."

"Then you can't tell me anything about her?" Duvall asked, greatly disappointed.

"Not a thing. I remember it was a woman, and my general impression is that she was rather young and small, but I can't be at all sure. You see, sir, a great many persons come in, during the day, and we haven't time to take note of them particularly. As I say, I read the telegrams first, and counted the words. By that time she had left the office."

Duvall thanked the man for his information and made his way to the street. Something at least had been gained. The person who was hounding Ruth Morton was a woman.

By this he was not at all surprised. He had felt for some time that Ruth's enemy was, in all probability, some jealous and envious movie actress who, herself unsuccessful, resented the youth and beauty of her successful rival. He called a taxi and directed the driver to take him out to the studio of the company with which Ruth was connected. Here, in all probability, was to be found the woman he sought.

The journey consumed considerably over an hour, and it was lunch time when he finally drew up before the entrance to the series of studio buildings. Before entering he went to a nearby restaurant to get a bite to eat.

THE HOME CIRCLE COLUMN

Pleasant Evening Reveries—A Column Dedicated to Tired Mothers as They Join the Home Circle at Evening Tide

CRUDE THOUGHTS FROM THE EDITORIAL PEN

As we stood in from of the post-office yesterday we were forced to hear a part of a conversation between two young ladies. They were talking about a third party and christened her an "old maid." We came as near getting mad as an editor ever does. You know an editor never loses his temper. He still has it all. In almost every circle of our kindred there has been some queen of self-sacrifice to whom jewelled hand was offered in marriage, but who stayed on the old place because of the sense of filial obligation until the health was gone and the attractiveness of personal presence had vanished. Brutal society may call such a one by a nickname. God calls her daughter, and heaven calls her sain..

—|— —|—

You look at the housewife who has a place for her things, and these things in their places, and you find a woman who is systematic in her work, and when she needs anything she can put her hands on it in a moment. She plans and calculates whenever there is to be extra work, extra cooking, extra washing, etc., and she knows beforehand just what there is to do, and what she wants to do it with. And this same woman, so exact in her doings, gets more time to rest and read and instruct her children in the paths of right and the social duties they owe to all. Ladies, we hope you are of this class, receiving the blessings of your husband and the praise of all who know you.

Spend some of your evenings at home with your wife and children. If you have an amiable, gentle wife, surely your home must be a pleasant one, but if from increasing cares or other reasons, she has grown fretful or sullen, who knows but a little more attention or kindness on your part might do a great deal towards the return of the amiability you so much admired in her girlhood. If you would stay at home oftener evenings, treating her with something of the old tenderness, making her believe, at least, that you are not wholly indifferent to her happiness, you would soon see a change for the better in your household.

Home should be made the most interesting and best loved spot on earth, not merely four square walls of wood and brick; it should be the fountain of civilization; the very word should touch every fiber of the soul and strike every word of the human heart with its angelic fingers, a place where that is centralized on the higher and better things of life, bringing forth in the highways and byways an influence that will be felt by all with whom it come in contact. It should be a place where the heart is, a place where our feet may leave but not our hearts, a place where angels untold their wings—the place we love best, because it is the place where mother is.

We know that music is pleasant, and home is not home where there are no songs or sweet harmonics; but a knowledge of the piano will not help a woman discharge her wifely duties, and a smattering of French or an ability to waltz gracefully will do but little towards preparing a palatable dinner for a husband when he comes home hungry.

—|— —|—

We do not know why anyone should object to a wife calling her husband by his first name when among friends but it is seldom regarded as good form to do so excepting in the presence of relatives. No one, however, can object to Mr. Smith, or Mr. White. And don't say "Smith" for "Mr. Smith." If you want to call your husband "Darling" or "Love," pray do so as often as you like, but always in the privacy and seclusion of your own homes. The people who "Love" and "Dove" and "Darling" each other in company, are often the very ones who call each other by strangely different names when at home.

—|— —|—

A cheery "Good Morning" often sends a ray of sunshine streaming through the innermost recesses of a household, resting there all the livelong day, and again follows hastening footsteps into the mart of business—lighting up and brightening the way of the world as it goes. A hearty "Good night" often soothes many a troubled mind to rest, and heals the wounds which have either come anew to a struggling soul, or been re-opened by the harsh words or deeds that are spoken or done in season or out of season, as the daily battle of our life progresses.

Teach your children to love the beautiful. Give them a corner in the garden for flowers; encourage them to put it in the shape of hanging baskets; show them where they can best view the sunset; rouse them in the morning, not with the stern "time to go to work," but with the enthusiastic "see the beautiful sunrise!" Buy for them pretty pictures and encourage them to decorate their rooms in his or her own childish way. Give them an inch, and they will go a mile. Allow them the privilege and they will make your home beautiful.

Mothers sometimes forget that the active and receptive stage of child-life in the nursery is never surpassed at a later period. The little one is taking impressions every moment, acquiring gentle habits or the opposite, picking up words and sentences, surprising his elders by the facility with which he learns what they would rather he should not know. In the baby's home the foundation is laid for the good or bad manners of the mature man.

—|— —|—

The daughter who is the flower of the family is always the one who knows best how to use the flour of the family.

A REVUE OF THE DAYS.

In robes of heliotrope and mauve and gray,
Ever receding, flees pale Yesterday—
A twilight nymph, with faintly smiling lips
And dreamy eyes, whose pointed finger tips
Let fall, from out her misty draperies,
The bitter-sweet of life—its memories!

To-day's a little eager person, dressed
In red and russet—garb for service best—
Watchful, alert to seize a happy chance, or make the most of fortune's circumstance—
The nine-and-ninety doors to pass inside,
Which Opportunity may open wide!

Will-o'-the-wisp, all white and silvery,
To-morrow beckons, tantalising, she,
Who promises to mortal man so much,
Yet none her floating garment's hem may touch,
Or glimpse, although he strain wide yearning eyes
If good or ill before life's pathway lies.

Grace--And The Bustle

Linings That Speak For Themselves

PATRIOTIC ACCESSORIES

New York, Nov. 22.

We have been hearing a great deal lately about the bustle dress, the bustle coat, and even the bustle hat. On the stage they have been featured in some of the most successful plays of the season. "Why, that isn't a bustle," one is tempted to cry, "it is simply a draped sash, or soft pleats in the back."

After all, what's in a name? Rather less than nothing, if the name does not describe the thing or if it is misunderstood. The bustle of yesteryear was a hideous affair, padded and puffed and stuffed with wire or straw, an object of torture, it would seem, to the uninitiated. The bustle of 1917 is entirely different. It is really back drapery and is exquisite in the soft materials favored by Fashion for this year.

"But is it becoming" you ask. Yes, and again yes; for if you are tall and straight, perhaps a trifle too slim, it is an added grace, and if you are short and plump it gives length of line! Sounds like magic, does it not? It does not cut off the figure, as has so often been feared; it but serves to accentuate the good points of the figure—and cover up the bad ones.

© McCALL 8097 8086

In Black and White

The skirt must be rather short, and narrow, and the hips and front must have no unnecessary fulness of material. The waist is either fitted or semi-fitted and if the bustle is on the coat, there need not be one on the skirt.

WHAT ARE BUSTLES MADE OF?

Bustles are made of silks, satins, velvets—in fact, anything nice. If the material is soft and crushes when draped, a slight stiffening is used. On evening dresses the bustle effect may be given by a bouffant bow of maline or dress net, which is stiff enough of itself to assume the perky lines so chic now. It is surprising what a transformation can be worked with a bustle sash on the evening dress of last year.

LININGS THAT CONTRAST.

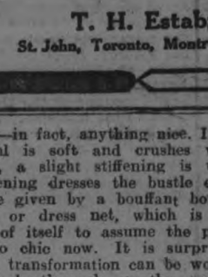
Many of the newest designs have surprises in the way of linings. Often the bustle of a dress is lined with a contrasting satin showing only every now and then, as in the dress illustrated here. No other trimming is used, the lining being repeated for the collar and sometimes the cuffs. The soft pleated bustle is the most becoming as a rule. This one is shaped, being longer on the sides than in the back, and as usual, the front of the skirt is absolutely plain. Any of the soft materials could be used, and there are many attractive color schemes, one of the most effective being black and white. The dress is black satin with white satin for the lining and the collar.

THE EXPECTED UNEXPECTED.

Speaking of surprises, the news from the Paris houses is full of interesting and unexpected details. Now one hears of parasols and umbrellas with gun handles, made to simulate the rifle of the French soldier. One expects the hats and other parts of the costume to be on martial lines, and so the beret of the French sailor seen on the dainty lady of fashion is not as astonishing as it might be when one considers the factor of patriotism. War jewelry, too, reflects the spirit of the times, and brooches and other ornaments made from pieces of shrapnel are quite the vogue.

UY A VICTORY BOND.

You don't like the cheap tea you are using. Do you?



Pretty Poor Tea, Mother

Before the war so increased the cost of living, many people used to drink better tea than they are now using.

Perhaps, this is true in your case?

Of course, you are not drinking poor tea because you like it, but because you think it necessary to save money.

But are you really saving anything?

Cheap, common teas only make about 150 cups to the pound. You are lucky if you can stretch them out to 185 or 200.

On the other hand, Red Rose Tea easily makes 250 cups. It goes further because of its fine quality, consisting chiefly of Assam teas, the richest and strongest in the world.

You may almost doubt if so many cups of tea can be made from a pound of even such good tea as Red Rose, but you can readily prove the economy of Red Rose without waiting for a package to be used up. Just use a few leaves less of Red Rose for a brewing than you use of common tea—the result we are sure will please and surprise you.

THE CHIEF CHARM OF LOVELY WOMAN

Soft, Clear, Smooth Skin Comes With The Use Of "FRUIT-A-TIVES".

NORAH WATSON
86 Drayton Ave., Toronto,
Nov. 10th, 1915.

A beautiful complexion is a handsome woman's chief glory and the envy of her less fortunate rivals. Yet a soft, clear skin—glowing with health—is only the natural result of pure Blood.

"I was troubled for a considerable time with a very unpleasant, disfiguring Rash, which covered my face and for which I used applications and remedies without relief. After using "Fruit-a-tives" for one week, the rash is completely gone. I am deeply thankful for the relief and in the future, I will not be without "Fruit-a-tives".

Some Leaves Live Long.

Evergreen trees do not retain their leaves forever, but are so called because the new leaves appear before the old ones are shed. Miss Vinnie A. Pease has been studying the many evergreens of the Pacific Northwest to ascertain how long the several species retain their leaves. She finds a wide variety, the shortest being the California buckthorn, which sheds some of its leaves in autumn and retains the others only until those of the coming season are mature. The longest is the short leaved yew, which retains its leaves for from five to twelve years, some of them persisting for as long as twenty-three years. Saplings lose their leaves more quickly than mature trees, and trees in the open more quickly than those in shady places.

Frogs and Mud Forts.

There is a frog indigenous to Brazil which builds a regular mud fort during the breeding season in order to protect her eggs and tadpoles. The female frog dives to the bottom of the water, scoops up two handfuls of mud and repeats the process until she has erected a circular wall about one foot in diameter. She keeps on till the wall stands at least five inches above the surface of the water, and the whole is most carefully smoothed down with her broad, webbed hands. The work is performed only at night, and when it is completed the eggs are deposited.

Men Who Wear Feathers.

Among the strange tribes of men about whom little is known are the Chamacocos of the region about the upper Paraguay river. Although the Chamacocos wear but little clothing, they excel in the art of making personal adornments from the feathers of birds. Their country abounds with birds of the most beautiful plumage, including parrots, toucans and trogons, whose feathers are dazzling in color; rheas, with gray plumes; musk ducks of a glossy black color, egrets with feathers of pure white and spoon bills of a delicate pink hue. All this wealth of color and graceful plumage is combined by the Chamacocos in a most artistic manner. Some of these savages walk their forest glades in colors more brilliant, if less ample, than any woman's dressmaker could produce.

Suffered Great Agony
FROM PAIN IN STOMACH
FOR OVER 5 YEARS

Most of the misery and ill-health that humanity is burdened with arises from disorders of the stomach, liver and bowels. If you are feeling out of sorts, have pains in the stomach, especially after eating, bilious spells, headaches, sour stomach, coated tongue, sallow or muddy complexion, specks floating before the eyes, you should take a few doses of Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills and note the change.

Miss Ida Hogan, Dunrobin, Ont., writes: "For over five years I have suffered great agony from pains in the stomach. I tried several remedies but got no relief until a friend advised me to take Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills. I started with two vials and before I had one quite used, I found much relief. I continued until I used four vials, and they have completely cured me. That was fourteen months ago and I have not had the slightest return since. The best praise I could give them is not enough."

Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills are 25c a vial at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

India Becomes Problem That British Statesmen Must Face in Near Future

THE views put forward by Mr. E. S. Montagu, the newly appointed Secretary of State for India, in the course of his memorable speech during the Mesopotamia debate in the House of Commons, have a special interest at the present time. Mr. Montagu has always shown himself singularly liberal and free from "traditional politics" where India was concerned, and in advancing the view that the cause of a large part of India's trouble, in the matter of government, has resulted from the fact that that government has changed little, if at all, with the times, he will find many to agree with him.

The average member of Parliament, to say nothing of the average statesman, is inclined to take India very much for granted, and the picture outlined by Mr. Montagu of a debate on Indian affairs, in the House, when members are ever particularly conspicuous by their absence, was by no means overdrawn. As Mr. Montagu put it, nothing serious has happened in India since the mutiny. The public was, until recently, entirely uninterested in Indian affairs, and it required a crisis, such as the present one, to drive home the fact that the times have left the Government of India many leagues behind. You cannot completely change the policy adopted toward a country, as the British Government has recently changed its policy towards India by making such large calls upon it for the defense of the Empire, and, at the same time, hope to maintain intact a system of government which was inaugurated when the country was seriously distrusted, and when any idea of self-government, even in the most limited sense, was not even on the political horizon.

Speaking with an ability at all points fortified by an intimate first-hand acquaintance with his subject, Mr. Montagu drew a most damaging picture of the present Government of India; of the comparative helplessness of the Secretary of State, and incidentally of the House of Commons; of the autocratic powers intrusted to the Council of India, "composed of men who come home, after lengthy service in India, to spend the first years of their retirement as members of the council"; of the impossible position occupied by the Viceroy, required to perform the duties of a king, a prime minister, a secretary of state for foreign affairs, and a speaker of the House of Commons rolled into one, and, at the same time, to be almost entirely dependent for his acts upon the Secretary of State in London. "You cannot," Mr. Montague declared, "govern a great country by the despatch of telegrams."

Mr. Montagu, however, very justly recognizes that it would not be possible to give any more power to the Viceroy, or to reorganize the executive, unless both were made more responsible to the people of India. And yet Mr. Montagu, it is interesting to note, does not see in home rule for India, as a whole, a solution of the difficulty. His outlook is evidently much wider. "I see a different picture," he says, "I see the great self-governing dominions and the provinces of India organized and coordinated with the great principalities, the existing principalities, and perhaps new ones, not one great home rule country, but a series of self-governing provinces and principalities, federated by one central government."

It is a big question. Those who remember that, until the advent of British rule, India, in all the course of its long history, had never been under one government; who recognize its differences in language, in religion, and in race, and the strange absence, even yet, of a national consciousness, to any effective extent, will think that there is much to be said for Mr. Montagu's view. In any event, it is a valuable contribution to the discussion on an all-important question.

Cleaning White Kid Gloves.

Put the gloves on your hand and wash with a clean white soap and rinse in gasoline. Remove from hand, turning the gloves right side out and roll in cornstarch. Wrap them in a towel and let them remain in this condition overnight, then shake out the cornstarch and you will find your gloves as soft and white as if you had sent them to the cleaner to be cleaned. Gasoline is inflammable and must not be used where there is a light or a fire.

The Two Sides.

"There are two sides to every argument," said the ready made philosopher.

"Yes," replied the gloomy person, "but it makes a difference which side you choose. There are two sides to a piece of fly paper."

True.

"There's one sure way of keeping out of debt."

"What is it?"

"Quit wanting things you can't afford."

His Thought.

"I'd like a little pin money again, my dear."

"Heavens, are you buying diamond pins?"

"What is a sinking fund, Johnny?"

"Pa's bank account when the bills begin to come in."

THE WASPS

By Lieut. Roland Johnston

It is difficult for the untried in war—in recent war—to envisage the labour and organization that lies behind the brief report of two attacks in three days. It is not alone in the firing line that the work is heavy; the scheme does not begin and end in the crater line. Behind the sticky and treacherous morass one calls the front, there is a network of communications which starts in Britain. By devious routes it crosses the narrow seas and branches out in France into countless roads and railways, over which trains and motor lorries flow incessantly, carrying up food for the men and for the guns. Through smiling lands narrowly saved from destruction, the roads pass into a belt of earth that is scarred and pitted and laid into waste of utter barrenness; "Blood and destruction so in use and dreadful objects so familiar," that the men—and women — move about it and often smile. The shells and stores pile up in huge dumps within easy reach of the glutinous tract of land over which helmetted men of dogged mien go about their business of grim war with an air of absolute concentration.

There is another activity. High in the air above the dumps, wasp-like aeroplanes give out a drone as they swerve and circle in dizzy space, guarding the mounds that mean so much to the tireless army. These are the bird machines, the hawks of wood and iron, that have sent so many German fliers crashing to earth in a spinning nose-dive which holds the eye by a ghastly fascination. Sometimes the German has but narrowly escaped the leaf-life fall of death, to wing his way back on broken pinion in a last desperate effort; like some huge wounded birds seeking friendly cover. This work of guarding is not the only work the wasps do during the two attacks. Nor are they the only types of British machine in the air.

Sometimes a machine will climb high above the clouds and pass over the German lines unnoticed. A swift dive from the heights, hawklike, and a quick flattening out above some German rest camp or supply depot; the dropping of a bomb or two, rending crashes from the earth, and rolling clouds of smoke and fire ascend, masking from the view of the destroyer his work of destruction. A swift turn in the air, a speedy climb, and the strange bird that drops its eggs when in flight is clear away, almost before the Germans have time to shoot. Or at dead of night the bomb-dropping machines will cross the line and plant explosives where the Boche least wants them. The work never ceases.

Only a few miles behind the lines, perhaps on ground recovered from the enemy, are the aerodromes or heavier machines, the aeroplanes which work with the artillery. For hours on end these machines hang over the enemy lines, diving, turning, swerving to spoil the aim of the anti-aircraft gunners who bracket the air with puffs of bursting shrapnel. The pilot manoeuvres the machine while the observer taps steadily away with his wireless key, reporting the bursts of the British shells, ranging for the gunners, telling of enemy concentrations which make good targets, while all the time the German guns festoon the air with wreaths of shell-smoke and sprays of leaden bullets. Sometimes a sudden "rat-tat" of a machine gun in the air behind the two airmen, will tell them that an enemy scout has got on the tail of their machine, and before the heavy British machine has time to turn the enemy will be out of range.

Yet in such a case swift vengeance falls from the clouds on the enemy aviator. One of the British wasps streaks down from the heights and follows the German scout. He may climb high above the clouds in an effort to escape, but the wasp will chase him till both machines are lost to sight. High above the clouds the duel will be fought to the death, unless the German—as if often the case — makes for home to claim victory before the fight is fought out.

Meanwhile the great artillery machine keeps steadily at work, heedless of shells or air duels, circling round and round the objective below. All this diving and swirling needs a strong head, and the novice observer very often suffers from air-sickness which is as devastating in its effects as that of the sea. When the "shoot" is over, the aeroplane makes for home and the pilot and observer will descend to count the hits from shrapnel. As many as fifty tears from splinters will be counted sometimes and quite often the number approaches a hundred.

There are machines which fly low over the German trenches and harass his infantry with machine-gun fire, deadly effective, since the trenches afford no protection. The machines allotted for the work of taking photographs of the enemy positions fulfil very useful services. From the information brought back by these machines and from the photographs they take, it is possible to guage the distance the infantry have to cover in the attack. The objectives are allotted and the advance is timed. Very often the positions are reconstructed in the rear and the troops are rehearsed in the attack.

The wasps, the fighting scouts, throng the sky and guard the slower 'planes; they clear the air of enemy machines and observation balloons making sure that the enemy artillery are disorganized as much as possible at the proper time.

The whole organization of the air service of the army, functioning properly, is for the helping of the men who work on solid ground. Without the flying men the army would be blind and much of the work of the infantry and the gunners would be vitiated. Both services, in the air and on the land, work together, co-ordinated, perfected, in a definite system which is steadily breaking down the defences of the enemy. The infantrymen watch the battles in the sky and murmur, "I wouldn't like to be up there." The air men watching the scurrying figures of the infantry as they pass through the puffs of smoke that indicate the burst of shells, murmur, contrariwise, "I'm glad I'm safe up here." And as often as not they will climb above the clouds to engage with a German scout in a hair-raising duel.

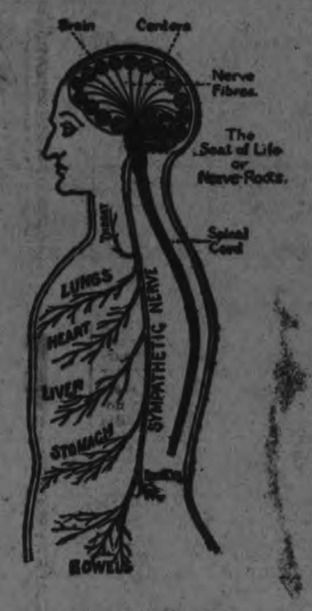
Study the Inside Nerves

WITH the brain as its centre, the nervous system reaches out to every organ of the human body. From the spinal column and from the various nerve centres the thread-like nerve fibres find their way to every nook and corner of the body, controlling all movements and action, and making a living being of the mass of flesh and bone.

Without the nerve force which is manufactured in the brain there could be no beating of the heart, no breathing of the lungs, no digestion, no activity, no life.

It is only when you think of the nervous system in this way that you begin to realize its true importance and to appreciate the far-reaching effects of any derangement of the nerves. Any break in this connection with the brain, or any pressure on the nerve fibres to interfere with the transmission of nervous energy, means helplessness or paralysis of the part affected. It may be the loss of power to use the hand or failure of the stomach to do the work for which it was intended.

To Learn the Cause of Weakened Vitality



If there is ever a time when sympathy is needed it is when the nerves give way. But you must have more than sympathy if you are to recover your nervous energy. The feeble, exhausted nerve cells must be nourished back to health by the use of such treatment as Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

This treatment is so gentle and natural in action that it admirably suits the delicate condition of the exhausted nervous system, and at the same time is wonderfully potent in restoring vigor and strength.

A little patience is necessary in order to build up the nervous system so far run down, but as headaches disappear, digestion improves, and you rest and sleep better, you will be encouraged to continue this treatment until restoration is complete.

FRENCH "MOTHER" REPAIRS CLOTHES OF MILLION SONS

With the French Armies Afield.—This is the story of the "Mother" of the French Army—the "Mother" who darns the socks, washes the linen, and mends the clothing of the millions of "Poilus" of the French military family.

When America finally has a big army on the western front, she will be obliged to establish a "Mother" of her own to perform precisely the same duties as the French one. If with all the genius of the American race for organisation, she succeed in establishing a more practical and a more efficient "Mother" than has France, she will have performed a twentieth century miracle.

The French "Mother" is located in one of the big cities well back from the front. "Mother" is not a single woman, but she is a big group of buildings in which nearly 6,000 women are employed on a pay-roll that averages $100,000 a month. The machinery and material on hand in the storehouses of the "Mother" represent an investment of $10,000,000 at the present time.

The task which "Mother" performs can hardly be grasped by the imagination of the most devoted mother in America. The fact that the French "Mother" performs this task not for one boy alone, but for several millions, gives absolutely no idea of the task. Only a faint idea can be had of the reality, when it is known that every French soldier has to be fitted out completely from head to foot on an average of every six weeks. Such is the wear and tear on clothing at the Front.

Each Man Refitted Every Six Weeks

When at the end of every six weeks every French soldier is completely refitted with new underclothing, socks, army coat, trousers, and cap, not a single particle of the old clothing which he discards is thrown away.

It is all collected and sent to "Mother," where the first step is to disinfect and clean it before turning it over to the various departments to see how much can be mended, how much can be saved, and what is the minimum that must be thrown away. Thirty car loads of cast-off clothing and shoes from the French Army arrives at "Mother" every day. In the winter, when the "Poilus" have extra articles of clothing, an average of forty-five cars come from the Front.

Within one week after the arrival of each car load, absolutely every garment that it is possible to mend and send back to the Front practically new, has been taken care of, while every ounce of material saved from garments and shoes that could not be repaired, has been utilised in making up new garments and new shoes.

Here are a few of the things that "Mother" does. When a car load of shoes that have been picked up on the field of battle or cast aside by the soldiers, arrives, they are first sorted and then disinfected. If a shoe is no worth repairing, the uppers are cut off, wooden soles nailed on, and they become at once the most practical kind of a trench shoe. Of the few bits of the leather that alone remained from a carload of shoes, buttons are made for the clothing of war prisoners.

All army coats and trousers go through this restoration. If it is not possible to save the whole garment, every piece of cloth that is still good is cut out and saved. From these millions of pieces of cloth new garments are cut out and made up.

Naturally, when these garments come back from the Front their original "horizon blue" colour has suffered various degrees of fading and modification. From the millions of individual pieces of cloth saved from these, colour experts match out everything that has been reduced to the same shade, so that the new coat, or the new jacket that may come out of a dozen old coats and jackets, will have precisely the same colour as though made from the same piece of cloth.

French "Poilus" are as fastidious about their dressing at the Front as a Parisian dandy on the boulevards and any "Joseph's coat of many colours" that might be sent back to them by "Mother" would certainly cause trouble.

Of the little scraps of cloth that remain after an old garment has been cut up, there are made a sort of woollen moccasin, cloth covers for canteens, the coloured letters and numbers of regiments that the soldier wears on his collar, chevrons etc., etc.

When socks cannot be darned, the upper portions which are till good are unraveled and the woollen thread used in knitting mittens and mufflers.

One of the regular articles of the "Poilus" winter wardrobe at the Front is an ordinary sheep's skin which he puts over his regular clothing very much like a chauffeur's driving jacket. These, too, come back to "Mother" for repair. The masterpiece of which "Mother" is the proudest is a sheep's skin made out of 227 scraps of other sheeps' skins.

Dozens of other things, such as the steel helmets, the forage caps, the canteens, and in fact all of a soldier's outfit except his arms, pass through "Mother's" hands. The saving is enormous.

French military men who have a great admiration and respect for America's genius for organisation are looking forward with keen anticipation to the "Mother" that will have to be erected in France for the welfare of the American Army.

TROUBLED FOR YEARS WITH BRONCHITIS

Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup GAVE INSTANT RELIEF

Bronchitis is a disease which is very prevalent during the late winter and early spring, when there are sudden atmospheric changes. It is a condition of inflammation of the bronchial tubes which produces mucous or phlegm. This irritates the throat and causes you to cough in order to get rid of it. The cough may be tight or loose according as to whether this mucous is sticky and hard to remove, or soft and easily expelled.

Bronchitis is not really dangerous, but the complications which are liable to follow makes it necessary to get rid of it at the first sign. This you can do by using Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup. A remedy that has been on the market for over 25 years.

John D. McFarlane, Jr., S. W. Margaree, N. S., writes: "I was troubled for years with bronchitis, and could not find any relief. I was especially bad on a damp day. I went to a druggist and asked him for something to stop the constant tickling in my throat. He gave me a bottle of Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, which I found gave me instant relief. It is the best remedy for bronchitis that I know of, and I now take care that I always have a bottle of it on hand."

See that you get "Dr. Wood's." Put up in a yellow wrapper; three pine trees the trade mark; price 25c and 50c; manufactured by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Inheritance Tax Argument

Inheritance taxes are very heavy. Unlike Fire hazard they are not merely possible, they are absolutely certain.

They deplete your estate at once, and to your heirs represent a specific and definite loss of money.

In New York a $250,000 estate would pay a combined Federal and state tax of about $12,000. If left to a friend or distant relative, about $22,000. The John Jacob Astor estate paid $3,150,000. J. P. Morgan has insured his life for $2,500,000 to cover a similar loss.

Thus the estate is provided promptly with the ready cash to pay this tax and other expenses without the need of hurriedly disposing of securities or other assets, perhaps at a loss, to meet such needs. The logic of the situation urges immediate action. Premium rates, however low, advance with age and so does the possibility of entering the physically impaired group and losing the opportunity to secure this protection.

Knowing that this loss is actually coming, it is simply a matter of ordinary business prudence to guard against it. The Sun Life Assurance Company of Canada offer you a plan to do so at very low cost.

Assembling the logs for the mill.

CANADA'S GREAT TIMBER FORESTS

Preparing Logs for the Mill

THERE are something like a thousand million acres of woodlands in Canada, and about two hundred million of these acres are covered with timber suitable for trading purposes. Every province has its forests, and every forest has its own interesting features. In Alberta parts of the Rocky Mountains are covered with huge timber areas of great value. In British Columbia the forest area is estimated at about 180,000,000 acres; the forests of Quebec cover about 130,000,000 acres; then the large forests of Manitoba, Nova Scotia, New Brunswick and Yukon are regions from which much valuable timber is taken annually.

With a view to affording farmers protection the Dominion Government has distributed trees for planting along the prairies. The young trees are given away gratis, but definite conditions as to the method of cultivation must be complied with. The Canadian Pacific Railway Company has also given out young trees for a similar object.

In former years many of the Canadian forests suffered much destruction from fires, but of late the loss has not been so great. Some of the forests have their keepers who reside in pretty homes in the woods. Between each home there is telephonic communication, so that if a fire breaks out the news can be quickly spread and fire fighters brought to the spot before the flames become really formidable.

The forests are administered by the Provincial or Dominion Government in most cases, and licenses to cut timber are sold by public auction at certain periods.

Amongst the prettiest of Canadian forests are those of Ontario, which cover 102,000 square miles. Amongst them run a network of beautiful rivers and lakes, very valuable for the untold power that is in them and for the delight they give to the sight-seeing traveller or fisherman. Through these forests the Canadian Pacific Railway takes its track, opening up the region to the possibility of a great future. As a protection against forest fires in the Canadian Rockies the Canadian Pacific use oil burning engines beyond Field.

The accompanying illustrations tell their own story, but it will not be uninteresting to narrate that the lumbering season begins at this time when the snow begins to fall. Then the trees are lightened by the loss of their foliage. When the trees are cut down and divided into logs suitable for the length of the boards into which they are to be sawed at the mills, the hollows in the rugged ground are filled up by snow, and the horses or oxen can travel freely over paths that in summer would be impassable. Drawn by the horses or oxen, the logs slip gracefully along the surface of the snow to a convenient point where they can be easily loaded on to sleighs to be drawn to the mill. But if the mill is far away the timber is often taken to the edge of a river ready for the drive to the mill when the ice melts. In other cases it is piled on the edge of a lake and when the ice breaks is gathered into booms and floated to the mill.

There is an enormous supply of pulpwood in the Province of Ontario, and the district of Patricia, which has an area of 146,000 square miles, has vast timber resources which have not yet been thoroughly examined.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

How She Got Him

By MARTHA V. MONROE

Didn't I never tell you how your Uncle Cyrus and I come to get married? Well, I'll tell you all about it now. Your uncle was a long, lean, rawboned young feller, twenty-two years old, and had the farm walk. I don't know where our farmer boys git that walk onless it comes from follerin' the plow. But Cy was a stiddy feller and had a lot o' stuff in him. I knew two young women that wanted him, and I made a third. But the other two was either of 'em so much better fixed than I that I didn't think there was any chance for me, though I didn't see much prospect of any of us havin' him 'cause he was so modest he wouldn't be likely to think any of us would have him and wouldn't propose.

One day when I'd been to the store for some things I wanted and was walkin' home Cy come down into the road by a cow path and joined me.

"Mornin', Miss Harker," he said.

"Mornin', Mr. Rogers," I answered.

"You got a lot o' red in your cheeks this mornin'. It's powerful becomin'." He was lookin' at me kind o' admirin'. "Seems to me either the young fellers about here have mighty poor taste or you don't want to git married."

"Oh, law sakes! Mr. Rogers, there's no one wants to marry a girl with no property of her own and no prospects."

"Would you reely like to git married?"

"Of course I would. I don't know any girl that wants to be an old maid; I don't, shore."

"If you feel that a-way I reckon I kin help you out. I know a man that lost his wife about a year ago and wants to git married to have some un to take keer of his children. I wouldn't mind introducin' him to you."

Fust off I was mad at his talkin' like that instead o' wantin' me for himself, but purty soon I reckoned he was so modest that he hadn't the spunk to put himself forward and was hidin' himself behind the widower. So I didn't let on I suspected, and I says:

"Mr. Rogers, if you kin get me that situation I'll be ever so much obleeged to you."

He didn't look very cheerful at my bein' willin' to take up with somebody else, but he didn't say anything except that he'd bring the widower to see me. I told him the sooner the better, for I was gittin' on, and purty soon even a widower with a hull lot o' children wouldn't look at me.

I knew well enough that his widower was all in his imagination. Whenever I met Cy after that I asked him when he was goin' to bring his friend around. First, it was the spring plantin' that kept him too busy to do anything else; then the wheat had to be cut, then the corn, and when the crops was all got in I hadn't seen the widower at all. One evenin' when I was drivin' the cows home Cy joined me on the road. I made up my mind that I wasn't goin' to be foolin' along that a-way any longer, so I said, says I:

"Mr. Rogers, I thort you was goin' to keep me from bein' an old maid by gittin' me the position o' mother to a man's motherless children. I'm mighty disapp'inted. It's half a year since you made that promise, and you hain't kept it yit."

"'Tain't my fault," says Cy. "I made the promise at the wrong time. Ef a farmer's goin' to promise anything he oughtn't to do it in the spring, when the summer work's jist comin' on."

"I thort the spring was jist the season for lovemakin'. Ef you'd brought yer man to see me then like enough we'd done enough courtin' by this time to be married."

Cy didn't look very happy over it. But he didn't seem able to git up enough courage to go on with his way o' courtin', and I made up my mind to boost him.

"Tell you what, Mr. Rogers," I says, "you bring yer man round Saturday night and I'll forgive you for all the time you've wasted. Now, don't you forget it. Come about 8 o'clock, and I'll be ready for him."

I smiled at him the best I knowed how, and jist then we come to the lane leadin' down to the barn, and I turned the cows into it, follerin' 'em myself, and Cy went on down the road.

When Saturday night come round I put on my Sunday clothes and made myself look as well as I could. A leetle before 8 I see Cy comin' down the road. Of course he was alone, for his widower was no more a human bein' than a scarecrow in a cornfield is. When he knocked at the door I opened it, and he, bein' alone, I said, says I:

"Where's your man?"

Cy was makin' up excuses when I interrupted him with, "Here I am all dressed up to receive a lover and there's no lover to receive." I went back into the house and, pittin' down on a sofy, tuk out a handkerchief and pretended to wipe tears out o' my eyes. Cy sot down beside me to comfort me. He said he was mighty sorry to have disapp'inted me. Ef he wasn't so unfamily he'd offer to take the place of the widower himself; but, seein' he was freckled and rawboned and had the plow stoop, of course he wouldn't be a fit substitute, and all that.

I jist throwed my arms around his neck and said I'd ruther have a man rawboned and freckled fust off than a secondhand man with half a dozen children. Your uncle was mighty pleased to hear me say that, and when he went away that night at 11 o'clock we was engaged.

Children Like It

"It is not an easy matter to get a medicine that children like, or to force them to take one they don't like. Most mothers know that a cough medicine, while palatable, should contain no drug injurious to the child. The great popularity of is explained by the fact that it contains no opium or narcotic of any kind, and at the same time is so pleasant and agreeable to the taste that children like it. For this reason it is a favorite with the mothers of young children.

Yours for health,

Corns in 1860

Were Attacked—As Many Corns Are Yet

The old-time way of ending corns was by harsh attack. And those methods still exist.

The new way—the scientific way—is very gentle, yet absolutely sure. It was invented in this well-known laboratory, and is known as Blue-jay.

It ends the pain—and at once—by relieving pressure. It ends the corn by gently acting on the corn alone.

It isn't mussy. It wraps the corn with adhesive tape. One application is usually sufficient. In two days the corn is ended, and without any lingering soreness.

Don't pare a corn and keep it. Don't use harsh methods on it. Don't apply any treatment to the healthy tissue too. See what science has evolved in this Blue-jay treatment.

How Blue-jay Acts

B is the B&B wax, which gently undermines the corn. Usually it takes only 48 hours to end the corn completely.

C is rubber adhesive which sticks without wetting. It wraps around the toe to make the plaster snug and comfortable.

Blue-jay is applied in a jiffy. After that, one doesn't feel the corn. The action is gentle, and applied to the corn alone. So the corn disappears without soreness.

Clogged Mufflers.

The poor performances of a motor may be caused by a clogged muffler, and by increasing the back pressure the power of the engine is inevitably lessened. The muffler certainly ought to be cleaned out once a year. The muffler is filled with metal convolutions, which gather dirt and carbon, blocking the passage and hindering the escape of the exhaust gases. If the stoppage reaches a sufficient degree of completeness there is danger that an ill timed explosion may extend back to the muffler, which acts like a closed explosion chamber and blows it to atoms. The clogging of the muffler is assisted by the use of too much oil in the engine. This excess oil finds its way back and, getting on the passages and parts, acts as a catch-all for carbon and dirt.

Widow's Weeds.

Jack—There's one good thing about widow's weeds. Tom—What's that? Jack—They rarely interfere with the growth of orange blossoms.

Joan of Arc's Bell.

In the cathedral church of Notre Dame, Paris, there is a bell which dates from the days of Joan of Arc—"the blessed bell" which sounded the tocsin when the Maid of Orleans appeared in August, 1429, and Paris was besieged by the English. This historic bell, referred to by Victor Hugo in "Notre Dame de Paris," was given to the cathedral in 1400 by Jean de Montaigu. It was refounded in 1686 and then rebaptized under the name of Emmanuel Louise Therese in honor of Louis XIV. and Marie Therese of Austria.—London Globe.

Detecting Shortcomings.

Do you wish to find out a person's weak points? Note the failings he has the quickest eye for in others. They may not be the very failings he is himself conscious of, but they will be their next door neighbors. No man keeps such a jealous lookout as a rival.—J. C. and A. W. Hare.

A Grave Question.

When Daniel Webster was asked what he considered the most momentous question in life he is said to have replied, "Man's individual responsibility to God."

PRACTICAL HEALTH HINT.

Care of Children's Eyes.

It is especially important that parents should appreciate the need of proper care of the eyes of the newborn baby and the urgent necessity of consulting a competent physician as soon as anything wrong with the baby's eyes is noticed, especially if there is a discharge from them. Many cases of blindness result from the disease known as opthalmia neonatorum, or the eye disease of newborn babes, which could have been prevented had simple preventive measures been used or which could have been cured if treated in time by the doctor.

Children with "cross eye" or with a "cast in the eye," as cross eye is sometimes called, should be taken to a competent eye physician as soon as the defect is noticed and long before the child has reached school age. Neglect of cross eye may result in blindness or defective sight in one or other of the child's eyes from misuse or improper use of the eyes, even in very young children.

URGES FULLER DIVORCE.

Sir Arthur Conan Doyle Says Separations Are Endangering England.

Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, president of the Divorce Law Reform Union, speaking at Manchester, Eng., said the device of separation was an attempt to effect a compromise where no compromise was possible—a compromise between an outgrown, old-fashioned theology on the one side, and common sense and human nature on the other.

Common sense cried, "Separate these incompatible people"; theology retorted, "Yes, separate them, but don't set them free." The result was that some hundreds of thousands of couples had received leave to separate, but were not allowed to remarry.

A separated woman at present might live either to eat out her heart in solitude or become the mistress of another man who would willingly marry her if he could. Was it Christian morality that a woman, through no fault of her own, should have to face such an alternative?

There were hundreds of thousands of men and women in this plight of separation who might atone for the fearful losses in human life caused by the war. This question of future population was one upon which the balance of power of 30 years hence and the safety of the country would depend.

Sir Arthur moved a resolution calling for immediate legislation to convert separations of three years and upwards into divorces. The resolution was carried.

STOP!

DO not use Edison records on any but a NEW EDISON phonograph. Played with any other than the Edison reproducer, which floats evenly over the surface, delicately balanced and finely adjusted, the record is distinctly injured with each playing and rapidly deteriorates in tone quality.

You cannot get even approximately the full glory of an Edison "Re-Creation" with any other phonograph than

The NEW EDISON

"The Phonograph with a Soul"

The record is only one of three factors inseparable for Edison's perfect Re-Creation of music. Edison earned his triumph by five years' exhaustive experiments, perfecting these three factors together.

THE RECORDING: By his new recording methods, Edison is able to record every delicate tone wave, or shading of expression, even to the most minute overtone, in any artist's voice or instrument.

THE RECORD: Played on a NEW EDISON, the records will preserve this music indefinitely — without wear.

THE REPRODUCER: The New Edison Reproducer is absolutely essential to Edison perfection. Edison tried out 2500 different materials and compositions before he was satisfied with his reproducer diaphragm. This acoustic research work involved an expenditure of over a million dollars, and it alone can bring out the real music in an Edison record in all its original beauty.

In justice to the public and to the high standard of Edison tone quality, we earnestly warn against the use of Edison records on any "talking machine."

Those who seek the privilege of enjoying in their homes the perfect Re-Creation of music should select the NEW EDISON.

American Trap Is Laid, But No Germans Come

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN FRANCE.—Only the fact that the Germans failed to venture into No Man's Land on a recent night saved them from an American surprise. One hundred and sixty men of the first battalions to enter the trenches for a week crawled across No Man's Land and took positions in front of and in the German wire entanglements at a point where it had been discovered the enemy came out every night.

Each man had been trained in a special task and the entire unit had rehearsed the part it intended to play under conditions similar to that in front of the German lines. The Americans reached the position soon after dark and remained in waiting all night, but not one German appeared either there or, as far as is known, at any place in No Man's Land.

He Coughed and Spoiled It All.

The scheme was to allow several groups of ten to fifteen Germans to emerge and meet at a rendezvous. Then the Americans would fall upon the enemy and repay them fully for recent trench raids.

A cold which a soldier had caught in the trenches brought him a wound in the hand and gave warning to a German patrol of an ambuscade on another night. An American patrol had arranged an ambush near a shell-ruined farm house in No Man's Land. Several of the Americans had colds and coughs, but managed to control them. Finally, when the shadowy forms of an enemy patrol were seen approaching one of the Americans coughed. The enemy patrol promptly disappeared towards its own lines from which there soon afterwards came a hail of machine gun bullets, one hitting the man who had coughed.

Officers Near Death.

Two staff officers recently had a narrow escape. They were walking along a road in the rear of the lines. They heard the whizz of an enemy shell and jumped, thinking it was close by, when the projectile came down in the centre of the road on either side of which they were walking.

The first American regimental colours to be carried on the battlefront in France have been returned to regimental headquarters. Written on it in ink over the signature of the French commander is a certification that this was the first flag to reach the front lines. The flag did not fly at the front as no flags are exhibited there. It actually was carried, however, to a dug-out in the rear of the second line, remaining there several days.

PITTSBURG STREET NAMED FOR HERO

PITTSBURG, Pa.—In honour of Thomas Enright, private with the American Expeditionary Forces in France, who was one of the three Americans killed when an American trench was raided by a German force, the street where Enright made his home in this city, hitherto called Premo street, will be named "Enright street," it was announced.

An ordinance changing the name of the street will be introduced at the next meeting of the City Council.

THE ONLY MEDICINE FOR LITTLE ONES

Mrs. H. Blanche, St. Pamphile, Que., writes: — "I have obtained great results from the use of Baby's Own Tablets. WEEKLY REPORT ON FARM CONDITIONS

Rapid Progress Made in Fall Ploughing—Live Stock

Following is a summary of weekly crop reports made by District Representatives to the Ontario Department of Agriculture:

The rapid progress made in fall ploughing has been the leading feature of the week. The weather though cool at nights, has been on the whole ideal for the work, and the tractors and horse ploughs have been used as never before to attain the objective planned earlier in the season, and which had been delayed by many causes, including ultimely October weather.

Fall wheat in many quarters lacks the size and general appearance of braid that is desirable for entering the winter in the most promising condition, as much of the crop was planted late, and the raw weather of the mid-fall season checked the growth considerably. It is claimed by some, however, that the vigor of the roots may carry the crop nicely through, should the winter conditions be at all favorable.

In various parts of the province some threshing remains to be done. An encouraging feature of threshing this year is the large quantity of straw reported, and most of it is of excellent quality both for feeding and bedding. Marketing is comparatively slow. However much of the grain is now fed on the farm, many preferring to dispose of it "on foot."

Harvesting of all kinds practically completed, here and there only an odd patch of turnips or other roots remaining to be taken up. The roots generally are not large in size, but they are very uniform in appearance. Potatoes also are more presentable than for the last two or three years, although a few complaints are made of scab and dry rot.

Clover is likely to enter the winter in excellent condition, reports to this effect being practically unanimous.

The advent of American buyers in some of the Lake Erie counties is putting up the price of hay, a good supply of which is in the farmers' hands all over the province.

Live Stock: Cattle are being stabled in good condition. There are probably more "feeders" on hand than at this time last year, as carloads of such animals have been brought into several counties for winter handling. Many of the cheese factories are now running only every other day. The demand for milch cows, however, was never stronger, prices being quoted at $125, and even $150.

At present there is but very little enquiry for horses.

Hogs are being marketed steadily around $16 a cwt. Notwithstanding large sales during the fall it is thought that about the usual number are on hand.

More interest is being taken in sheep. One representative states that "old flocks" are being increased and new flocks are being started. Another claims that more breeding ewes than usual will be wintered.

Labor: Farmers still complain of the scarcity of help, and are plainly worried as to next year's prospects. The operations of the Military Service Act continue to be a disturbing factor.

CATTLE MARKET

The receipts for the past week at the Union Stock Yards amounted to 713 cars: 7,549 cattle, 551 calves 14,227 hogs, 6,932 sheep, and 2,014 horses. During the same period there arrived at the Civic Yards 65 cars: 951 cattle, 928 sheep, 532 hogs, 57 calves, and 32 horses.

Little really good stuff was on the market during the week, and it may be said with no exaggeration that practically nothing sold beyond $10.75 per cwt., the bulk of the best butcher cattle going at $10.25. Cattle shipments were generally light throughout the week, Thursday's close only seeing a run of 200 in all on the market. Prices were far easier than the week before on Monday: probably 35 per cent. lower in the lighter lines, and this setback seemed to govern conditions until the end. Buyers apparently had the situation almost entirely in their hands, which was little wonder considering the great quantity of scrawny, ill-developed cattle shipped in. While the majority of canners sold at the $5 mark and slightly over, there were several instances where poor miserable stuff went for $4.75 per cwt., or even lower. Some bulls were bought up for feeding purposes at fair prices, but the bulk of the stockers sold at an average figure of $8, light stuff going at $6.50.

There is a good demand for milkers and springers, and no farmer who has any really good cows of this class need hesitate in shipping them for the next week or two. It cannot be said too emphatically though that only the very best animals command the quotable top prices. The demand for milkers at present almost equals that for the best of beef cattle.

Choice veal calves have been steady for weeks, just because there has been so little of the real article in the pens. The dearth in this line is very noticeable.

Hogs had an easier tendency at the week-end, and it is very possible that next week may see a slight recession. Lambs were practically steady through the week, and it would be rash to make any prophecies at present in that direction. In the hog market, it may be said high prices are being paid for sows.

Sixty-five horses were sold at the Horse Exchange on Wednesday. While the bulk went at the present quotable figures, a few heavy draughts somewhat out of condition sold at from $50 to $125. They were of course, far from being up to the mark, though probably quite serviceable for a few years.

PEEL OFF CALLUSES WITH THE FINGERS

To painlessly and quickly remove any callus spots from the bottom of the feet apply a few drops of freezone directly upon the hardened skin and shortly it will peel right off without pain, soreness or bleeding.

This drug is an ether compound. It simply loosens the dead callused skin. It doesn't eat it away, but loosens it so it peels right off with the fingers.

A quarter ounce of this freezone costs little at any pharmacy, but is sufficient to remove every corn or callus from one's feet. This is the only way to free the feet from corns and calluses without soreness, danger or infection.

After the corn or callus is lifted away the skin beneath and surrounding, is found pink and healthy, and not inflamed, or even irritated. This is a good thing to know

SHEEP REPLACE GROUSE.

The Aberdeenshire Executive Committees have exercised the powers conferred on them in connection with food production by taking possession of a large grouse moor on the estate of Lord Forbes of Castle Forbes, Strathdon, and have appointed the tenant on the estate as their agent to secure the efficient grazing of the moor by sheep. The committees are determined that grouse moors and deer forests will be fully utilised to provide additional food. This is the first moor commandeered in Scotland.

GERMANS MUST LEAVE TALL BUILDINGS.

NEW YORK, Nov. 24.—Thos D. McCarthy, United States marshal, announces that enemy aliens will be barred from all buildings which command a view of New York harbour or the North and East rivers. It is estimated that 10,000 Germans will be compelled to move from tall buildings. The marshal also announced that unnaturalized Germans will be forbidden to live in apartment houses on certain sections of Riverside Drive.

BRITISH GAIN WEST OF CAMBRAI
ITALIANS HOLDING ENEMY IN CHECK

BRITISH MAKE FRESH GAINS IN THE CAMBRAI SECTOR

Over One Hundred Guns Have Been Captured in This Area by General Byng's Forces---Germans Have Been Reinforced By Reserves From Different Points on the Western Front and Fighting is Violent---German Raids Against French Are Repulsed.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

NEW YORK, November 24.—Reinforced by divisions from other sectors of the western front, the Germans are resisting desperately the British advance on Cambrai. Around Fontaine Notre Dame less than three miles west of Cambrai and Boulon Wood close by, the most strenuous fighting has occurred with the British making progress. General Byng is combining his attacks with consolidation work, and the British are firmly established in their new positions which give opportunities to destroy the usefulness of Cambrai as a supply centre as well as a starting place for a drive either north behind the Drocourt-Queant line, or west against Cambrai. Heavy fighting is taking place at Moeucres, three miles southwest of Fontaine Notre Dame and at Creve Coeur, about three miles south of Cambrai at the other end of the wedge driven across the Hindenburg line Tuesday and Wednesday. The Boulon Wood is the dominating hill to the west of Cambrai, and the Germans have put up a strong resistance here as well as at Fontaine Notre Dame, which flanks the wood to the west.

LONDON, November 24.—At the various points west of Cambrai the British made progress yesterday, the War Office reports. More than a hundred guns have been captured recently in this area.

The statement follows: Operations were successfully carried out by us yesterday west of Cambrai. After severe fighting, in which the Germans offered stubborn resistance, our troops stormed the important and dominating high ground about Boulon Wood. To the east of Boulon Wood some progress was made in the neighbourhood of Fontaine Notre Dame. West of the wood our troops made further progress along the Hindenburg line astride the Canal Du Nord in the vicinity of Moevres. In the vicinity of Bullevourt our troops gained further ground during the night, capturing a hostile strong point with a number of prisoners. The number of prisoners captured in yesterday's attack has not yet been ascertained. Since the beginning of operations on November 20th it is known that more than 100 guns have been taken by us, including several heavy guns of calibres up to eight inches.

PARIS, November 24.—During the night the enemy undertook several raids, especially in the region of Courcy and in the Argonne, says to-day's official communication. He gained no success and suffered losses. In the Champagne we took prisoners in a raid east of Auberive. Everywhere else the night was calm. Dunkirk was bombarded by airplanes last night. There were no victims and the damage was insignificant.

GERMANS TO FIGHT HARD FOR CAMBRIA

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES IN THE FIELD, November 24. — Crown Prince Rupprecht put forth every ounce of his army's strength today to stem the British advance and save Cambrai. The German depot city is full of German troops. Aviators reported its suburbs bristling with massed field guns. Hurried defences are being thrown up in every direction. Germany does not propose to surrender it without the most desperate resistance.

Nevertheless, the city's use as a rail centre is finished. It has been evacuated of its stores. Its railroads are now being crammed with soldiers.

Various parts of the whole western front have contributed every man that could be spared. To-day the British lines, still forging their steel wedge menaced the salient between Cambrai and the Sensee Valley. The withdrawal of British forces from Fontaine Notre Dame was a case of pure bad luck. The companies defending the position were short of ammunition when they were attacked by three battalions. The position was an important one since it endangered the German hold on Boulon Wood and the village nearby, both of which are on the high ground and afford a sweeping view of the country in all directions.

Prisoners taken by the British to-day said Crown Prince Rupprecht had ordered Boulon Wood held at all costs, and that the Thirtieth German Division had been brought from the Aisne front, and the 119th Division from the Flanders front, to reinforce the failing German lines. Both were stationed in Cambrai.

HOPE TO INDUCE RUSSIA TO STAY ON FIGHTING LINE

United States Aim is to Sway Allies to State Their War Aims in Such a Manner As to Inspire the Russian People

WON'T ACCEPT ARMISTICE

(By Carl D. Groat).

WASHINGTON, Nov. 24.—Partly as a means of stifling Russian peace manoeuvres and inspiring that nation to fight on, the United States Government will be doubly insistent that the Allies unite in a statement of their war aims and expose any war treaties, if they exist. With Russia moving for an armistice and universal peace, the United States propose that the Paris War Conference shall bring about a show down. Col. House is bending every effort to sway the Allies to this viewpoint.

These aims must be such as to inspire the Russian people. They must be such that Russia, heartily anxious for peace, will be willing to lay aside negotiations and fight on for world democracy.

The United States stands ready to back any stable Russian government, if it does not make separate peace with Germany, the authorities stated to-day. Some officials believe Lenine's and Trotsky's statements that if a universal peace cannot be obtained, no separate peace will be concluded with Germany, and that nation will then fight on.

In such event the United States stands ready to aid the Russian Government, be it "Bolsheviki" or some other faction. The spirit of Russia is radical, and whatever government rises now is regarded by officials here as destined to be extremist. The offer of an armistice and the proposal for a universal peace has not reached the State Department early to-day, but is anticipated. The Russian nation, as a whole, is regarded as sincerely anxious for "democratic Pte. H. E. Ireland, formerly of the 93rd Battalion.

SERIOUSLY ILL.

Pte. John Dunn, formerly of the 59th Battalion, Peterborough.

GASSED.

Gunner Herbert Wilson, 26th Battery, Peterborough.

PTE. J. P. HORTON.

Pte. Joseph P. Horton, a former member of the 93rd Battalion Machine Gun Section, is officially reported killed in action in the recent fighting. Pte. Horton was among the first to enlist in the 93rd Battalion, joining Lieut.-Col. Johnston's unit in August of 1915. Later when the Machine Gun Section was formed, Pte. Horton was transferred to Lieut. Crisp's section. He was well known in Peterborough, where he had lived for a long time. His relatives are in England.

PRIVATE VICTOR WILLIAM BLAKER.

On Wednesday Mr. George Blaker, Alderville, received official notice that 157541, Private Victor William Blaker, infantry, had been killed in action October 30th, at Passchendaele. This is the second casualty in the Blaker family, and the tenth member of the Alderville reserve, of which practically every fit man has gone to the front, who has paid the supreme sacrifice.

PTE. H. E. IRELAND.

Pte. H. E. Ireland, of Hall's Bridge (Buckhorn) who enlisted here with the 93rd Peterborough battalion in June, 1916, just after the battalion left for Barriefield Camp, is officially reported wounded and missing. Pte. Ireland went overseas with Lieut.-Col. Johnston's unit and was transferred to the Mounted Rifles at the front.

PTE. JOHN DUNN.

Pte. John Dunn, of Peterborough, who went overseas with the 59th Battalion, and who was reported wounded a few days ago, is now officially reported admitted to the 18th General Hospital at Camieres, seriously ill.

GUNNER HERBERT WILSON.

Mrs. Watkins, 148 Park street, has received a letter from Gunner Herbert Wilson, a Peterborough member of the 26th Battery, stating that he was badly gassed in the fighting in the Ypres sector on October 29th, and is now in No. 8 Ward, Royal Infirmary, Liverpool. Gunner Wilson writes that he is burned from head to foot. This is the second time that he has been gassed.

ANOTHER LOCAL BOY IN ROYAL FLYING CORPS

Peterborough boys are continuing to join the Royal Flying Corps. Among the latest to enlist in that fascinating branch of the service is Mr. Max Swanston of the Examiner newsroom, who has been successful in passing the tests and has been accepted as a cadet. He is at present on the reserve and will not begin training to qualify as a flying officer until January 1st.

After Furious Fighting Italians Have Recaptured Lost Positions

Monte Tomba and Monte Persica Again in Italian Hands After a Succession of Attacks and Counter Attacks of the Greatest Violence.

THE LOSSES ARE HEAVY

(Associated Press Despatch).

ITALIAN HEADQUARTERS IN NORTHERN ITALY, Nov. 23.—The battle of the mountains is raging with unexampled violence. The Italians again hold Monte Tomba and Monte Persica positions which they lost last night. The losses have been very great, but the enemy's far exceed those of the Italians. A succession of attacks and counter-attacks followed rapidly throughout yesterday on the hills between the Piave and Brenta Valleys, where the Italians and Austro-Germans are engaged in furious combat. Brigades and regiments, their numbers diminished in the struggle, were reformed and returned to fight. In one section where there were thirty officers, twenty-seven were killed or wounded, but the remaining three fought the battle of the thirty.

THE FINAL CHARGE.

The final charge of the day came at 2 o'clock in the afternoon. The enemy had struck his greatest blow earlier in the day, and the fierce attack lasted three-quarters of an hour. The whole field was swept by artillery fire, and the ground was strewn with dead. It was amid this welter of bodies and debris that the Italian lines were reformed, and from it they moved forward steadily and irresistibly until the disputed ground was retaken, except at one point, where the struggle still goes on.

In this last desperate charge officers and men were eager to advance, preferring death to being made prisoners. The enemy losses must be very heavy, but he is bringing forward a steady stream of reserves.

The first army also is sustaining a heavy fight west of Brenta River, where the enemy rushes have been repulsed by the splendid resistance of the Italians.

REIGN OF TERROR IN RUSSIAN CITY

(By Ralph Turner.)

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

TOKIO, November 24.—Harbin, Russia, is in the midst of a reign of terror. Robberies occur almost hourly on the streets, mobs of criminals parade and the Russian police have completely lost their power. The city is still divided on its allegiance to the old provisional regime or the new Bolsheviki faction. Word to this effect received here to-day said all foreign consuls have decided to make formal protest and to take adequate measures for protection of foreigners' lives and property. According to Harbin messages Kerensky's whereabouts are still unknown, and Maximalists are gradually being supplanted in power by the divided factions of other parties.

MR. HALL'S SUCCESSFUL MEETINGS IN THE NORTH

Electors of Northern Part of Riding Hear Eloquent Expositions of the Seriousness of the Food Situation and the Utter Failure and Criminal Neglect of the Borden Government to Meet the Conditions.

Mr. R. R. Hall returned to town this morning after having held meetings at Lakehurst, Rockcroft, and Ventress' School-House, in the Township of Harvey, on Thursday, and at Union Creek and Swamp Lake School House on Friday.

The meetigns were unusually well attended, in spite of the fact that the weather and roads were anything but pleasant.

Mr. Hall said he found the electors in these townships particularly anxious to ascertain information which they felt was not being furnished to them by the leading Toronto papers.

In the course of Mr. Hall's speech, he pointed out that Lord Rhondda, the British Food Controller, had recently declared:

"That during the forthcoming twelve months our minimum requirements in foodstuffs from the United States and Canada would amount to over ten million tons, and will represent an expenditure, without freight charges, exceeding $1,250,000,000, or, roughly speaking, between three and four million dollars a day. Most of this will be for the purchase of cereals, hog products, sugar and meat.

"The danger of the food situation," continued the British Food Controller, "lies not so much in the submarine peril as the world's shortage of cereals, meats and fats."

Lord Northcliffe's Warning.

Then again Lord Northcliffe, head of the British War Commission to the United States and Canada on the 23rd of October last, in the City of Chicago, stated as follows:

"I do not see the signs of that bridge across the Atlantic, without which all this recruiting, all this enthusiasm, all this manufacturing will be null and void. Therefore I urge you, entreat you, to believe that your army, without transports, will be valueless. In this matter of shipping you strike at a vital point in the waging of the war. If you cannot get supplies to the men it seems to me almost idle to add to your already vast army."

Mr. Hall stated it was beyond belief to think that Sir Robert Borden had turned a deaf ear to these appeals that had been made to him by the British Government. It is beyond belief to think that neither Sir Robert Borden nor a single member of his administration has placed before the people any constructive policy that would enable Canada to meet the demand that had been made upon her by Great Britain. During this many months the leading statesmen of Great Britain have pointed out that they will require over ten million tons of cereals, hog products, sugar and meat during the coming year, and that unless they have a constant and continuous supply of such foodstuffs, "Victory may slip from our united grasp."

Situation Serious.

The food situation in Great Britain, France and Italy is of so serious a nature, and the criminal neglect of Sir Robert Borden and his government is so complete, that the people of Canada should rise up against him and have him immediately dismissed from office, and put men in his place who will know and appreciate the danger that awaits Great Britain if Canada fails to do her share in producing and sending food supplies to Breat Britain.

Mr. Hall pointed out that the policy of the opposition could not be more briefly expressed than he has set forth in his address to the electors of West Peterborough regarding food production.

Food Production.

Great Britain has appealed to Canada to send her 300,000,000 bushels of wheat to feed her teeming millions and those of Italy and of France.

This enormous quantity of wheat would feed 40,000,000 people for a whole year. This shows our Allies want food.

To this appeal the Borden-Rowell Government only answers, eat less, slay and eat the calf and the lamb and prepare for meatless days.

Let the Government encourage the farmer to produce more. Give him agricultural implements duty free. Supply him with suitable labour on fair terms to till the soil. Use our banks and loan companies to lend him money on fair and easy terms of payment to assist in every possible way to plant and produce foodstuffs. Supply the farmer with steam or gasoline tractors to enable one man to do the work of five. Shield us from the profiteer who plunders the farmer and robs the consumer, makes a profit of a million a year and supports Sir Robert Borden and his hypnotizer, Sir Joseph Flavelle.

A forward policy on these lines would be a double blessing. It would reduce the cost of living at home and would help supply the necessities of our Allies overseas.

Remember one single North-West farmer produces 2,000 bushels of wheat per year when well directed and equipped. 100,000 men would produce 200,000,000 bushels of wheat. Those already on the ground in the North-West, properly equipped and manned, could produce 200,000,000 bushels more.

I pledge myself, if elected, to support prompt and immediate efforts to reduce the high cost of living.

"Peterborough Presents Possibilities Unsurpassed."

SATURDAY, NOV. 24, 1917

A REPRESENTATIVE REPRESENTATIVE.

One of the chief objects of an election is to elect a member who will represent the constituency; one who will look after the interests of the constituency and be active in promoting its welfare.

We have the Metal Products industry leaving Peterborough. What has the late member done to prevent such an industrial set-back to the employment interests of the city?

This industry, closely associated with war winning operations, should have been retained in Peterborough; and the relations of our representative to the government called for his action in seeking to maintain the Metal Products in Peterborough.

But Mr. Burnham has shown in the past a great indifference to the wishes of the people. When interests concerned in the material welfare of the city wished to get his influence to secure the benefit of quartering a battalion in Peterborough, they did not get encouragement or help, but rebuff—were given to understand that this was not the member's business, to look after the business of his constituents.

In other regards Mr. Burnham has showed indifference to the wants and wishes of his constituents— indifference to the benefits of the working classes.

It is true that he played for a little cheap notoriety, in catering to the working classes by his spectacular resignation of his candidature because the conscription act did not provide for the conscription of wealth, as well as of manhood. But that was only another freak that didn't last long. He soon fell back into the line of party subserviency and systematic exploitation of his own importance.

Peterorough does not want a member who distinguishes the coonstituency by making "breaks." It wants a member who will steadily, consistently and loyally look after its business and interests.

Mr. Hall during his four years' membership for West Peterborough, made one of theh best representatives the riding ever had; alert, aggressive, attentive to the duties that involved the welfare of his constituency. He paid attention, and enforced government attention, to every item of business, great or small, that involved the good of the city or county. Among the large things that have come to Peterborough is the Armouries, erected in Mr. Hall's time.

At Ottawa, he was attentive to his duties; was popular with his parliamentary colleagues, and kept a sane, level course and refrained from fanatic and spasmodic outbreaks, that did no credit to the representation of West Peterborough.

He is a business man whose business is to do business for others, and understands and appreciates business conditions— the business wants of a great industrial constituency. Mr. Hall's past representative term is proof that if again elected, he will serve West Peterborough as a practical, aggressive, business representative, and not as a dreamer of dreams.

Sir Robert Borden evades the charge of Sir Sam Hughes that he, Sir Robert, issued orders to "go slow on recruiting," by improperly accusing Sir Wilfrid Laurier with refusing to cooperate in a recruiting campaign.

It is a drastic measure of necessity and naturally arouses antipathy. A measure that takes possession of the manhood of the country in the interest of every interest of the country, should be made to bear fairly and equitably.

The young men of the country, fit to fight, are not the only ones who should be coerced into the discharge of duty.

Next to men, the need is money, and if the men of the country are called upon to sacrifice, perhaps, their lives, their positions of civil occupation and earning, it is felt to be unfair to allow those who are making immense profits out of war industries to escape. Men are making good wages out of war work, and they surrender this when they are taken bodily from their work, and enrolled in the ranks.

The capitalist, the manufacturer, not being of fighting age, is not taken; neither is his money, made out of the agony of the war, made to bear its fair share of contribution.

Sir Robert Borden is full of election promises. He says that wealth as well as manhood, is to be conscripted.

That was not proposed at the same time the conscription of manhood was proposed. So unjust and unfair was the idea of relieving wealth and coercing manhood, that the member for West Peterborough went on strike. He resigned his candidature in protest, but his partizanship triumphed—he was whipped back into the party lines by the vague promise that there would be conscription of wealth.

That was months ago, and the promise has not been implemented, though conscription of manhood goes on merrily—"the more the merrier."

True, there is some sort of proposal for taxing war profits beyond a certain percentage; but so far that is a mere election promise—postponed for fulfilment after the election.

The promise made by Sir Thomas White months ago to make his masters, the "big interests," pony up, was only a promise.

The session passed and the Borden government could not find time to add a rider to the military service act; to add conscription of wealth.

But the Borden government could find time to put money into the pockets of the "big interests," instead of making the profiteers pay. The government found time to perpetrate the Canadian Northern deal; to use the National credit and its "brute majority," to validate worthless bonds, and put millions into the pockets of the "big interests," but wealth and war profits are exempted wholesale—without being "the only support of a mother," without being necessary to the farm—only useful to line their own pockets with our money.

The proposal to tax war profits above a certain figure sounds all right on paper; but its application is to be postponed till after the elections.

But what of the tremendous profits of the last three years that are allowed to escape?

Premier Borden's promise is not retro-active. And the war profits of the Allisons, and the Flavelles, and other big wealth absorbers, is untouched. The 80 per cent. profits made by the Davies Company last year is not to be touched.

All that money due to Canada, made while war was making Canadian women and children widows and orphans, is not to be made to do its bit.

If the Union government is true to name — if it is not a revised edition of the Borden government — is all patriotism, it will show cause. It has been formed to bring men into the ranks by conscription; and if it is honest it will see that wealth is conscripted; it will see that there are no more steals, grafts, excessive war profits or blood money; and there won't be so much wealth to conscript.

Have you noticed that all the "big interests" are hand in glove with the Union government. Their patriotism is to make money out of the country, and they haven't much fear of Premier Borden's promise to conscript wealth.

NEW NAME; THE SAME OLD NATURE.

We are supposed to have a Union government, and are asked to unite, without regard to party sentiments, in its support. But there is not much real union sentiment. The old-time supporters of the Borden government—hardly distinguishable from the Union government—are as viciously partizan as ever. As of old, all who do not fall down and worship the Borden-Union government are declared traitors.

Candidates who venture to oppose the Borden-Union government, are called "Laurier-Bourassa candidates."

Bourassa is the man, who, backed by Conservative support, and Borden support, helped to defeat Laurier in 1911.

He is against Laurier now—he denounces the Laurier policy of Canada continuing in the war. He only supports Laurier's attitude towards conscription—leave it to the vote of the people.

Sir Robert Borden himself opposed conscription at the beginning of the session of 1916. Sir Robert "repeated with emphasis" the announcement previously made that "we do not propose conscription."

But when an election became inevitable, when Sir Robert Borden saw that owing to wasteful and inefficient war record, the government he headed was doomed to popular smash, he and Hon. Bob Rogers, on their way back from England, concocted conscription as a means of stampeding the electorate with a "loyalty" cry after the manner of the bogus loyalty cry of 1911, when Bourassa, the arch-traitor, was welcomed as a co-worker with the flag wavers. Sir Robert Borden, without consulting his colleagues, announced conscription in the House, sprang it on the country, as the only means of raising the balance of 100,000 of the 500,000 Canadian soldiers he promised, without consulting his colleagues or parliament, to send across the seas.

Bourassa was Borden's right-hand man in Quebec in 1911, and Sir Robert still permits Bourassa to rule the situation there. It is to the predominance of Bourassa influence that, what was feared when conscription was proposed, is happening in Quebec—that the Military Service Act would be administered to favour Quebec.

In accordance with the "understanding" with Sir Robert Borden's Nationalist Deputy-Speaker, Mr. Rainville, the exemptions for military service in urban centres in Quebec, is 96 per hundred, and in rural districts the exemptions are 98 per hundred.

It is therefore seen that Mr. Bourassa's influence upon Sir Robert Borden is carried out in Quebec, Sir Robert Borden, like an honourable man, is repaying the debt he owes to Bourassa, who supplied him with thirty supporters in parliament, and furnished a constant supply of the Nationalist flag-shooting Nationalist ministers.

If the Union and the Borden governments are not quite identical in personnel, they are identical in spirit. The Union government seems to be still in league with the Nationalists, helping to pull the Borden government's chestnuts out of the fire, catering to Bourassa and the Nationalist sentiment, while they are shouting treason to all who dare to doubt that conscription is a sovereign remedy for all our national ills—while the Union government is permitting Bourassa and the Nationalists to kill the Military Service Act in Quebec.

We are being stampeded by a repetition of the bogus loyalty cry, that by a blend of Bourassa, Borden, British-born and buncombe, fooled the people in 1911, and saddled upon the country a government that so muddled the war administration, so earned popular condemnation, that it had to take the disguise of a Union government to escape from the penalty of its political misdeeds.

While putting Nationalist sand into the war machinery in Quebec, did the Borden government ever give that province a fair show at recruiting?

AN OPEN LETTER TO SIR ROBERT BORDEN

To Sir Robert Borden:

The time has come for clear thinking and plain speaking. The time has also come when the voice of the common people should be heard above the polished addresses of so-called leaders and the noisy harangues of local politicians.

When you were returned to power in September, 1911, it was felt by every Conservative of this country that at last Canada had found a leader of true British stock who would uphold the best British Parliamentary traditions of firmness, integrity, resolution, and power. We all said: "Now we have a leader who knows the right and is unafraid."

No greater shock was ever received by a loyal following than that which followed the appointment to your Cabinet of avowed Nationalists who had become notorious for their seditious utterances. We at once realised that even you, our beloved leader, could be bought with a price. In justice to you, however, it must be said that while our faith in you was shaken it was not then shattered. Even the appointment of White as Finance Minister and Rogers as Minister of Public Works, while obnoxious to all those opposed to monopoly and graft, was accepted as a political expediency. Total disillusionment came later.

When the war broke out, all good Conservatives rejoiced to know that we had a Tory Government in power. It was felt that this Government under your leadership would tackle every problem which war condiions might present with courage and vigour. It was also expected that you would at once insist on the paramount necessity of economy and efficiency in every department. The straight truth, however, is that from the first, extravagance, graft and inefficiency prevailed. The purchasing of war supplies was entirely a matter of patronage and resulted in one scandal after another, while the enlistment of soldiers for the Front was left almost entirely with local patriotic organisatione, and in the end broke down enirely. To quote your former Minister of Militia, "the most ardent agents of the German Government could scarcely have been more successful in holding up the proper equipment." Our Liberal friends were only too true when they declared that a riot of extravagance, graft, profiteering, and political maggotry followed the announcement of our paricipation in the war. Even purblind party men began to see the real state of affairs. As time went on we become more and more disheartened. Enlistment died from bungling and inefficiency. The attempt to introduce National Service proved a fiasco. Pork barons waxed fat, and were raised to high places. Before all the world the Government of which you were the head became an object of ridicule and contempt. You yourself have been tried and found lamentably wanting. We your supporters reached the nadir of despair when with enlistment dead, food prices soaring uncontrolled, monopoly encouraged, and patronage rampant, the Minister of Public Works, whose dismissal with discredit was long overdue, had the temerity to resign because of your "inactivity." We felt that your position had become desperate in the extreme when you were forsaken by Sir Robert Rogers.

Finally, when the last ditch of incompetence had been reached, you made a gambler's bid for continuance in office by a sudden announcement of Conscription, followed by the passing by gag methods of the most tyrannous Franchise Bill ever conceived in an Anglo-Saxon country. To wage war against the Prussians abroad, Prussian methods were to be used at home in the matter of franchise. During the expiring days of your last session of Parliament, you feathered the nests of all your friends who were too old for future service and threw a meaty bone in the way of the big interests with the C.N.R. Purchase Bill.

To friends and enemies alike it was evident that your course was run, and that the time had come for you to hand the reins of leadership to another. Your record for failure was complete. The road of mismanagement could lead no further. The Government of which you were Premier, had left undone practically everything that should have been done to enable us to do our full share in the war with credit and economy, and had done almost everything which, in the fair name of honesty and efficieny should have been left undone. For you the end of leadership had been reached, or so we Conservatives thought.

Instead of quietly making way for an abler man, however, you now come to the country with a Government made up of discredited members of your former Government, with the addition of Liberals who, to further their own ends, have hitched a rope around your neck to pull you out of the ditch, and you expect us to support you. All I can say is, "Not much!"

Conservative.

Didn't Tell the Doctors.

Alexander Black, 496 McDonnel St., applied under the infirmity clause. He had been shocked in the controller department of the C.G.E. Co., and still felt the effects of the experience. He had not told the Medical Board of his alleged disability, and couldn't satisfactorily explain his neglect. His appeal was disallowed.

Percy Cameron Moncrief, of North Monaghan, is one of four brothers on a farm of about 400 acres. Their father is unable to do much work. Mr. Harold Baptie, Reeve of Cavan, said that the boys were all young, and the applicant had most of the responsibility of a big farm which Mr. Moore was highly productive. Mr. Baptie said he felt sure that Moncrief was of more value to the country than if he were taken as a soldier. He was a splendid character, and whether on the farm or in the army would be a credit to Canada. Exemption was allowed.

Draughtmen have been rather prominent before the City Hall Tribunal. William Sylvester Wilson, 593 Sherbrooke Street, has been with the C.G.E. Co. a year and four months. His home is in Toronto. He was born in Massachusetts, of British parents, and was of the opinion that he was an alien. He had not been permitted to vote here. Mr. Aylmer stated that Mr. Wilson was a British subject. He based his claim on physical grounds, stating that he was willing to do anything his nervous condition would permit. He was rated as "A2" by the Medical Board, but remarked that any person who has been connected with music knows of the nervous temperament associated with it. Mr. Wilson has made his mark in Peterborough and elsewhere as a violinist.

The Tribunal refused to send him back to the Medical Board, but recommended to the Deputy Registrar that his condition be examined by an Appeal Board, and that the question of his exact nationality be decided. Exemption disallowed with those provisions.

Eugene Gadoua, 341 Townsend Street, sought exemption as the support of his uncle and aunt in Montreal. His parents are dead. He is employed as a plumber with George Brenton. Decision deferred.

Wilfred Francis McClancy, 170 Aylmer Street, asked for exemption on domestic grounds. He has one brother at the front, whose military pay and separation allowance is assisting his mother. Another brother is married. His mother lives in Westport. Decision deferred.

Two Brothers Overseas.

"I think our family has done enough when two boys are over there, and I am the only one left," said Roy Allison, 875 Water Street. He had worked with the Metal Products Company, but has latterly been helping in his father's grocery store.

Decision deferred.

Victor Hubert Scully, 419 Downie Street, has spent a whole week "hanging around" waiting for the Tribunal to call his case. The Metal Products Co., he understood, had requested that the claims of eight tool-makers be transferred to Montreal. Mr. Aylmer searched his files, but the company has been dilatory, or the special appeal for Mr. Scully has been delayed in transit. His brother and parents live at home. Both father and brother are working. Decision deferred.

Works 150 Acres.

"They've told us one man can scarcely work 100 acres, but this man works 150," Mr. Aylmer remarked when Albert Edward Crowley, of Otonabee, applied for exemption. He is alone on the farm, but a brother helped him with the harvest. Crowley's hearing was one of the briefest before this Tribunal. His exemption was allowed.

John Arthur Smith, 206 Westcott Street, barber, applied on domestic grounds. He has one brother overseas. Decision reserved.

$100 in Christmas Prizes

WHAT PRESENTS ARE IN THE CARS FOR BOYS AND GIRLS

$100 IN CASH PRIZES FOR THE BEST REPLIES

SO that we may become acquainted with more young people this Christmas, we are giving you this train loaded down with Christmas presents. Each car contains one kind of present and the name is on each car but the man who painted the name got the letters all jumbled. Worse still, the man who coupled the cars got them in the wrong order. Now, can you straighten things out and re-arrange the letters in the names of the presents in each car and put the cars in their right order behind the locomotive?

Car No. 6, DOES ILL, contains "Dollies." The other cars may contain gloves, candy, baseballs, animals, bicycles, building blocks, skipping ropes, nine pins, engines, skates, Noah's Ark, perfume, lanterns, tools, footballs, games, or something else. It is for you to find out.

Should you get the cars behind the locomotive in their right order, you will find that the first letter of the correct name of each Christmas present in each car when these first letters are all put together will spell out the name of a great Nation in Europe, one of the Allies—a Nation whose Navy controls the Oceans.

On Christmas Day, Uncle Peter, who edits the Bunny Page in EVERYWOMAN'S WORLD, will judge the answers and award the following big cash prizes to young people under seventeen years of age complying with the conditions of the contest, whose answers are all correct or nearest correct, neatest and best written. So get busy and send in an answer to-day, and this Christmas Season may be the happiest you have ever had.

The Big Cash Prizes

$25.00 Cash to the Boy or Girl who sends us the best reply. $15.00 Cash to the Boy or Girl sending the second best reply. $10.00 Cash to the Boy or Girl sending the third best reply. DOLLAR BILLS. Fifty bright, new, crisp $1.00 bills to the fifty next Boys and Girls with the 50 next best replies.

If you are bright and quick you will also have the opportunity of winning a Shetland Pony and Cart or Bicycle and many other fine prizes in a pleasant contest even more interesting than this one.

Write your answers in pen and ink, using only one side of the paper. Put your name, address and age, in the upper right hand corner of each sheet.

Send Your Answer This Very Evening!

THERE are 53 Cash Prizes and in addition other fine awards for every young person who qualifies his or her entry in this fascinating contest. Each boy or girl desiring his or her entry to compete for one of the fine prizes will be required to perform a small service for Everywoman's World for which additional Reward or Cash Payment will be given. Wouldn't you like $25.00 Cash? Wouldn't you like a Shetland Pony and Cart or Bicycle? These fine prizes will go to our young friends and we would like you to get the best of them. Address your answers as follows:

Uncle Peter, c/o Everywoman's World, 48 Continental Building, Toronto.

The Patriotic Concert Was Great Success

Enjoyable Musical Numbers and Interesting Address Featured Entertainment

The patriotic concert arranged under the direction of Miss Myrtle Succee and Miss Etta Kempt, proved an unbounded success, and the Collegiate Institute Hall was well filled for the occasion. The programme, which was composed of well chosen selections by local talent, was thoroughly and well prepared to afford an interesting and enjoyable evening, each item meeting with storms of applause and encored repeatedly. Mr. G. N. Gordon acted as chairman.

The programme was as follows:
Piano solo—Miss Reid.
Solo—Mr. C. C. Parsons.
Recitation—Miss W. Parker.
Duet—Miss Ida Sanderson and Miss Myrtle Succee.
Address—Lieut. McNabb.
Solo—Mr. Carlisle.
Solo—Mrs. Renwick.
Solo—Mr. Warde.
Address—Pte. Parrington.
Solo—Miss Kempt.
Recitation—Miss W. Parker.

Serious Illness Avoided

Many a serious illness has been avoided by the prompt use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. These pills actually enrich and purify the blood, and in this way build up the system, tone and strengthen the nerves and invigorate the vital organs.

Serious diseases generally come from some simple disorder that has been neglected. Therefore any thinning of the blood should be looked upon as a warning sign, and more serious illness should be avoided by the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. In the case of young girls and women the blood is peculiarly liable to get out of order — to become thin and watery — and to lead to a general breakdown in health. This can be avoided by the occasional use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, which are suitable for the most delicate constitution. These pills will give you a new appetite, improve your digestion, tone and strengthen weakened nerves, banish depression and lack of energy, clear the complexion of pimples and blotches, cure pain in the back and general weakness, cause the disappearance of headaches, dizziness and heart fluttering. Give these pills a fair trial and you will soon note a wonderful change in your condition. Your spirits will brighten, good health and strength will return, and you will feel like a new person. You can confirm these statements by enquiring among your friends almost anywhere, as thousands and thousands of hopeless sufferers have been restored to new health and energy by using Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

You can get these pills through any medicine dealer or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Solo—Miss Myrtle Succee.

Lieut. McNabb.

Lieut. McNabb's address on Patriotism was heard with great interest. He outlined the course of the first 36,000 Canadians and their heroic deeds and sacrifices in Flanders which will forever be enthroned in the hearts of the Canadians.

Patriotism.

There are three classes of patriotism, namely, manhood, money and womanhood. In the first clause Canada has responded magnificently. Since the first contingent crossed and faced such fearful odds, patriotism has run at fever heat.

In the second clause, money, a national asset towards winning the war, is embodied. Men win battles, money wins wars. To respond to the Victory Loan is to stand behind the armies in France.

Speaking on the third clause, womanhood, Lieut. McNabb said woman's work, without which the war could not be won, had been marvellous. The Red Cross, for which women are responsible, is God's work. No nationality is known to the Red Cross in a casualty and the enemy is as carefully tended as our own boys. No man who has come in touch with the long arm of the Red Cross, which stretches from the casualty clearing station to the home can criticize the Red Cross handling of the sick and wounded.

Conscription.

Lieut. McNabb was enthusiastic in endorsing conscription It is unfortunate, he said, after the wonderful record of those who have so gladly gone before that the government must pass conscription. If Laurier could, as Sir Robert Borden did when he crossed to France, see the conditions and the need for men to fill the gaps, he would probably be of Sir Roberts opinion that the Military Service Law is needed. Canada is in the eyes of the world as to the outcome of the coming election, even the Kaiser awaits the issue. He naturally does not wish to see conscription. No matter what the outcome, Lieut. McNabb felt sure voluntary or under Military Service Act, those who cross will maintain the high standards of those who went before.

Pte. Parrington's Address.

Pte. Parrington, who saw service with the Strathcona Horse in France, and who lately returned from a trip to the military camps in the United States, gave a brief address on his observations in the American camps, which, coming direct, gave a clear idea of what is being done by the Sammies for the war. Pte. Parrington visited Camp Lee, where 50,000 men, many of whom are millionaires' sons, rub shoulders with the poorest man in the States, all alike serving as privates. Doctors and lawyers, school teachers and capitalists have answered the call and distinction of class is unknown in military life.

Money Subscribed.

The work of the Red Cross in the States is marvellous. $100,000,000 have already been subscribed. The nation almost to a man has responded to the Liberty Bond's call, and eight billion dollars has been raised thereby.

Work Quickly.

The attitude of the States to-day is to do things quickly and thoroughly towards ending the war. Every furnace is kept red hot night and day turning out shells for the front.

Conscription in the States.

Military service in the States is practically to-day what it was in Lincoln's time and military service has proved to be the only fair way to raise an army.

Gin Pills FOR THE KIDNEYS SUCCEEDED

Where Travel and Change of Climate Failed to Restore Health

Hamilton, Ont., Apr. 10th, 1917.

"About four years ago I wrote you of my condition from Muscular and Inflammatory Rheumatism and Kidney Trouble and my efforts through travel and change of climate to rid myself of these unwelcome guests, and how I only found relief in Gin Pills after spending a lot of time and money in foreign lands.

"Since then Gin Pills have been my sheet anchor. I find in advancing years a tendency of the kidneys to get out of order more easily than formerly but a few doses of Gin Pills puts them right and wards off other and more serious trouble. When I remember what I endured through Kidney Trouble and Rheumatism and the freedom from these which I now enjoy, I feel it not only a duty but a pleasure to recommend Gin Pills for Kidney and Bladder Troubles to many thousands of personal friends throughout Canada to whom I am well known as a commercial traveller of over forty years' active service."

117 (Signed) W. G. REID.

Gin Pills sell for 50c a box or 6 boxes for $2.50 at all good dealers. Sample free if you write to National Drug & Chemical Co. of Canada, Limited, Toronto; or to United States address, Na-Dru-Co., Inc., 202 Main St., Buffalo, N.Y.

I KNOW A WOMAN'S SUFFERINGS

I am a woman.

What I have suffered is a far better guide than any MAN'S experience gained second-hand.

I know your need for sympathy and health.

And the treatment that gave me health and strength, new interest in life, I want to pass on to you, that you, too, may enjoy the priceless boon of health.

Are you unhappy, unfit for your duties? Write and tell me how you feel and I will send you ten days' FREE trial of a home treatment to meet your individual needs, together with references to women in Canada who have passed through your troubles and regained health; or you can secure this FREE treatment for your daughter, sister or mother.

If you suffer from pain in the head, back, or bowels, feeling of weight and dragging down sensations, falling or displacement of internal organs, bladder irritation with frequent urination, obstinate constipation or piles, pain in the sides regularly or irregularly, bloating, dyspepsia, extreme nervousness, depressed spirits, melancholy, desire to cry, fear of something evil about to happen, creeping feeling up the spine, palpitation, hot flashes, weariness, sallow complexion, with dark circles under the eyes, pain in the left breast or a general feeling that life is not worth living, I invite you to send to-day for my complete ten days' treatment entirely free and postpaid, to prove to yourself that these ailments can be easily and surely overcome at your own home, without the expense of hospital treatment, or the dangers of an operation. Women everywhere are escaping the surgeon's knife by knowing of my simple method of home treatment, and when you have been benefited, my sister, I shall only ask you to pass the good word along to some other sufferer. My home treatment is for all—young or old.

Read My FREE Offer!

To Mothers of Daughters, I will explain a simple home treatment which speedily and effectually dispels green-sickness (chlorosis), irregularities, headaches and lassitude in young women, and restores them to plumpness and health. Tell me if you are worried about your daughter. Remember it costs you nothing to give my method of home treatment a complete ten days trial, and if you wish to continue, it costs only a few cents a week to do so, and it does not interfere with one's daily work. Is health worth asking for? Write for the free treatment suited to your needs, and I will send it in plain wrapper by return mail. Cut out this offer, mark the places that tell your feelings, and return to me. Write and ask for the free treatment to-day, as you may not see this offer again. Address:

57th Chapter Sends Many Socks Overseas

166 Pairs Have Been Sent Recently —Regular Monthly Meeting

The regular meeting of the 57th Regiment Chapter, I.O.D.E., was held in the Y.W.C.A. on Thursday afternoon, 22nd November, with Mrs. Walker, the Regent, in the chair.

It was decided to have no meeting in December.

The sum of $25 was voted the Navy League of Canada and to the Canadian War Contingent Association to help defray the great expense caused by the shipment of 32 tons of maple sugar for the men in the trenches.

Mrs. Sharpe, convener of the Visiting Committee, reported that 51 visits had been made.

The members are reminded of the sale of useful and fancy articles and home-made cooking in the Masonic Dining Hall on the afternoon of 6th December.

After the meeting Mrs. Walker invited those present to adjourn to the Masonic Dining Hall for tea.

Following is he knitting report:

Peterborough, Nov. 22, 1917.

A FIGHTING FAMILY

D. S. O. and M.C. Among Honours Won, Some Among the Wounded

The members of Ye Olde Firme of Heintzman & Co., Ltd., Toronto, with a branch house here, are not sparing themselves in their contributions from their various families to the cause of the Allies on the battlefields of Flanders. Prominent in the front is Major Vandenburg, one of the four officers left of the original Princess Pats, and a D.S.O., who is a son-in-law of Mr. Herman Heintzman, Vice-President of the firm. Another is Lieut. Loughery, now back wounded. His mother was formerly Minnie Heintzman, a sister of Mr. George Heintzman, President of the Company. He expects to return to the front, so soon as an operation on his arm is brought to a successful conclusion. He has also earned the Military Cross. Bradford Heintzman, oldest son of Mr. Geo. Heintzman, is in the Flying Corps, and Howard, another son, has been in France with his battery for over a year. A third son, Herman, has enlisted for overseas. Mr. Carl Heintzman, a nephew, is wounded and is in a hospital in England at the present time. Mr. George Heintzman is himself one of the most active and untiring of Toronto's citizens in furthering the Victory Loan campaign, giving largely of his time to this cause.

FAREWELL SERVICES

At the Salvation Army Temple, Chamberlen Street, to-morrow (Sunday) will be the farewell services of Lieutenant Kent, who leaves on Thursday for Kemptville. On Wednesday evening will be the lieutenant's last public meeting. All are invited to come to these services.

Next week-end will be the welcome services of Captain Graves, of Oshawa, who is taking Lieut. Kent's place. Keep this in mind and come and hear her.

SERIOUS ACCIDENT IN MARIPOSA

LINDSAY, Nov. 24.—A very serious accident happened Thursday afternoon at the farm of Mr. Ed. McCorvie, near Brown's school house. A threshing machine was being moved out of his gate, when it slewed, pinning Mr. McCorvie between the flywheel of the machine and the gate post, breaking three ribs, one piercing his lung. Although his injuries are very serious, his recovery is looked for.

MILLIONS OF EGGS ON DEALERS' HANDS

OTTAWA, Nov. 24.—Certain dealers in eggs, who have accumulated for export stocks estimated at several million dozens, and who now find it impossible to ship the goods out of the country, have engaged, it is stated in negotiating with a branch of the Food administration with a view to furthering a scheme for marketing their holdings in Canada.

The plan suggested is understood to have been that the government and the merchants should each contribute $10,000 to encourage the consumption of eggs as a substitute for meat. Apparently a reduction in egg prices was not contemplated by the dealers.

IF KIDNEYS AND BLADDER BOTHER

Take Salts to Flush Kidneys and Neutralize Irritating Acids

Kidney and Bladder weakness result from uric acid, says a noted authority. The kidneys filter this acid from the blood and pass it on to the bladder, where it often remains to irritate and inflame, causing a burning, scalding sensation, or setting up an irritation at the neck of the bladder, obliging you to seek relief two or three times during the night. The sufferer is in constant dread, the water passes sometimes with a scalding sensation and is very profuse; again, there is difficulty in avoiding it.

Bladder weakness, most folks call it, because they can't control urination. While it is extremely annoying, and sometimes very painful, this is really one of the most simple ailments to overcome. Get about four ounces of Jad Salts from your pharmacist and take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast, continue this for two or three days. This will neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer is a source of irritation to the bladder and urinary organs which then act normally again.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, harmless, and is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and is used by thousands of folks who are subject to urinary disorders caused by uric acid irritation. Jad Salts is splendid for kidneys and causes no bad effects whatever.

Here you have a pleasant, effervescent lithia-water drink, which quickly relieves bladder trouble

AEOLIAN VOCALION

A CONSTANT REMINDER OF A THOUGHTFUL GIVER.

Until you have heard the Aeolian Vocalion you haven't a real appreciation of the Phonographic Art.

It possesses the priceless privilege of SELF-EXPRESSION in Music, which only those who play or sing have hitherto enjoyed.

Its great difference from other Phonographs—its great new feature—is the GRADUOLA for controlling expression, gives it an appeal that wins the heart of every music-lover who hears it.

It can honestly be said of the Vocalion, when compared with other phonographs, that there is the Tone difference between that of an ordinary Violin and a rare Cremona.

Hear the Aeolian Vocalion now. Demonstrations are always gladly given. Remember, prices will advance after December 1st. Pay a deposit now, and secure the choice of one of these beautiful gifts.

Benefit Concert By C. G. E. Employees Drew Big Crowd

The benefit concert in Victoria Hall, last night, arranged by the Brass Department of the C. G. E. Co., in aid of one of the employees of the works, who has been ill for some time, was very largely attended. Many of the members on the programme, which was of more than generous proportions, were encored, and, apart from the quality of the entertainment a gratifying feature was the fact that all those who had promised to contribute their talent, were present. There were no disappointments and apparently the receipts reached a comfortable sum.

The programme was as follows with Mr. Henry Turner as chairman:

God Save the King—Band and Orchestra.
March—S. A. Temple Band.
Vocal solo—Mr. E. Bartley.
Instrumental duet — Messrs. A. Parkins and Gazley.
Vocal Trio—Messrs. Lee, Turner, and Hartshorn.
Recitation—Mrs. Lashbrook.
Vocal solo—Mr. E. Hartshorn.

God Save the King—Band and Orchestra.

The committee in charge of the concert were Messrs. J. J. Hanrahan, A. McLaren, J. Bell, H. Turner, T. Pacey, W. Wheeler, J. O'Brien.

Of the various numbers the Salvation Army Band selections were well played, and its Conductor, Mr. Will Forde delighted the audience with his cornet solo. The Parkins Trio scored a hit and Gazley's Orchestra deserves special commendation. Mr. Gazley has gathered about him a fairly strong organization, which, with encouragement and assistance, could easily find a place in local musical affairs. He is an employee of the C. G. E. Co. and probably might be able to establish an orchestra representative of the shops. As a leader he gives evidence of experience and a marked musical temperament. The Orchestra played a selection of his composition, a clever arrangement of passages from patriotic airs.

"THE BRAT"

A Very Strong Cast Coming to the Grand

When the United Producing Co. Ltd., last season produced "Peg o' My Heart" and "Charley's Aunt," it was the intention of the responsible parties behind the organisation to use these two well-known plays as a means of showing the public that a Canadian producing company could "deliver the goods." In every town visited excellent business was the result; in some cases house records were broken. With the success of this initial venture, The United Producing Company went direct to New York and were able to show to the big producers there that they were well capable financially and otherwise to handle Canadian rights for successful plays handed over to them. Arrangements were made a few days ago with Oliver Morosco for a coast to coast tour on Canada of his latest comedy success, "The Brat." Not only did they secure the Canadian rights for this legitimate successor to "Peg o' My Heart," but they secured permission to immediately place the production on the road. "The Brat" has not played anywhere outside of New York and Philadelphia, from which place it leaves for an indefinite run in Chicago.

The entire production and cast comes direct from New York. The scenery was designed and painted by Mr. Seymour Parker at Daly's Theatre, New York, and the whole production staged and directed under the personal supervision of Mr. A. J. Edwards, for many years in charge of the productions of Charles Frohman.

The cast, which includes Miss Rea Martin, Morosco's own star, Miss Leonora Gnito, for many seasons featured in Broadway productions Edna M. Holland (talented daughter of America's famous character actor E. M. Holland), Arthur Pacie-Ripple late star in Klaw and Erlanger's production of "Polly-Anna," Burt L Robinson, leading man with Margaret Wycherely in "The Fight," and who left a big engagement as leading man with Julia Dean in "Marie Rose," and Arthur La Rue, who previous to two seasons in Winnipeg stock, was in Daniel Frohman's production of "The Thief."

"The Brat" will be presented at the Grand Opera House on Wednesday next, 28th November, by this exceptionally strong New York cast.

The seat sale opens on Monday.

22 BELOW ZERO AT WHITE RIVER

Canadian Press Despatch:

TORONTO, Nov. 24.—Except in the Maritime Provinces, consistently cold weather prevails to-day, and will likely continue to-morrow in all parts of Canada. White River, Ontario, maintains its reputation as being the coldest civilized spot in America by recording a temperature of 22 below zero during the night.

INTERESTING REPORT ON DAIRY CONDITIONS

Mr. R. W. Ward Deals With Subject at District Dairy Meeting at Westwood — Mr. Gillespie is Honoured.

INSTRUCTIVE ADDRESSES

The district dairy meeting was held at Westwood on Wednesday, 21st November.

Mr. George A. Gillespie, who occupied the chair, was elected to represent this district again on the Board of Directors of the Eastern Ontario Dairymen's Association, without a dissenting voice.

Very able and instructive addresses by Mr. G. G. Publow, Chief Dairy Instructor, and Mr. Rothwell, of the Dom. Dep. of Agriculture, Ottawa, were given.

Mr. R. W. Ward, of Peterborough Dairy Instructor and Sanitary Inspector, presented the following report:

Genlemen:

With your pleasure I will now give a report of conditions, requirements, and work done this season.

On my first visit I found the conditions in and about the factories mostly in very good shape. There were a few exceptions, but they were improved, and conditions generally were maintained in very good shape throughout the season.

The condition of the milk supply, I am pleased to be able to state, shows a gradual improvement from year to year.

"There are a few milk cans that require to be replaced by new ones."

Patrons mostly seem to be taking more interest in the business and better care of the milk, and this is as it should be when we consider the amount of educational work that has been done for years along these lines and the time has no doubt arrived when every factory has the right to say by resolution that all milk shall be delivered in prime condition, and not above a certain temperature. This is the only thing that can be done to protect our best patrons, as this business, dairying, is a co-operative one.

In co-operation we have strength, but it must be co-operation in the fullest sense of the word to be just to all.

Milk mostly is delivered to the factories at too late an hour. This is one of the serious drawbacks in your sections, and militates against you getting the best results from your milk, both in quantity and in quality. I strongly advise that this be given the consideration that it deserves, and that improvement be made in this respect.

Labour Is Scarce.

Makers mostly are making an honest effort to give right service, but are seriously handicapped on account of labour being scarce and high in price, also the high and uncertain prices of all the supplies for cheesemaking. There seems to be a disposition on the part of makers to furnish only their own labour and time, and let the producers provide everything else, and under existing conditions I am inclined to the opinion that it would be the better way, as the temptation is very strong, and almost compulsory in some cases, to stint on the quantity and quality of the supplies used, to the great loss of quantity and quality of cheese produced.

Take, for instance, coagulante. There should be enough used to get a firm, perfect coagulation in 25 to 30 minutes, with a normal or right amount of acidity developed in the milk. In a great many cases this is not being done, but on the contrary too much acidity is being used, or too little coagulant being used, or a little of both being done, which causes serious loss to the producers both in quantity and quality of their cheese. This season has been very favourable to the producers from a monetary point of view. We thought last year a high record in prices, but this year's average price will exceed last by fully .02 1-4 cents per lb. of cheese, and there seems no doubt in the minds of the best informed that we will have good prices for all the dairy products that can be produced in this country for years to come. The past season has certainly been a good one in your sections, and I believe has been general all over this country, good crops of all kinds, and good prices. The weather also has mostly been very favourable for production and care of milk, and having it reach the factories in very good condition with the exception of some two or three weeks in the last of July and the fore part of August, and very dry in the latter part and through the month of September. Just enough change to keep us in remembrance of the importance and need of having cool curing rooms at the factories, a store of ice and ensilage or soiling crops on the farms.

The worst sanitary conditions I had to contend with was about the whey tanks, caused by tanks leaking, but mostly by them overflowing. This should not be, as whey is a valuable bi-product for feed, when hogs are selling from 15 to 20 dollars per cwt live weight. I had to make complaint at 18 factories re bad sanitary conditions produced from this cause. You will please see that the whey is removed, and not let it go on the ground under or about the factories.

There are about six factories that require a good deal of repairs and improvements, but all require careful cleaning and a liberal use of lime or paint. See that this is all done before opening date next spring.

I had under my charge this season 37 cheese factories; 13 paid for their milk by butter fat test, and 24 by the pooling system. Two have been burned, Trewern in the fore part of the season by a boiler explosion and fire, and Lakefield burned near the close of the season, and the very sad part of these accidents was the fact that Mr. Chittick, the owner and maker of Trewern, lost his life. I had visited Mr. Chittick for 18 years as instructor, and my relations with him were very satisfactory—a good cheesemaker, and I always found him honest and fair.

In closing I will, with all my power of persuasion, urge upon every one to begin now to prepare for next season's work, and let us all, by every means in our power, try to make it the best and greatest year of dairying in the history of the business in this country. Let us feel that it is a patriotic duty as well as in our own interest.

I will thank every one who has assisted me in my work, and hope and trust all will take and accept my criticisms that I have made in the same spirit in which it has been given, namely, for the improvement of the dairying industry.

MR. G. H. LOGIE LEAVING CITY

Is Being Transferred to the Edmonton Branch of the Bank of Nova Scotia

His many friends in Peterborough will be sorry to learn that Mr. G. H. Logie, manager of the local branch of the Bank of Nova Scotia, is being transferred to the bank's Edmonton branch. He leaves for the West around the 2nd of December. Since coming to Peterborough Mr. Logie has been a most useful citizen, and has been prominent in many lines of activities. He has done good work as chairman of the Peterborough Royal Flying Corps Committee, and in connection with the Soldiers' Aid Commission, and will be missed in many circles.

MIZPAH'S SITE STORMED BY THE BRITISH TROOPS

Canadian Press Despatch:

LONDON, Nov. 24.—The site of ancient Mizpah, 5,000 yards west of the Jerusalem Nabulus road, has been stormed by the British, the War Office announces. British mounted troops, which had advanced northward, were forced back by the Turks. The mounted troops had approached Beit Unia and after being driven back, took up a position at Beit Ureifeka, 12 miles north-west of Jerusalem. The statement also says the enemy has bombarded the traditional tomb of the prophet Samuel.

IF YOU WANT EVIDENCE

THAT HEMORRHOIDS OR PILES CAN BE COMPLETELY CURED READ THESE LETTERS—BOTH ARE SWORN STATEMENTS.

TORONTO, ONT., November 24.—Next to personal experience the sworn statements of reliable people is the strongest evidence obtainable. If you have any doubt that Dr. Chase's Ointment will positively and completely cure piles, these letters should convince you.

Mr. Samuel Parker, fruit grower, Grimsby, Ont., has made the following declaration before Mr. W. W. Kidd, Notary Public, of the same place: "I do solemnly declare that I was troubled with bleeding piles and was advised to go to the hospital and have an operation performed. My wife said "No; get a box of Dr. Chase's Ointment." I did so and have used it according to directions while living in Manitoba, and obtained a complete cure, for I have never been troubled with piles since. I am now seventy years of age, and want to recommend Dr. Chase's Ointment to all sufferers from piles. My wife has used it for itching skin and obtained complete cure."

Mr. Donald M. Campbell, Campbell's Mountain, N.S., writes "I have used Dr. Chase's Ointment with great success for hemorrhoids or piles of 15 years standing. After trying all kinds of so-called pile cures, three boxes of Dr. Chase's Ointment gave me a complete cure. I have also used Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, and there are no others so good. You may use this letter, if you wish, for the benefit of others you may suffer as I did."

Sworn before me, Murdoch Gordon Campbell, J. P., in the County and for Inverness County.

If you would like to try Dr. Chase's Ointment at our expense, send a two cent stamp to pay postage and we shall mail you a sample box free. Full size box 60 cents, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

BIGGEST SURPRISE OF HIS LIFE HE SAYS

Williamson Overcomes Troubles of Five Years Stadning by Taking Tanlac

"I have never been so surprised over anything as I have over the results of Tanlac in my case," said William Williamson, a well known mason living at 1115 St. Clarens ave., Toronto, recently.

"My kidneys have been bothering me for four or five years" he continued, "but during the past year other ailments set in and kept me feeling miserable nearly all the time. I had terrible pains across my back, especially when I stooped over or tried to lift anything; then rheumatism settled in my right leg and at times I simply suffered torture from it. The pain was so sharp and cutting at times I would almost drop in my tracks. My appetite went square back on me and nothing that I would eat tasted right. I was very nervous—could hardly sleep—and I would just roll from one side of the bed to the other, and many a night I have not closed my eyes for sleep at all. I just had that dejected, worn-out feeling, had no energy, and did not care for anything.

"One day a friend of mine said:—"Why don't you try Tanlac? I have taken it and it surely did do me good." So with that I began taking Tanlac, and improving every day. I have now taken four bottles, the rheumatism never troubles me at all and my kidneys are in fine shape. My appetite is fine and everything I eat tastes good and agrees with me. My nerves are strong and steady now. I sleep like a log, and all my tired, depressed feelings are gone. I now have my old time strength and energy and feel like myself again. Tanlac has certainly been a great thing for me and I can't praise it too highly."

FORMER ASHBURNHAM BOY NEARLY KILLED BY A BANK ROBBER

CONDITION SERIOUS

VANCOUVER, Nov. 22.—Howard Bennett, manager of the Dow Fraser private bank of Burnaby, was knocked senseless this morning by a thug who escaped with cash to the amount of about $1,500. Bennett, who was alone in the bank, was found hanging over the counter with his skull fractured and his jawbone broken. He was rushed to a hospital, where it is said his chances for recovery are not very good.

Mr. Bennett was an old Ashburnham boy, living for a number of years on Mark Street, near the Lake. His wife was Miss Eva Cochrane, sister of Mrs. L. G. Dobbin, City, and they have been in the West for some time.

County Council Completed Session This Morning

The November sessions of the County Council came to a close this morning. The morning session was marked by an attempt on the part of Councillor H. B. Rye to extract certain information from the members of the Council responsible for a contra report on a couple of bridges in North Monaghan. Last year it was reported that the two bridges in question were unsafe for traffic, and at the session just closed it was reported that the two bridges were all right and not in need of repairs, in spite of the fact that no work has been done on them. Councillor Rye said he was dissatisfied with the manner in which the report had been prepared, and was not satisfied with the explanation offered.

GREATEST RULE OF HEALTH

With all their differences in regard to disease, its cause and treatment, doctors are of one mind in regard to the one greatest rule of health, viz: "Daily movement of the Bowels." Unnumbered thousands of people suffer almost continuously as the result of constipation who could be readily cured by Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

"GENEVA" HAD TO BREAK CHANNEL IN RICE LAKE

..Chemong and Rice Lakes froze over last night under the severe early frost that also covered up Little Lake. The steamer "Geneva" broke a channel across Rice Lake and had smooth sailing up the river until it entered Little Lake, where it encountered new difficulties. As an ice-breaker "Cap" Harris can surely qualify for the Russian service out of Archangel. He reached the George street wharf securely and faced the return trip under more favourable conditions. The Lift Lock has been long since tucked away for its hibernation, and navigation is apparently retiring before the advance of winter. Buy Victory Bonds.

(Canadian Press Despatch).

TORONTO, Nov. 24.—The total amount subscribed for the Victory Loan in all Canada, as reported to Dominion headquarters up to ten o'clock this morning, amounts to 177 millions, of which Ontario has contributed 93¼ millions. The officials state that a 150 millions total for Ontario seems assureed.

ENDORSEMENT OF LABOUR CANDIDATE CAUSES TROUBLE

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

OTTAWA, Nov. 24.—Some trouble is being experienced here in connection with the question of Labour endorsations for the purposes of the Military Voters' Act. A candidate to secure the Labour vote among the soldiers must have been endorsed by the "recognized leader of the Labour party." Some half dozen men have already represented themselves to the government as being the leader of Labour and have claimed the right of endorsing Labour candidates. As a consequence the Clerk of the Crown in Chancery is unable to fix up on any one as the real leader. It is pointed out, however, that one man in any one district may claim the right of endorsing the Labour candidate, as a Labour leader. Otherwise Labour would have to settle upon one man in the Dominion as its leader for purposes of endorsation. The Great War Veterans' Association has not undertaken the endorsation of candidates in a general way.

New Hymn Book To Be Introduced

Sunday Services at George Street Methodist Church

At both services to-morrow in the George Street Methodist Church the new Methodist Hymn Book will be used. During the balance of the year, the numbers of the hymns in both the old and the new books will be given out. After Jan. 1, 1918, the new books will be used exclusively.

At the morning service, the pastor, Mr. Thomas, will speak on "Hymnology, Past and Present," and the choir will make use of one of the new hymns in place of the usual anthem. In the evening Mr. Thomas will speak on "Righteousness," the second of a series of sermons on the "Triangular Life." There will be a short song service at the beginning of the service. Last Sunday evening the church was filled almost to its capacity, and it is hoped that to-morrow the services will be equally well attended.

MILITARY NEWS

KINGSTON, Nov. 23.—It is announced to-day that Captain A. L. Ogilvie, of the 43rd Regiment, has been appointed assistant provost marshal, third military district, in succession of Captain J. J. Graham, who has held the post for over a year. Lieut. A. A. Brittain, 57th Regiment, has been appointed deputy assistant provost marshal with headquarters at Ottawa.

Lieut. Brittain, formerly of Peterborough, has been for some months adjutant of the Special Service Company, and has given entire satisfaction. He served overseas with the Princess Pats. Both these officers will assume their new duties on December 1st.

A Procession Of The Repatriated Follows Victory

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

(By William Philip Simms.)

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES IN FRANCE, Nov. 24.—The glory that was of the resurrection was in the eyes of a pitiful procession that tramped the by-ways of war out of Marcoing today.

The column was what remained of France's peasants, little storekeepers, village officials—plain people—after war's waves had receded. It was a procession of the repatriated — those miraculously restored to the soil of their beloved France and free from Prussian slavery. The United Press correspondent was the first civilian to enter Marcoing from the Allied side for close on to four years.

A LONG PROCESSION.

I met the procession just outside—its vanguard starting last night. It passed hour by hour. It constituted all the remaining civilians of Cantaing. They glanced at my correspondent's uniform, thought I was a British officer— and every man, woman and child gave some expression of gratitude that was in their hearts to their deliverers. Already on the road fourteen hours, covered with mud from head to foot, bereft of all save what they carried or dragged, the procession was at once a column of misery and joy. Women pushed baby carriages filled with babies and packages. Old men and boys trundled makeshift push carts bearing all their earthly possessions. Ont grandfather strained to roll along a vehicle, the wheels of which had once done service on a German aeroplane. Young girls bent under loads of heavy sacks on their tired backs.

Here and there a British Tommy—one of countless thousands who had perhaps marched miles and waited hours with his 65 pounds of equipment strapped on— staggered along, submerged under bundles and sacks he was carrying for the infirm, the aged or the worn-out.

AMBULANCE FILLED.

One Philadelphia boy, driving an ambulance, filled his car with boxes and bundles and perched feeble old men and women on them. Many of the miserable company, their their tired eyes gleaming feverishly, told me they would rather be homeless, no roof above them, rain soaked, bound they knew not whither—as they were that night—than to continue in comparative comfort of the days before the resurrection, living among those who raped the nation.

It was not all drab, however. Even the most exhausted, with indomitable energy that is inherent in the French peasants, and with tired out nerves, newly strong with joy and gratitude, chatted volubly.

A GLEEFUL OLD LADY.

An old lady, perched on a two-wheeled commissary cart, trundled along by willing Tommies, kept nodding and smiling as though being homeless in the winter time, with great guns thundering about, was a wedding day festival.

She shouted gleefully in her queer provincial French, "The English will be in Cambrai to-morrow."

Tommies bound for the front, lined up in column opposite her, laughing responded with incongruous emphasis, "Wee, wee" and the little old lady laughed and nodded her way onward.

I talked with one mud-coated couple trundling a ten months old baby. The child was pulling away at a bottlee. It was a German beer bottle and it was filled, they told me, with condensed milk. A precious rubber nipple was tied on the top. "The Germans were scared when tanks approached Cantang," the couple said in chorus. "That was Wednesday morning. We had a sergeant and three other gentlemen soldiers billeted with us."

TRIBUNAL No. 275

COURT HOUSE

Judge Huycke, Police Magistrate Dumble, Members Lt.-Col. E. B. Clegg, Military Representative

Private hearings have been few and far between, so far as the Peterborough Tribunals are concerned. This morning, at Tribunal No. 275, in the Judge's chambers, part of one case was heard in camera at the special request of the applicant.

Judge Huycke, in granting the request in this particular case, made a verbal reference to the law governing such cases, and at the same time strongly intimated that it was not the intention of the Tribunal to grant private hearings, only in justifiable cases. "The hearings are open to the public, and so far as this Tribunal is concerned, will be kept open," said Judge Huycke. "It remains for the Press to use discretion in reporting cases where personal matters are made public. The Chief Press Censor for Canada has furnished the newspapers with explicit instructions for the guidance of the Press representatives in attendance at Tribunals, and so far there is no evidence that the regulations laid down have been violated." In commenting on the matter this morning, Judge Huycke said that one object of making the hearings public was to offset any suspicion that might exist in the public mind as to any influence that might be brought to bear on any particular case.

Exemption Granted.

Percy Harold Dunford, an A2 man who asked for exemption on financial and domestic grounds, asked for a private hearing for a portion of his case. This was granted. Applicant has one brother, and does not know whether he is dead or alive. Dunford, as a journeyman, earns fifty cents an hour, and helps to support the family. He was exempted.

Family Hard Hit.

"How old are you, Mr.O'Toole?" inquired Mr. D. W. Dumble of Mr. M. O'Toole, Sr., who was present in the interests of his son, J. V. O'Toole a driver for a local express company. O'Toole, who resides at 114 Hunter Street, had two brothers at the Front. One died of wounds and the second one is still in the service. A third brother was drowned some time ago. Mr. O'Toole, Sr., said he was fifty-six years of age.

"Are you sound in mind and limb?" asked Mr. Dumble.

"Not as good as I used to be," replied O'Toole.

The applicant was exempted until Class II. is called.

"You have done your share," observed Judge Huycke, as he told Mr. O'Toole to sit down while he made out the necessary forms.

Was Exempted.

Alexander Downey, Hunter Street, claimed to be the sole support of his parents. Applicant has had one brother killed at the Front and a spanked brother resides at home. The father is about sixty years of age, and has gone to the shanties for the winter, where he will be employed until spring.

"The call for soldiers is urgent," observed Mr. Dumble.

The applicant was exempted until as she attempted to explain her desire to keep the applicant at home.

"It is the Government's desire to equalise this matter and not make one family suffer too much," said Judge Huycke.

Downey was exempted until Class II. is called.

Farmers Exempted.

Walter Moncrief, a farmer residing in Monaghan, said that the burden of working a large farm in Monaghan fell on him and his brother. A third brother, fourteen years of age, goes to school.

Applicant was exempted until he ceases to be a farmer.

J. Cadigan, of Ennismore, appeared before the Tribunal, together with his employer, Daniel Cavanagh. The two men work a two-hundred-acre farm. Cadigan has one brother in the West and another brother on a one-hundred-acre farm in Ennismore.

The aplpicant was exempted until he ceases to be employed as a farmer.

"We are allowing this for the sake of the country," said Judge Huycke.

E MEN EXEMPTED.

Newton Staples, a farmer; William Hughes, 514 Aylmer St.; and Daniel ughes, 514 Aylmer Street; and Daniel Costello, 476 Aylmer Street, all E men, were exempted until Class E s called.

Wallace G. Harris, 294 Wolfe Street, and Walter Baptie, 625 Water Street, both B men, were exempted until B Claes men are required.

William Fairley, 480 Bolivar street, a "C" man, was exempted until "C" men are called out.

David F. Crowley, a farmer, was exempted until he ceases to be employed as a farmer, also Charles C. Nelson, another farmer.

Herbert J. Rush, 359 Stewart street, an employee of the local Customs House, was exempted as a discharged soldier.

Arthur Nelson, 438 George street, an electrician, was exempted until the first day of March next.

A. W. Nelson, 364 Smith Street, was exempted until Class Two is called.

G. A. Brenton, a plumber, and an "A2" man, was granted temporary exemption.

THE WEATHER

There was an unmistakable feeling of winter in the air to-day. Lowest temperature last night, 12 degrees; (the lowest to date). All day the mercury has hovered around 15 degrees. Figures considerably below zero prevailed last night in the north and west, and it will be much colder here to-night.—W. P.

To the Electors of East Peterboro

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN:—

I believe no greater disaster could, at the present time, befall our country than the defeat of the Borden Union Administration at the polls on December 17th.

The Policy of this Administration is the speedy and continuous reinforcements of our Canadian troops on the battle-front; and the putting forth of all our National strength for the cause of civilization and freedom.

To carry out this Policy, a number of Canada's ablest Public men of vision—sinking for the present—all political differences now stand together—strong to battle for the right—united to WIN the WAR.

For over three years thousands of Loyal Canadians of many creeds and of different Nationalities, have stood shoulder to shoulder on the Battlefields of Europe, gallantly fighting a common foe, and sometimes standing; sometimes falling, have won for the name of Canada undying fame. Shall we, with all possible speed, send help to these, our heroic defenders now holding the battle-line or shall we, break faith with them as well as "with those who die"—delay—vote—while the enemy advances?

As a Union Candidate in this Riding, I am putting forth every effort to win East Peterborough to the support of the Borden Union Administration and if elected shall to the utmost of my ability support the same.

To this end I now earnestly solicit the co-operation and influence of every loyal, patriotic man and woman in East Peterborough.

I have the honor to be, faithfully yours,

NORTH MONAGHAN WANTS LIGHT SYSTEM EXTENDED

The North Monaghan Council met on Monday, Nov. 19th, at the Court-House, Peterborough. Reeve Rye, Deputy Reeve Bell, Councillors Williams and Dobbin being present.

The minutes of the last four meetings were read, accepted and confirmed.

The following communications were then read:

Price-list of vitrified sewer pipe for culvert purposes from the Hamilton-Toronto Sewer Pipe Company.

Peck, Kerr and McElderry, enclosing account of Lockie vs. North Monaghan for $625.

V. P. Lewis, re claims for taxes, 1913, against lot owned by him in North Monaghan.

National Sanitorium Association, asking for a grant.

On motion of Messrs. Dobbin and Bell, the above communications were received and filed.

Mr. Lewis' communication was referred to Mr. McIntosh.

Grand Trunk Railway Co. re Lansdowne Street crossing.

J. E. Bates, asking that Crescent Avenue, in front of his place, be opened up.

These were also received and filed.

T. Hurley, asking that the Council press the matter of having an outlet for Business Street.

Hydro-Electric Power Commission, asking for permission to lay a gas main on Brown Street, 75 feet west from Monaghan Road.

Moved by Mr. Bell, seconded by Mr. Williams, that the clerk write to T. Hurley and say that if the property-owners come to a settlement, that the township will do its part, that is, assist by opening up the street.

Also, that the request of the Gas Department of the Hydro-Electric be granted to lay a main on Brown St. Carried.

Reeve Rye said that a number of people in North Monaghan desired to have an electric light. The Utilities Commission will not proceed to extend their lines in North Monaghan until the Council passes a by-law, making a charge against the property for those who do not pay their electric light bills.

Moved by Mr. Dobbin, seconded by Mr. Williams, that the clerk write the Utilities Commission and ask them if they will extend their electric light lines in North Monaghan, provided the Council passes the necessary by-law, making the property liable for unpaid rates.

The following bills were passed and ordered to be paid:

Fred T. Mahood, contract for concrete arch bridge and railing, corner of Park and McKellar Streets, $200.00.

W. J. Byers, re Mrs. J. Bowen, $2.50.

H. P. Taylor, steam coal, $13.95.
Peterborough Examiner, $3.75.
Thos. A. Rehill, use of carts, $3.00.
Municipal World, supplies, $1.00.

By-law No. 749 was introduced, regularly read and finally passed, appointing Norman Moncrief as tax collector for 1917.

Moved by Mr. Dobbin, seconded by Mr. Bell, that the next regular meeting be held at the Court-House, Peterborough, on Saturday, Dec. 15th, at 2 o'clock p.m.

WITH CELLULOID COLLAR YOU CAN LOOK POTATO IN THE EYE

It no longer is considered good form to point the digit of scorn or throw lighted matches at a gentleman who wears a highly inflammable celluloid collar. Nothing but a world war could supply an alibi for this economical Adonis, but nowadays the wearers of the stiff and glistening strangers rank with the food conservers and the Victory Loan buyers in the matter of patriotic endesvour.

Of late, or recently to be more explicit, some person with a mania for details has discovered that millions of pounds of potatoes are used annually in the United States in the manufacture of starch. Not content with this discover- he sought additional details and ascertained that about a third of all the starch coined, spun or manufactured goes eventually to the neck of the country. The stiff collars of the nation are responsible for a great percentage of the potato shortage. Obviously any one who wears a starched collar is contributing to the misery of the poor, the profits of the food bandit, gloom of the nations and the waste of America.

On the extreme other hand is the modest and highly inflammable patriot who wears the same collar half a lifetime, cleans it with a sponge whenever no one is looking and does his bit by violating the fire laws and the law of self-preservation. Well he knows that by merely becoming hot under the collar he may be blown into eternity, but in the main these heroes of haberdashery feel compensated by their ability to look the whole world and the potatoes therein directly in the eye.

In the time of Queen Elizabeth men and women wore great linen ruffs about their necks—from which we get the word ruff-neck—but those who were sneaky enough to find out made it clear that the laundry bill at court was enough to spurlos versenkt the exceedingly royal exchequer. This may account for the fact that Queen Elizabeth frequently wore a sweater.

Howsomever, nevertheless and notwithstanding, to, say nothing of despite this, the wife of a blacksmith in Troy N.Y., invented the first detachable uncomfortable and non-conforming collar in 1825. She tried it on her husband and the following day he became playful and broke the anvil. Undiscouraged, his wife made several other collars which she fitted to the fashionable gullets of Troy (N.J.) and in time she had a small factory. The city of Troy never recovered from the industry, and the pictures of young men wearing Troy collars which now appear in the subway are the direct result of non-union efforts of a blacksmith's wife.

This fact alone, it is expected, will greatly increase the sale of the pyrotechnical collars which the more courageous of the patriots are now suffering from.

MARK STREET ANNIVERSARY

Mark Street Methodist Church is to be congratulated on securing for their anniversary services, Sunday and Monday, December 2nd and 3rd, Rev. T. H. Mitchell, .A., of Old St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church Toronto. His many friends in Peterborough, who recall his ministry in St. Andrew's church of this city, will be pleased to hear him again.

On Monday evening Dec. 3rd, Mr. Mitchell will deliver an address on "Laughter and Its Significance." The honour roll will be unveiled and the best artists in the city will assist with vocal and instrumental music and readings.

PLOTTING WHEAT FAMINE.

Germans Are Systematically Destroying Supply, Says Official.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 22.—Wheat fields, grain warehouses, and flour mills in the United States are being systematically burned by German agents, according to a statement made to-day by Erwin F. Smith, of the Department of Agriculture, before the National Academy of Science at the University of Pennsylvania.

Mr. Smith's paper was an analysis of conditions tending to create something like a wheat famine now and after the war.

Every gun fired in Europe, he said, burns up a definite quantity of the comparatively rare fixed nitrogen required as the basic fertiliser for grain.

Mr. Smith also advocated drafting for harvest work all men not found acceptable for the army. "Following the world war, there will be world shortage of wheat for many years. As regards the present, we know we must help to feed Britain, Belgium, France and Italy," he said.

peace," but it is felt here that if timely steps are taken to show Russia that she is putting her head into a noose by dropping out of the fight now, she will quit talking peace, stop her armistice proposals and get back into harness.

That there will be no acceptance of an armistice proposal by the Allies is positive. The reported reduction of the Russian fighting forces was discouraging to officials here, though it is doubtful Germany can take especial advantage of this now, with winter closing in and her troops so busily engaged on the Italian and Western fronts.

Red Cross Needs More Workers

In view of the increasing demand for supplies an earnest appeal is made by the Red Cross Society to the women of Peterborough for more workers and for more hand knitters.

The workroom in the Public Library is open every Wednesday afternoon when supplies of all kinds are being made.

At that time, also, Miss Burnett, the Convener of the Hand Knitting Committee, is always on hand to distribute wool to those desirous of knitting for the Red Cross.

Four Liquor Cases Yielded $718.60 In Fines Paid Into The Police Court Yesterday

Fines aggregating $718.60 for infractions of the Ontario Temperance Act were collected through the police court. Of that handsome sum, $410 was contributed by three men who visited the Sophia street dance on Thursday night. One of them paid $10 for merely being drunk when he bombarded a Mark street house under a drunken conviction that he was storming his own home on Charlotte street. Another of the revellers had taken his whiskey with him, which cost him $20 for having liquor in a place other than his own residence. Those were Friday morning records at the police court, but the night session before Magistrate Dumble was even more remunerative for the Ontario License Board and the province as a whole. One man who had also attended the Sophia street "shine" was gathered in by the police during the day and fined $200 for taking liquor to the festivities. Thus the dance depleted somebody's roll to the extent of $410. The fancy balls of the New York plutocrats can't produce many costlier affairs' than this social event in Ashburnham.

Another and separate case was that of a merchant who pleaded guilty to keeping liquor for sale and was fined $300 and $8.60 costs. When John Barleycorn asserts himself these days he exacts a heavy toll from those who remost of it. Go into the woods and smell the wonderful brown leaves. Kick through this dry, rustling carpet, and throw yourself on a pile of them. Pick up the chestnuts while the squirrels scold, and try to drive you away. Remembering the butternuts we gathered last year, we come with bags. But the squirrels laugh at us from their holes half way up the trees. There are no butter nuts this year. Last year was the year. Nature never satiates.

Enjoy to the full these few golden days, for one of these nights will come a severe frost, and in the morning you will look out upon a blackened garden. Sadly you bid farewell to this afterglow of summer, this charming bit of the year which the wise ones tell us is only one of the many changes in weather which occure throughout the seasons. But call it what you will this little bit of June dropped into November stands out as one of the bright spots of the year.

KIRBY'S LETTER

For fourteen years Kirby had been a faithful worker in a pottery factory in England. In 1915 he was drafted to the colors. In 1916 he was sent to the trenches in France. For three months he lived like a rat in a hole. On May 20th, 1916, the word went through the trenches that at 11 o'clock that night his company would take their turn at fighting death.

All the evening the big British guns had been storming the German lines with terrific furor. Crack! Boom! Crash! A constant thunder! Bombs exploding every second! A rain of fire! Meanwhile Kirby wrote a note —his last he feared—to his wife and each of the four children. It was hard, yes very hard, but the other men were doing the same. Yes, thousands of men wrote their last note that very night!

Suddenly at 11 o'clock the big cannons stopped. For a minute it was quiet as death. Then at the sound of a pistol Kirby and his comrades sprung up their little ladders into the open space between the English and German trenches. There they threw their hand grenades. But only German corpses were in that trench. They had all been killed by the big shells.

Forward, still forward, they kept running breathlessly up to the second line of trenches. Here a terrible hand-to-hand fight took place with a few remaining Germans. These Germans and half of the English were chopped up in this fight. Kirby still lived. On, he and his remaining comrades pushed to the third line of German trenches. They simply ran blindly. They were drunk with the joy of getting back for France a few more yards of her soil.

When the third line of enemy trenches was reached, it was a different story. Here German reinforcements had been gathered. Kirby drew his revolver and fired it at the first German he saw. The next moment Kirby himself fell to the ground stunned. When he came to, he found himself on two corpses soaking in blood. He raised his head to look about. Whizz, went a bullet within an inch of his ear. Four other bullets struck the ground all about him.

It was now about six the next morning. Kirby could not advance to the German trenches; nor retreat to his own in the rear. For eight hours there he lay in the hot sun, a wounded man on top of two corpses —one an Englishman and one a German. Suddenly, just before dusk that day, he spied a big hole in the ground which had been made by a great shell the night before. Inch by inch he dragged his weary body toward this hole. Only one more pull and he peeped over the edge. Inside were a dozen of his wounded comrades and all but four were still alive.

There Kirby and his brothers lay all day while the fire from both sides again blazed over their heads. One 75cm. shell exploded over them. The mere impact threw a dead soldier on top of Kirby. A piece of another shell cut off the foot of a sergeant at Kirby's side. All of them were hurt in some way by this bombardment. Around them the wounded were mourning. Some even had the death rattle. Their hope grew dim. How long must they stop in that hole? Better die in an effort to get back, they agreed, than die there from starvation. They had not had a thing to eat for over twenty-four terrible exhausting hours.

It was again dark. Only a rocket now and then would light up the sky. Suddenly Kirby said: "Boys, I'm not going to die here like a dog. I'm going to crawl to our lines and tell them where you are. They then can dig a trench out to you and bring you alal in." It seemed like suicide for Kirby to do this. His wound prevented him crawling on his belly. He had to lie on his back and work forward by pushing his heels into the ground. Slowly he worked his way along over the dead bodies which strewed the ground. He was faint and was suffering great pain. But at last he reached his goal.

Within two minutes after telling his story, the shovels were at work and the dirt was flying. The English trench diggers were racing with the sun to rescue the remaining men. Undawn, the whole game would be up, as the new trench would show the Germans that some men were hiding in the hole. But the trench diggers won. Through the muddy trench were pulled the bodies of the other eight living men, the eight happiest men in France.

For a month Kirby lay in the hospital fighting death. Finally he was well enough to write two letters. One of these letters was to his family, telling them that he still lived. The other was to an old friend, too old to enlist, but at work in a shipyard near Liverpool. Let me quote this second letter of Kirby's:

"Jack, it breaks my heart to see in the papers that you and your comrades are now wasting time to scrap about wages, hours, and such child-play. I didn't blame you before the war. I was then a labour union man myself. I will not blame you for doing so after the war. If I live we'll then be union men together. But for God's sake, Jack, forget such things now. Remember that we fellows are suffering, starving, and dying over here, largely for want of more ships.

"Why, Jack, if I could only change places with you, I would work all day and all night, and be happy to live on bread and water. Jack, the very worst conditions which you ever saw are Heaven to what us boys over here are going through. What's money or hours or anything else compared with getting ships built to save us from Hell. I say, Jack, for God's sake do more for us!

"I hear you don't believe in war, Jack. Well, I guess none of us fellows like war much better than you do. But let me tell you that the only way to make this the last war is to give us your very best now. Please, please help us. And say, Jack, please post this letter where the other boys will see it. Can't write any more. I'm too weak. Good-bye."

Reader, to-day this applies to us as it applied to the English workers a year ago. How shall we answer it?

SAY THERE IS NO SUCH THING AS INDIAN SUMMER

How often one hears people say of a few days of fine autumn weather: "I wonder whether this is Indian Summer" To which an answer may be given: "No, it can't be, because we haven't yet had Squaw Winter." Or perhaps "Yes, I'm sure it is, for we had a snow flurry last week." It may come as rather a shock and a disappointment to know that according to the latest verdict of the meteorologists there is no such thing as Indian Summer. To bring about this deplorable condition there has been no grand upheaval of Nature. We probably would go on in blissful ignorance revelling in this same Indian Summer, were we not told by the scientists that Indian Summer is a myth—merely a convention.

What is Indian Summer? Strictly speaking it is only a case of what is happening the year around; the incessant alternation of a warm spell with a cold, of a wet with a dry. According to the season of the year the warm wave or the cold makes the most impression upon us. Because we are gathering ourselves together, dreading the advent of a long, cold winter, do we particularly notice the warm spells of October and November, and say: "Oh this is Indian Summer."

The idea so firmly rooted in the popular mind that each autumn we have one period of unseasonable cold, followed by one season of mild, sunny weather, finds no confirmation in the prosaic minds of the meteorologists.

Nevertheless, with all due respect to science, I imagine we should go on just the same enjoying this most delightful of all seasons, and appreciate this particular change more than any other in the year. When you waken some morning after a spell of dull, cloudy weather to a day of warm luscious sunshine make the

SINN FEIN STUDENTS CELEBRATE.

After degrees had been conferred at University College, Dublin (the National University of Ireland), the students marched round the streets singing. At their head was a Sinn Fein flag, but only once was there any interference. The upper right picture shows the crowd all ready for the "scrap," which is common to all student gatherings; at the left are students fastening the Sinn Fein flag to a piece of wood before the procession had started; and in the circles are a few of the girl graduates. A number who are entering the learned professions received their degrees. But they did not "process."

Sessions Will Be Postponed

County Judges Will First Complete Work of Tribunals

As all the county judges are serving on exemption tribunals under the Militar- Service Act, the jurors summoned for the sessions, which are fixed by statute for Dec. 4th, have been notified not to report until Dec. 18. The court will be opened on Dec. 4, and then adjourned until the latter date, by which time it is thought that the work of the tribunals will be completed.

This will also apply to the Peterborough County Sessions, over which His Honour Judge Huycke will preside.

Hardware and Metal Markets

Price changes during the week have with few exceptions been in the upward direction and include advances in corrugated sheets, conductor pipe, eavetrough, valleys bridge rolls, elbows, insulating sheathing, wood alohol, pruners, bass stable brooms, canoes, fan belts, bicycle carbide. There was a slight readjustment downward, in some gauges of black and galvanized sheets from the higher levels that have recently prevailed. This is more by way of a settling movement towards levels that had previously been established rather than showing additional weakness in the market. Dealers are of the opinion that the market for black and galvanized sheets will hold around present levels for some time at least. Wholesalers have been asked by manufacturers of ammunition to make up their minds as to the amount that they will require for the coming year and to place their orders without delay. Manufacturers intimate that unless contracts are entered into now there will be no ammunition obtainable later on. Most of the manufacturers are busy on war orders and can work to capacity on this class of work without caring much about domestic needs. Wholesale bicyle accessory dealers are now engaged in revising prices for spring delivery. Business in hardware lines is reported good, with the movement of goods towards Northern points served by water now about finished.—"Hardware and Metal."

A Nice Fish Sauce

Which can be served with either Boiled or Baked Fish; also with "Cooked-over" Fish. Here's the recipe:

Ingredients, 1-2 cup of butter; yolks of two eggs; 1-4 teaspoonful of salt; juice of 1 lemon, few grains of cayenne, 1-2 cup of boiling water.

Method—Cream the butter, add the yolks of the eggs and beat thoroughly, add the salt, cayenne and the boiling water. Cook in a double boiler, stirring until the sauce thickens; remove from the fire and add the lemon juice. Guard against over-cooking.

AMERICAN TROOPS ARE REACHING FRENCH SOIL ON SCHEDULE TIME

Mr. Baker Announces Progress Is Up to War Department's Expectations —Silent as to Number of Men Over There—War Secretary, However, Indicates More Liberal Censorship Concerning Army Operations.

MOVEMENT OF FORCES

WASHINGTON, Nov. 26.—Arrival of American troops in France has kept pace with the expectation of the War Department, Secretary Baker said here in the first statement he ever has authorised in connection with the progress being made in increasing General Pershing's forces. Mr. Baker declined, however, to state the number of troops forwarded or indicate whether he anticipated delay from this time. Movement of the forces, he said, depended on two elements, the training and equipment of the men and the availablity of ships.

"As fast as they are ready ships and men will be combined," the Secretary said. "As many American troops are now overseas as we expected in the beginning to have overseas at this time."

Mr. Baker indicated that an official statement of the number of American troops in France was not to be expected at any time during the war. He caused an inquiry to be made of the military censor, Major General McIntyre however, which may result in more liberal regulations as to the publication of the designations of regiments, brigades and companies which are engaged in action on the front from time to time. If there is no sound military reason for suppression of that information, Mr. Baker said, he desired to give it out.

The Secretary's attention was called to the fact that the British official statements recently have named at least by geographical designation the troops used in various offensives. Apparently a new policy in this regard has been adopted in London and the War Department may do likewise.

British Troops Continue Advance In Cambrai Sector

Fierce Enemy Counter Attacks Have Been Repulsed

LONDON, Nov. 26.—British troops on the Cambrai front have captured Bourlon Village and practically the whole of Bourlon Wood, including all the high ground within it. Fierce counter-attacks were all repulsed, General Haig reported last night. The number of prisoners taken since the beginning of operations in the Cambrai sectors is nearly ten thousand, including 182 officers and more than one hundred guns.

French Capture First and Second Lines of Defense

Eight Hundred German Prisoners Captured—Enemy Attack Repulsed

PARIS, Nov. 26.—The French captured the first and second lines of defences in the Verdun region and took eight hundred prisoners.

An official statement says a severe attack north of Hill 344 was repulsed with heavy loss to the enemy.

In ten months ending Oct. 1, French aviators destroyed one hundred and twenty German aeroplanes over French lines, and three hundred and ninety-seven over German lines.

Rushing Aid To The Italians

Strong Enemy Attacks Repulsed by the Italian Forces

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

ITALIAN HEADQUARTERS, Nov. 26.—Great Britain is now rushing large forces of troops to the aid of the Italians. Strong enemy attacks along the whole front between the Brenta and Piave rivers were repulsed yesterday.

Have Stopped Supplies For Russia

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

STOCKHOLM, Nov. 26. — All goods for Russia have been stopped at Haparanda, Sweden, opposite Tornes, Finland, and are being returned to Narvik. Reports from Petrograd say the city is being terrorized by Lenine, Trotszky and Kamenoff bands.

TORTURING, ITCHING ECZEMA

Mrs. J. B. Horth, Pasnebiac, Bonaventure Co., Que., writes:—"Thanks to Dr Chase's Ointment I have been completely cured of that horrible disease eczema. I was held as if in prison from going among other people, for I was ashamed of the raw, flaming sores. Doctors could do nothing for me and I was almost desperate with suffering when I began to use Dr Chase's Ointment. In one month I was completely cured and think that this was little short of a miracle."

Disturbers Broke Up The Meeting

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

KITCHENER, Ont., Nov. 26. — A successful attempt by an organized crowd of several hundred persons, prevented Sir Robert Borden from speaking in Kitchener on Saturday evening. The disturbers held a parade through the streets. An indignation meeting was held Sunday afternoon with regard to the insults and interruptions offered Premier Borden on Saturday night.

ALL TREATED ALIKE.

Whitby Tribunal is not Exempting Farmers as a Class.

Whitby, Nov. 23. — One hundred and twenty-six cases have come before the Whitby exemption tribunal in the first ten days since the sittings opened. Forty-three men have been ordered into khaki, seven of whom have been ordered slight periods of exemption, varying from one month to three months. All the farmers or farm laborers coming in the class called up have applied for exemption. The tribunal here is handing out the same kind of treatment to the farmers as to the town boys—every man must go who is fit, unless the circumstances are unusually hard. The decisions here are in striking contrast to those being handed out by other tribunals in this county. It is the general opinion that there should be some method of equalizing matters, so that one section of the country will not suffer from depletion of farm workers more than another.

NEW SUGAR CROP READY FOR MARKET

The following comment on the market situation as regards food stuffs, appears in the Canadian Grocer this week:

One of the most interesting developments during the past week has been the report from Cuba to the effect that grinding of the new crop cane has already started in one district. This is exceptionally early, as it was anticipated operations would not start until about the second week in December. This move is heralded with delight in the sugar circles, as it seems to indicate a general resumption of production of raw sugar much earlier than usual. With new sugars available in the near future a welcome relief will come to the present situation in which stocks are very light. The situation with respect to lima beans has been cleared up, as further advices from the Food Controller state that beans already purchased can be brought forward. Rice is in firm market, with higher prices

CORN CROP.

Reports from the United States indicate that while the corn crop is a big one the quality of the grain is poor due to the coming of early frosts that prevented its maturity. White corn flour is expected to maintain a firm position in consequence. Yellow corn products may not be affected if it is found that the corn can be effectively kiln-dried. Lard and shortening were in strong market, advances being recorded in pure lard. Storage eggs are weak, but new-laid are scarce and prices high. There is a good demand for barrel pork and long clear bacon and prices have advanced. Butter was steady. Turkeys have started to come into the market, but reports indicate that the supply will be light.

Advances are recorded in molasses, sardines, junket tablets, pop corn, bulk mustard, salad dressing, tuna fish, shoe dressing, sal soda, rolled oats. Business is reported very good as the heavy consuming season is fast approaching.

Everyone Should Drink Hot Water in the Morning

To feel your best day in and day out, to feel clean inside, no sour bile to coat your tongue and sicken your breath or dull your head; no constipation, bilious attacks, sick headache, colds, rheumatism or gassy, acid stomach, you must bathe on the inside like you bathe outside. This is vastly more important, because the skin pores do not absorb impurities into the blood, while the bowel pores do, says a well-known physician.

To keep these poisons and toxins well flushed from the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels, drink before breakfast each day, a glass of hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it. This will cleanse, purify and freshen the entire alimentary tract, before putting more food into the stomach.

Get a quarter pound of limestone phosphate from your pharmacist. It is inexpensive and almost tasteless, except a sourish twinge which is not unpleasant. Drink phosphated hot water every morning to rid your system of these vile poisons and toxins; also to prevent their formation.

To feel like young folks feel; like you felt before your blood, nerves and muscles became saturated with an accumulation of body poisons, begin this treatment and above all, keep it up! As soap and hot water act on the skin, cleansing, sweetening and purifying, so limestone phosphate and hot water before breakfast, act on the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels.

What Shall I Eat For Dinner To-Morrow?

BONE PRESSURE ON BRAIN DECLARED TO HAVE ROBBED MRS. DE SAULLES OF REASON

Counsel Says He Will Prove Her Mentally Irresponsible for Killing —Disordered Thyroid Gland Also Alleged—Defence Outlined at Close of Sensational Day—Defendant Will Take Stand Monday.

NEW YORK, Nov. 25.— Blanca de Saulles' defence will not rest upon a plea of emotional insanity, as that term is commonly understood, but on a far more tangible foundation.

In a sensational peroration delivered at the close of his address in opening for the defence, her counsel, Henry A. Uterhart, revealed a well guarded secret. He will rest his contention that his fair client mentally was irresponsible on the night of August 3, when she shot to death her divorced husband, upon two correlated propositions, both of which he promises to demonstrate with scientific accuracy and conclusiveness. Upon his ability to make good that promise he is content to stake his plea to the jury to spare the life and liberty of the defendant.

The very essence of the defence of mental irresponsibility rests upon X-ray photographs of Blanca de Saulles' shapely head, disclosing what none has ever suspected who has gazed admiringly upon its crown of rich, dark hair. These radiographs, counsel promises, will reveal a depressed fracture of the skull three-eighths of an inch deep and an inch and one-half in diameter, with a break that is still un-united just over the frontal lobes of the brain, and with pressure of skull fragments at the point where the higher faculties of the brain —judgment, reason and control—are localized.

Result of Childhood Accident.

This old fracture, the existence of which was revealed to practitioners who have had the patient under treatment since her incarceration, and as a result of her complaints of constant severe headache, will be attributed to an accident of childhood, when in 1902 she fell, striking her forehead against a fender. It will be shown that the original fracture was aggravated by a fall from an automobile while in Chili in 1915, and to an attack of sunstroke sustained by her after her marriage.

Coupled with this sensational disclosure will be the testimony of her examining physicians, Dr. Lewis C. Johnson, Dr. J. Sehrman Wight and Dr. Smith Ely Jeliffe, that she is suffering from an atrophy of the thyroid gland, a condition which tends toward deterioration of the nervous system and the brain cells and which, if permitted to progress far enough, results in hopeless mental infirmity and death.

Story of Unhappy Married Life.

Before she had reached this startling climax in his address of nearly an hour and a half, Mr. Uterhart had drawn a distressing picture of the unhappy married life of the gridiron hero and his young Chilian wife. He promised to introduce evidence showing that John L. de Saulles had tricked her out of her patrimony; that he had abused and deceived her shamefully almost from the moment when he brought her as his bride to America, a stranger in a strange land.

He told how the child, little Jack, had been taken for automobile rides in company with the woman who afterwards figured as the corespondent in Blanca's divorce suit, and how, before taking the lad one one excursion, to the Bronx Zoological Park, he had the effrontery to send to his wife on an Easter morning, a bouquet of flowers bearing his card inscribed, "To their one and only sweetheart, from Big and Little Jack."

He sketched in lurid colours De Saulles' dissipations, his flaunting of other women in the face of his wife, and his habitual deceptions and demoralizing associations. The lawyer described the popular athlete's intimacy with the Duke of Manchester, in the summer of 1914, when that titled young man was making an impression in this country and its newspapers. He told how John L. de Saulles' aged mother had appealed to Blanca to try to break up this intimacy, citing a scandal which had appeared recently upon the subject in Town Topics.

Mrs. de Saulles to Testify Monday.

With telling effect, while the jury sat almost agape with interest, the attorney sketched an incident of that summer which occurred off Breeze Point, on Long Island Sound, when Mr. August Heckscher's yacht, on which Blanca was a passenger, came abreast of the yacht chartered by the Duke, and the young wife, who had not seen her husband for many days, beheld him standing on the quarter deck, with the noble lord, surrounded by a bevy of Broadway's choicest beauties."

Mr. Uterhart promised that Blanca de Saulles will be called to the stand as his first witness when court reconvenes on Monday morning, and that she will then substantiate in her own words much of the unhappy story he had outlined. In the expectation that she might take the witness chair the court room was crowded as never before during the trial with a throng among whom were many fashionably dressed women. Scores were turned away because of the limited capacity of the chamber.

Father of Victim a Witness.

Though they were disappointed not to hear testimony from the central figure in the case, the spectators had their fill of sensational incident and evidence during the morning session. They heard Mr. Uterhart in cross-examination of Marshall Ward, John L. de Saulles' most intimate friend, bring out the facts of a partnership between them, in which he and De Saulles had been accused of defrauding Miss Reilly, a dressmaker, in a $30,000 bond transaction, concerning which Justice Clark, of the Appellate Division, in reviewing the case, said: "De Saulles and the plaintiff Ward having sued for commissions) agreed to divide the stock which was to have been declared as a bonus upon these bonds between themselves."

They also heard the cross-examiner force Mr. Ward, when confronted by records, to admit that he had been arrested and fined as the result of a

Details of Strange Shooting of Peterborough Man Near Tweed

John David Woods Had Lived Here Two Years and Was Employed at Quaker Oats Building—Died of Gunshot Wound Caused by Boy of Fourteen.

John David Woods, who had lived in Peterborough during the past two years and was last employed in the construction of the Quaker Oats plant was shot and mortally wounded by Alfred Beckwith, a fourteen-year-old boy, at Johnston's Corners, twelve miles north of Tweed, on Saturday night, November 10th.

Woods with his wife and child was visiting his father, Mr. David Woods of Actinolite. They were driving to Johnston's Corners, where the deceased was brought up and knew many people in that vicinity. At the inquest before Dr. H. C. Kindred at Actinolite, Mrs. Woods stated that she and her husband had intended to move to Blaevis and work a vacant farm belonging to her father. She Woods was working on the Quaker Oats plant. She had about five years ago, gone to school with young Alfred Beckwith. She had never had any reason to believe there were any hard feelings between either her or her husband, and the young Beckwith. On the Wednesday before the accident, November 7th, she and her husband had gone up to her home for a visit, and remained there until Saturday, when they went up to the farm and he ploughed about half a dozen rounds. Then they returned to her home, her younger brother, Sammy and young Beckwith were there. The boys intended to go to Flinton, but when they found the elder brother, Tom, had taken the horse, they remained at home. Young Beckwith who lived a short distance up the road, was going home, so my brother took a 22-calibre gun down from the wall and intended to go part of the way home with him. About five minutes after the boys left, my husband and I started out to drive down to his parents at Actinolite. The main road is some distance from the house and to get to it, one had to drive down the lane. The boys were ahead of us, and we could hear them laughing and talking.

Story of the Shooting.

When we got out to the main road, I could see the Beckwith boy and my brother a short distance ahead. When we got to the corner (the horse had just started to turn) the Beckwith boy walked back to the head of the horse and remained there, looking at the gun in his hands. He turned, and as I thought, went to pass the buggy. He stuck the gun up against my husband, and pushed, as he moved a little towards me. I heard him cock the gun, and pull the trigger. There was no conversation carried on, previous to this. My husband stepped out of the rig and said, "Oh, oh, oh, that boy," and fell backwards in the bushes. I picked him up and carried him to the side of the road, when he seemed to revive. My husband raised up and got in the buggy, saying, "Take me home to mother, at Actinolite." He picked up the lines and started to drive, but the horse had only gone a few steps when he fell forward into the bottom of the buggy. When we got down to Walker's hill, about 80 rods, my husband vomited blood, so we turned back to Mrs. Demore's house. We took him into the house and Sammy hurried for the doctors. The Beckwith boy stayed at Demore's all night and my husband said he did not want to see him harmed, as he did not think the little fellow could have meant it. My husband died on Monday.

Sammy Sedore was the next witness called. He was a bright looking young fellow about 16 years of age, and was a chum of Alfred Beckwith's He met young Beckwith about 11 o'clock on Saturday, when he had gone up to help hunt sheep. He had supper at Beckwith's and about dark, he and the Beckwith boy came down to his place with the intention of going to Flinton that night. "I had been carrying the gun all day and might have taken two or three shots with it. I do not know whether it was loaded or not. I had a couple of cartridges in my pocket." The story of the evening's happenings was the same as his sister's. Asked how young Beckwith came to have the gun, he said he had told him to hold it when they were on the road, as he wanted to button up his coat, and he had forgotten to take it back again. I did not see him point the gun, it was so dark, and I do not know why he would go by the rig." Here young Sedore had to answer a number of questions from a juryman as to whether he had fired the gun on Saturday or not, but he said he wasn't sure whether he had or not, possibly he might have fired a couple of shots.

County Crown Attorney Carnew addressed the Jury asking them whether they wished him to call young Beckwith or not. He said he did not propose so doing. He must be back at Belleville at six o'clock to attend Court and wanted to get away. If the jury wished to call him, he would question the witness. The Jury said that they wished to call him. The Coroner said he did not wish to take the evidence of young Beckwith, as he was here alone, and also a charge had been laid against him, so they should give him an opportunity to prepare a defence for himself. There was a little argument over the matter and it finally ended in a vote being taken which majority was for not hearing Beckwith's evidence.

The decision of the jury was as follows:—"That the deceased John David Wood came to his death about 11:18 a.m., on November 12th, from injuries received on November 10th, about 7:30 p.m., on the road half way from Actinolite to Flinton in front of the home of Moses Demore from a shot discharged from a 22-calibre rifle, in the hands of Alfred Beckwith."

Young Beckwith was arrested under the warrant given by the County Crown Attorney and brought to Tweed on Friday night. He was admitted to bail of $500, taken by his father and James Lowry. He is not held on any charge except from the Coroner's jury. About 14 or 15 years old, he is rather small in size, and seems to be a rather adventurous careless boy. He did not seem to be much concerned while the inquest was going on, or when he was brought to Tweed.

Before his death Mr. Woods made the following statement to Dr. Mather, of Tweed:

"My wife and baby and myself driving in a rig on main road, overtook two boys. The Beckwith boy walked up and stuck gun to side and shot. The boy did not say anything before he shot. I said, "Oh, oh, that boy," and I staggered out of buggy. The Beckwith boy said after he shot me that he did not know the gun was loaded. I do not think the boy meant anything, and do not want to see him punished."

"THE FILM OF FEAR"

By ARNOLD FREDERICKS

It was a small and rather cheap place, but at this hour was crowded with the employees of the big company. Duvall at first could not find a seat, but presently discovered one at a table not far from the door, at which were seated some young men, apparently stenographers or clerks.

While waiting for his order of sandwiches and milk, the detective occupied himself with a newspaper. He was not reading it, however, although he pretended to be deeply engrossed in its contents. He was in reality listening to the gossip of the studio, which rose in a chorus about him.

From a nearby table came the voice of a woman, evidently a great admirer of Ruth Morton.

"I tell you," she said, "that new film that she finished last week, An American Beauty, is going to be a knockout. She's the swellest thing on the screen. Got 'em all faded, I think."

"Think so?" questioned one of her companions. "I'm pretty strong for Helen Warde, myself."

"Ruth Morton won't last," remarked a third, in a petulant voice.

"Course she'll last. Say—ain't that a bear of a title? An American Beauty. She always seems like a beautiful big rose, to me."

"Well, roses don't last, do they?" asked the petulent voice again. "Not very long, anyway."

Duvall turned suddenly in an effort to see the face of the speaker, but try as he would, he was unable to do so. Two of the girls sat with their backs to him. He could not manage to catch a glimpse of either of them. Almost as he turned, the three rose and made their way to the street. For a moment he thought of following them, but the idea seemed absurd. These twelve dollar a week stenographers or clerks could have no part in the plot against Miss Morton. And yet, there was something startling in the young woman's words, "Roses don't last." The telegram received by Ruth Morton that morning had contained almost the same phrase. "Even the beauty of the rose cannot endure." Then he remembered the title of the new film of which the girls had spoken, and smiled at his own suspicions. "An American Beauty." It would be natural, perfectly natural for anyone to refer to Ruth as a rose, with that title for her latest picture. He dismissed the matter from his mind, and proceeded to make a hasty lunch.

At the entrance of the studio he explained that he was a writer of special articles for the Sunday papers and had come to "write up" the life at the studios. He was promptly turned over to one of the officials who after a few inquiries seemed delighted at the opportunity to obtain free publicity for his company and its stars.

"I want particularly to give a sketch of Miss Ruth Morton," he said. "She seems to be such a universal favorite."

"A most delightful and charming woman," his companion asserted, with a pleased smile. "Come this way. You may be able to see her at work." He led Duvall down a long corridor, and into one of the big studio rooms.

The first impression Duvall got was that of utter confusion. People were darting here and there, in ordinary clothes, or in all sorts of makeups. Stage carpenters were creating a terrific racket, building a new scene. A tangle of electric light cables, a blinding glare from the arcs, a confusion of voices, a wilderness of scenery and "props" all combined to create an impression quite the reverse of what he had expected. Here, he felt, was something very different from the theatre, something bigger, yet more elemental, in which vast sums were expended daily to amuse a vaster, indeed, a world wide, audience. He sat down upon a box and inspected the scene before him.

"Miss Morton will be on in a few moments," his guide said.

Duvall nodded. His attention was fixed upon the little drama going on before him. He knew nothing of the plot of the play, but the mechanical features of the operation held his interest keenly. The brilliant electric lights, the setting of the little room, the actors in their hastly greenish make ups, the camera man, grinding stolidly away at his machine the director, hovering about like a hawk, watching every movement, every gesture, with a superlatively critical eye, all spoke to him of a new world, and one with which he was not in the least familiar.

Suddenly he saw the lovely face of Ruth Morton, as the girl appeared from an open doorway. She did not take part in the picture at once but stood chatting with the director, awaiting the moment when she should make her entrance. Duvall watched her intently. Her face, he thought, was drawn, nervous, her expression one of fear. She seemed suspicious of every one who came near her, as though she suspected that every stage hand, every electrician or helper, had in his possession a bottle of vitriol, which he only awaited the moment to hurl in her face. That the girl's nervous manner her strained and tense expression was evident to others as well as to himself, he realized from a remark his companion made to him.

"Miss Morton doesn't seem herself to-day," he said. "She must have something on her mind. I shouldn't be surprised if she has been working to hard lately."

Duvall made no reply. He was watching, not only Ruth, but those about her. In particular he observed the other women in the cast. It seemed not improbable that among them he would find the one whose envy had led to the sending of the threats Ruth had been receiving.

Presently the scene was finished, and Ruth, in response to a call from Duvall's companion, came toward them.

"Miss Morton," the latter said, "let me present Mr. Richards." This was the name Duvall had given. "He is anxious to meet you, and write you up for one of the newspapers."

Ruth gave him her hand with a smile which Duvall saw clearly enough was forced. The girl was palpably worn, distrait.

"I'm not going to interview you now, Miss Morton," he said. "I can understand that you must be tired, after posing all the morning. Let me come and see you sometime when you are more at leisure."

She thanked him with a smile, it is time quite genuine.

"I'm not feeling very well this afternoon," she said. "Come to my home this evening, or better still, on Sunday, and I'll tell you all I know about being a 'movie' star. So glad to have met you." She was just about to turn away, when a small boy came up, carrying in his hand a flat package, wrapped in brown paper. Duvall observed that the package had upon it a typewritten address.

"Something for you, Miss Morton," he said, and placed the package in Ruth's hand.

The girl looked at it for a moment in dismay. Then realizing that the eyes of the two men were bent curiously upon her, she recovered herself and tore open the brown paper envelope. Duvall, with one eye on the boy, saw that he had disappeared through the door leading to the company's executive offices.

Suddenly Ruth, who had been examining the contents of the package, gave a faint cry and swayed backward as though about to fall. Duvall's companion sprang to her assistance, while Duvall himself snatched the object which had so affected her, from her hand and hastily examined it.

It was a photograph of Ruth Morton herself, but Duvall, as he gazed at it, comprehended instantly the effect it had produced upon the girl's overwrought nerves. Some clever hand had been at work upon the photograph, retouching it, changing its lovely expression, until the portrait instead of being a thing of beauty, grinned up at him in frightful hideousness. The blank sightless eyes, the haggard cheeks, the thin, wasted lips, the protruding and jagged teeth, all created an impression, shocking beyond belief. And yet the result had been obtained by the addition of but a few simple lines and shadows.

Along the blank space at the bottom of the picture a line of typewritten characters had been placed. Duvall glanced at them. "As you will look soon," the words read. Below them was fixed the grinning Death's head seal. Unobserved in the confusion, Duvall thrust the photograph into his pocket, and turned to Ruth and the others.

The girl had recovered herself by now, and was being conducted to her dressing room by a solicitous crowd. So far as Duvall could see, she had said nothing to those about her as to the cause of her sudden indisposition, and with the exception of the man who had been Duvall's guide, none of them had observed the opening of the package containing the photograph nor its immediate effect upon her.

The latter, however, whose name was Baker, came over to Duvall, and addressed him.

"WHO WILL WIN THIS BATTLE?"

Your kidneys are the filters of the body. If they become inactive and fail to eliminate the waste matter, they are apt to throw the whole mechanism of the body out of order, thus toxic poisons can accumulate in the system and be as deadly as snake venom.

Besides causing the minor ailments of rheumatism, sciatica, lumbago and backache, neglect of the kidneys is apt to develop into more serious diseases, such as diabetes or stone in the bladder.

Rid the body of toxic poisons—clean the bladder and kidneys and cure the twinges of rheumatism with Anuric and you win the battle of life.

Anuric was first discovered by Dr. Pierce, and has benefited thousands of sufferers as well as appeased and eliminated the ravages of the more serious kidney diseases. Now procurable at any good drug store, or send Dr. V. M. Pierce, Invalids' Hotel, Buffalo, N. Y., or branch office, Bridgeburg, Ont., 10 cents for trial package.

Thorold, Ont.—"I was wonderfully helped by taking 'Anuric.' For about three years I had kidney trouble and rheumatism. I also had backache. My limbs would swell and I had rheumatism in my arms and hands. My hands would swell and joints would be so sore and stiff I could scarcely do my work. They would pain me something awful. I doctored but without relief. At last I saw 'Anuric' advertised. I began its use and two bottles completely cured me of all my rheumatism, and I think it was permanent for that was a year ago and I have never had any return of this ailment. I have never found a medicine so good as 'Anuric'."—Mrs. E. H. Hutty.

HUSBAND OBJECTS TO OPERATION

Wife Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Des Moines, Iowa.—"Four years ago I was very sick and my life was nearly spent. The doctors stated that I would never get well without an operation and that without it I would not live one year. My husband objected to any operation and got me some of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I took it and commenced to get better and am now well, am strong and able to do my own housework. I can recommend the Vegetable Compound to any woman who is sick and run down as a wonderful strength and health restorer. My husband says I would have been in my grave ere this if it had not been for your Vegetable Compound."—Mrs. Blanche Jefferson, 708 Lyon St., Des Moines, Iowa.

Before submitting to a surgical operation it is wise to try to build up the female system and cure its derangements with Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound; it has saved many women from surgical operations.

HEART WAS BAD NERVES ALL GONE

Very important it is in this age to have a clear cool head, a strong heart and steady nerves.

Too much rush and bustle, work and worry, fall to the lot of women attending to their household duties and social obligations. The constant strain under which they continue day in and day out will soon shatter the strongest system. Before long the heart gets weak, flutters and palpitates, the nerves become unstrung, you start at the least sound, the pulse becomes weak and irregular, then finally comes physical breakdown or nervous prostration.

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are the remedy you require to strengthen your heart and steady your nerves.

Mrs. Jackson, 457 Bolivar Street, Peterborough, Ont., writes: "Fifteen years ago I was so bad with my heart I could not walk across the house, my nerves were literally all gone, and I was frightened at my shadow. I commenced to take Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, and was soon able to do my own work. I have told dozens of people about them, some as bad as I was, and to-day they are also doing their own work. If more people would take them there would not be so many weak hearts."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50c per box at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

"TANKS PLAYED OUT," SAID HUNS A WEEK AGO.

But Odds Are the Tune is Changed Since Their Good Work.

AMSTERDAM, Nov. 22.—Of interest just now, in view of the great British victory achieved through the tanks against the Hindenburg line, is this quotation from the Berlin Tageblatt of 14th November:

"The role of the British tanks had been played out. Our artillery mows them down. The original terror inspired by their appearance has vanished.

"The enemy leaves the overturned, crumpled-up monsters lie where they drop, crippled. It is also to be observed that the occupants of the tanks leave their dangerous armoured prisons prematurely.

"The British have their troubles in finding crews for them. Evidently there is no particular passion left for this kind of sport."

'DRYS' WIN IN LOS ANGELES.

Sale of Liquor to be Closely Restricted There After March 18 Next.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Nov. 21.— A big victory for the anti-saloon forces of Los Angeles by the enactment of the Gandier No-Saloon Ordinance was registered at a special election to-day. The vote for the ordinance is estimated at two to one.

The ordinance provides for the closing of all saloons on March 31, 1918, and after that date no liquor may be sold in hotels or restaurants after 9 o'clock at night. The ordinance also calls for a "bone dry" harbour district, and limits family liquor dealers to selling liquor containing less than 14 per cent. alcohol.

Voting in the downtown districts was light. This is regarded as the 'wet' stronghold. Voting in the residence districts was much heavier. This was attributed by Gandier and other anti-saloon leaders to the desire of women voters to eliminate saloons.

How Canada Is Helping the Allies'

Hauling The Grain In Alberta

IT was the great Napoleon who declared that an army marches on its stomach, and nobody knew more about war than he did. The food supply of the nations now fighting is as important as the matter of guns and ammunition. Canada is playing a doubly important part in the present conflict; she is supplying a vast army of men and a huge supply of food and ammunition.

The freight traffic on the railroads of Western Canada has reached immense dimensions. The task of hauling the wheat is now in full progress, and much of this will find its way to feed the allied legions.

Over three hundred and fifty cars carrying approximately 500,000 bushels of grain are leaving Alberta over the Canadian Pacific daily, according to a recent statement by one of the officials. Freight facilities throughout the entire province are in excellent condition this year to handle the shipments and no difficulty, whatever, should be experienced in the removal of the grain being threshed, and yet to be threshed, in the province.

Large shipments are being made from the southern part of Alberta each day, and the district between Calgary and Swift Current has furnished a good proportion of the cereals for eastern markets. Practically all of the grain has gone east with the exception of the trial shipment sent to the Pacific coast to try out the Panama canal route. That there need be no fear of a car shortage on the C.P.R. lines is the confirmed opinion of the official who discussed the subject. He said that at the present time neither the main line nor any of the branches felt the pull occasioned by the demand for cars to be used in the crop removal.

INCREASE GRADUAL.

Since Sept. 1st, the increase in shipments has been gradual, 350 cars a day was the estimate only for the early part of October. This is increasing more rapidly now that the farmers are finding their way to the different shipping points on the completion of threshing. It is the belief of the official that after the fall plowing is tied up the grain hauling will commence in earnest and the demand for freight cars will increase greater than the gradual rise, which has been noticeable in the past fortnight.

The estimate of 500,000 bushels is for the Alberta district of the C.P.R., which takes in the whole province and east of Swift Current. The threshing in the south is earlier than in the other parts of the province, and a supply of cars is held in readiness to place at the disposal of the farmers and elevators at the different towns along the main and branch lines.

The car shortage which has been threatened in former years will not be experienced this fall and winter, according to the re-assuring statements of the C.P.R. official. The yield of the different districts of Alberta has been carefully estimated and it is known to a fair degree of accuracy just what grain will have to be handled. Cars will be available to remove the crops in all districts where the C.P.R. runs and hundreds of orders for reservations are being dealt with each day.

With the price fixed the farmers are assured of a safe figure for their grain, and wild-catting to catch high markets or holding off for better quotations will avail them nothing this year.

It is estimated that a freight car will contain 1,350 bushels and figuring on an average of 350 cars a day, which has been the number engaged during a particular week, the removal of grain has been 472,500 bushels each day. Figuring for that week, there have been 3,015,000 bushels shipped east from Alberta.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

A Prophecy

By DONALD CHAMBERLIN

Margaret and I met in Florence. We were both of an artistic makeup, and there is nothing more pleasing than the companionship of one with congenial tastes. We sauntered through the galleries of that artistic city and admired the works of art together.

Then, too, there is something unifying to kindred spirits in being thrown together in a foreign country. America to Americans on the other side of the Atlantic ocean seems so far. The customs of those countries are so different from ours. They seem so old; we so new. It is this that draws Americans abroad together who would live for years next door to each other and never form an acquaintance.

These meetings between fellow countrymen of opposite sex frequently end in love affairs, and such was the case with Margaret and me. But my suit was not successful. Whether this was due to Margaret or the influences brought to bear upon her I did not know. At any rate, I returned to my home, leaving my heart in Florence, and I realized that I would never get it back again.

On my voyage home the stateroom opposite me was occupied by a young man who had gone abroad for his health and, having failed in his quest, was coming back to die. There was no one on board whose business it was to minister to him, and the duty fell to me. I became very much attached to him, and he seemed grateful for my attentions. More than that, he seemed to love me as a brother.

I told him of my disappointment, and he seemed to be regretful for me. He tried to comfort me by telling me that he had a feeling deep down in his heart that Margaret and I would meet again and that all would be changed. "She loves you," he said. "I know it. When she refused you it was contrary to her inclinations. She will return to America much changed. Her circumstances will be different. Instead of refusing to listen to your suit she will be glad to lean upon you, happy and relieved to be loved by you."

He seemed so earnest, so sure, in what he said that I was greatly surprised. Could it be that to one so near death had been imparted something of that knowledge of future events we are prone to attribute to those who have passed the portals of eternity? The thought occurred, but I did not really believe it.

My friend lingered till we reached the coast. Then he said that if he could be spared through the brief journey that remained to him to his home he would be content to die. I accompanied him and spent with him the few days he lived after being again under his own rooftree. The day he died he was, or seemed to me to be, delirious.

"I see men marching," he said. "hundreds, thousands, millions. They are like fields of wheat. A mowing machine is passing through them, and they are falling just as I have seen the grain fall in the fields of a summer day. People are fleeing before them. Some are peasants; some are gentle folks; some are without a roof to cover them; some are starving; some are strangers in that land and, being cut off from home and friends, have no one to care for them."

At this point his voice sank to murmurings which I understood no more.

I had left Italy early in the spring and when my friend died the leaves had not yet put forth their buds. I was busily engaged, but not so much so as to recover from my disappointment. My mind during the day constantly reverted to she who I felt was my natural mate, and the nights were dreary without her.

Late in July there came like thunderclaps out of a clear sky declarations of war all over Europe. Hundreds of thousands of Americans were stranded there. All, or nearly all, were cut off not only from their homes, but from the wherewithal to meet their necessities. Naturally I thought of Margaret, for I had seen no announcement of her return. I would have filled my pockets with gold and gone to seek her that I might supply her necessities, but I realized that I would be unable to find her and would not likely be able to reach her if I knew where she was. All I knew of her whereabouts was that she had left Italy, for it was not intended when I parted with her to remain there after the spring opened.

Since I could not go to her I waited for her to come to me. Something told me that my lost friend's words would come true. When a steamer bringing Americans from Europe came in I was on the dock and watched eagerly those who came down the gangplank. One day I was at my post as a steamer docked, and as she swung around to back into the pier I caught sight of a pale, haggard girl standing on the deck.

I rushed to the gangplank, but was ordered away. I waited while the throng of sufferers left the ship. My eyes was on Margaret, but she did not see me in the crowd on the deck. As she stepped off the gangplank I caught her in my arms. Looking up she recognized me and broke into tears of joy.

Hers was one of the bitterest of those many bitter tales. Her father had died before the outbreak of the war, and she and her mother had been turned out in the cold with not a hundred francs on which to subsist and return home.

Animal Curiosity.

A cow will approach a new object fascinated, but with timorous suspicion, and a horse is even more timid, gazing at a distance for awhile, ready to flee in a moment. The monkey will snatch at everything that is new and deliberately examine it till, finding that he cannot eat it or mock mankind with it, he will drop it and let it pass from his shallow memory. There is a pathos in the slenderness of animal curiosity, it is so easily satisfied. The thought, if thought it be, usually ends with the first flush of surprise and the impression of safety.

A Bible in Forty-five Volumes.

The "grangerized" Bible mentioned by a correspondent, which was valued at £3,000, was probably the celebrated "Bowyer Bible," the arrangement of which occupied William Bowyer, the printer, from 1798 to 1824. It was based upon a copy of Macklin's costly edition of the Bible which Bowyer interleaved with 7,000 engravings, costing £6,000, and sumptuously bound in forty-five volumes, which were inclosed in a handsome oak cabinet.

At his death a lottery was got up for the benefit of his daughter with the Bible as the sole prize. A Somersetshire farmer, Mr. Saxon, won it, but subsequently it changed hands several times, the last recorded sale occurring in 1851, when Robert Heywood of Bolton bought it for £500.—London Spectator.

Short and Long Twilight.

As twilight is caused by the refraction of the atmosphere, without which we should be instantly in darkness at sunset, all parts of the earth have twilight, though of varying duration. When the sun has sunk eighteen degrees below the horizon no more light can be refracted anywhere, but the path of the sun at the equator is so nearly vertical that its disappearance is proportionately rapid.

The shortest twilight at the equator is one hour and twelve minutes at the equinoxes in March and September; the longest is one hour and nineteen minutes at the solstices in June and December.

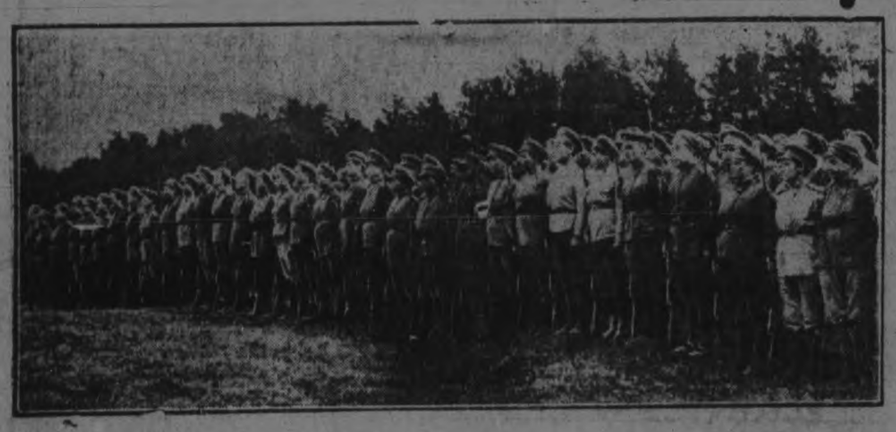
In London from May 22 to July 21 it is twilight all through the night. Farther north still, in the Shetlands and Norway, we speak of the midnight sun, where men never lose sight of the orb of day and twilight is unknown.—London Telegraph.

AN OLD RECIPE TO DARKEN HAIR

Sage Tea and Sulphur Turns Gray, Faded Hair Dark and Glossy

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or gray. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is mussy and troublesome.

Nowadays we simply ask at any drug store for "Wyoth's Sage and Sulphur Compound." You will get a large bottle of this old time recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients at very little cost. Every body uses this preparation now, because no one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, thick and glossy and you look years younger. Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound is a delightful toilet requisite. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.



RUSSIA'S NEW ARMY OF WOMEN ARE BACKING KERENSKY—A striking glimpse of Russia's new army of women, 2,500 in number, drilling behind trenches at the central western front. This new force of Amazons were trained by Major Groffoff and other experienced men. And they take their turn in the trenches just as the men do. They are avoiding the great mistake made by the recently famous battalion of death; they are getting their training from men not from women, and they are serving under male commanders all the time. These women are from all classes, from the peasantry to the highest rank. And as you will notice in the photo some of them are very young. There are several girls of 18 among them.

Sunday Sermon For Those Who Do Not Go To Church

(By JAS. SUTHERLAND)

1st Samuel, Chapter 28, verse 15: God is departed from me and answereth me no more.

The Philistines gathered their armies together to fight against Israel, and pitched in Shunem, and Saul gathered all Israel and pitched in Gilboa. It would appear that Saul had been negligent, or the Philistines could not have marched thus far. Saul was afraid when he saw the hosts of the Philistines. Saul's terror arose chiefly from a guilty conscience. His contempt of Samuel, his murder of the priests and his malicious persecution of David, dismayed his heart. Had Saul kept close to God he need not have been afraid at the sight of an army of Philistines, but now that he had provoked God, to forsake him, his interest failed, his armies dwindled and which was worse his spirit failed him, his heart sunk within him. Troubles are terrors to the children of disobedience. In this distress Saul inquired of the Lord. Need drives those to God who in the day of their prosperity slighted His oracles and altars. He inquired in such a manner that it was as if he had not inquired at all. Therefore it is said, 1st Chronicles, 10-14: He inquired not of the Lord, for he did it faintly and coldly. He did not inquire in faith, but with a double unstable mind. He inquired of the Lord when it was too late. When the days of his probation were over and he was finally rejected. Seek the Lord while He may be found. Could he that hated and persecuted Samuel and David, who were both prophets, expect to be answered by prophets, or he that had slain the high priest, to be answered by Urim; or he that had sinned away the spirit of grace, to be answered by dreams? No. Be not deceived, God is not mocked. Samuel was dead, which made the Philistines more bold had Samuel been alive Saul might have thought that his presence and countenance, his good advice and prayers, would have availed him in his distress. Saul had put the law in execution against those that had familiar spirits. Exod. 22-18. Many seem zealous against sin; when they themselves are any hurt by it, who otherwise have no concern for the glory of God nor any dislike of sin, as sin. Many seem enemies to sin in others, while they indulge in it themselves. Saul will drive the devil out of his kingdom, and yet harbour him in his heart by envy and malice. Nothing could exceed the presumption of consulting those, whom, according to God's law, he had endeavoured to extirpate. When we deviate from the plain path of duty every circumstance will draw us further aside and increase our perplexity and temptation. Had one told Saul when he was destroying the witches that he, himself, would 'ere long consult with one, he would have said, as Hazel did: What, is thy servant a dog? Who knows what troubles they will run into, that forsake God and are forsaken of Him.

He desires the woman to bring him one from the dead, whom he wished to discourse with. It was necromancy or divination by the dead that he hoped to serve his purpose by; this was expressly forbidden by the law. Dent. 18-11, seeking for the living to the dead. Isaiah, 8-9, Bring me up him whom I shall name, verse 8. This supposes that it was generally taken for granted that souls exist after death, and that when men die, there is not an end of them; it supposes too that great knowledge was attributed to separate souls. But to think that any good souls should come up at the beck of an evil spirit, or that God who had denied a man the benefit of his own divine institutions should suffer him to reap any advantage by a cursed wicked invention, was very absurd. All real or pretended witchcraft or conjuration is a malicious or ignorant attempt to gain intelligence or assistance from some creature; when it cannot be had from the Lord, in the path of duty. Saul could not secure himself and much less secure her from divine vengeance. He swore by the Lord that she should not be punished for violating the Lord's express commands. Saul desires to speak with Samuel, who had annointed him to the kingdom, and who had formerly been his faithful friend and counsellor, and therefore with him he wished to advise. While Samuel was living at Ramah, not far from Gibeah of Saul, and presided there in the school of the prophets, we never read of Saul's going to him to advise with him in any of the difficulties he was in it had been well for him if he had. Then he slighted him, and perhaps hated him, looking upon him to be in David's interests, but now that he is dead, "let all means bring me up Samuel." Many who despise and persecute God's saints and ministers when they are living would be glad to have them again, when they are gone. Send Lazarus to my father's house, Luke 16-24-27. Her incarnations are passed over in silence. It is much disputed who appeared. The whole narrative manifests that it was no human imposture. The text gives no intimation that it was Satan personating Samuel. The woman's incantations could have no power over a glorified spirit, but God might see good that one should come from the dead at this time. Though the woman could not be the cause of Samuels being sent, yet Saul's inquiry might be the occasion of it. The word "disquieted" seems merely to be used in accommodation to the general notions on this subject. The woman's surprise and terror proved that it was an unusual and unsuspected appearance. Saul has despised Samuel's solemn warnings in his lifetime, yet now he hoped, as it were, in defiance of God, to obtain some counsel and encouragement from him—might not God permit the soul of the departed prophet to appear to Saul, confirm his former sentence and pronounce his doom. Satan could not have predicted events without being inspired of God to do so, and it would give less encouragement to consulting the evil spirit, if Satan were sent with this message from God. The expression, Thou and thy sons shall be with me, means no more than that they shall be in the eternal world. It expressed the existence of a future state, and determined nothing against the different conditions of the righteous and the wicked therein. There appears much solemnity in Gods permitting the soul of the de parted prophet to come as a witness from heaven, thus sending him to confirm the word he had spoken on earth. We are here told how Saul received this terrible message. Those that expect any good counsel or comfort, otherwise than from God and in the way that he has marked out will be sadly disappointed, as was Saul. The fear he had of the Philistines took away his appetite, or perhaps the state of his own conscience. This now made him an easy prey to the terror that now came upon him. There was no strength in him to bear up against those heavy tidings.

Your sincerely,
JAMES SUTHERLAND.

PIMPLES AND RUNNING SORES
Would Hold Head Down Face Was Such a Sight

Pimples are caused by the blood being out of order. Those festering and running sores appear on the forehead, on the nose, on the chin and other parts of the body, and although they are not a dangerous trouble they are very unsightly to both you and your friends.

There is only one way to get rid of this obnoxious skin trouble, and this is by giving the blood a thorough cleansing by the use of Burdock Blood Bitters.

This sterling remedy has been on the market for over 40 years, during which time we have received thousands of testimonials as to its curative powers over all skin diseases.

Mrs. Victor G. Fry, North Battleford, Sask., writes: "I used Burdock Blood Bitters when I was about eighteen. I was so bad with pimples and running sores, that when I went down town, I would hold my head down when I would see anyone coming, my face was such a sight. I got two bottles, and my face began to clear, so I kept on until I had a beautiful complexion. I have recommended it to everyone who is in a run-down condition, as it builds up the blood, and when the blood is Al the face is clear."

brawl in Rector's restaurant, the complaint charging that he had indulged in boisterous and indecent language and had caused a disturbance.

They had listened spellbound while Major Arthur Bryce De Saulles, father of the man who had won Blanca's love, and who had seen his son shot down at his feet, told in simple language his version of the shooting. He is seventy-eight years old, with white hair and mustache, a veteran of the Confederacy. The venerable father had the sympathy of all, and Mr. Uterhart, in his gentlest tones, waived the privilege of cross examination after the father had finished his direct evidence.

Sheriff Aids Defendant's Case.

Blanca and all the court room spectators had witnessed the production and identification of the weapon with which she slew her discarded husband, and, with tense interest had noted the comment of an expert in firearms, who testified that, because of the safety catch with which the revolver is equipped, it required two distinct motions of the hand to discharge each bullet. The State contends that this is further proof of deliberation in the defendant's act.

Several of the prosecution's witnesses, on the other hand, were regarded as strengthening the case of the defendant. That was notably true of Sheriff Phineas Seaman, whose wife is Blanca's constant guardian in the court room. The Sheriff testified that on the night of her arrival in the jail after the shooting the defendant, in his judgment, looked like a very sick woman; that the County Physician, after having examined her, had given him a certificate saying that, "on account of her extreme nervousness and mental condition, in my opinion it would be very unwise to confine her in a cell for her own safety."

Ships and still more ships is the cry of all who realize the paramount importance of keeping the Allies supplied with munitions and food. Despite the enormous efforts of the United States Shipping Board, which is getting millions of tons of new ships built, it is still doubtful where there are enough vessels at the Allies' disposal and in the shipyards to meet all requirements in the near future. It is not surprising, therefore, that every device is being restorted to for the purpose of alarging the ocean-going merchant fleets. One of the most striking methods adopted to cope with the urgent need of ships for the transatlantic service is to take freighters in use on the Great Lakes and refit them for ocean ser vice.

BRILLIANT WORK BY CANADIAN CAVALRY

Cambrai And Queant Are Both Menaced

Fort Garry Horse Did Great Work In Helping To Break German Line

Canadian Cavalry Charged German Battery of Four Guns, Wiping Out the Crews, and Then Fought Their Way Two Miles Into Enemy Territory ---Only 43 Men Came Back Unwounded Out of One Squadron, Which Had Thrilling Experience in Tuesday's Big Drive.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

(By Walter A. Willison, Canadian Press Correspondent.)

CANADIAN ARMY HEADQUARTERS IN FRANCE, Nov. 26. — Canada was splendidly represented in the great British advance of November 20, which broke the Hindenburg line and drove the enemy back on Cambrai. For the first time since the German retreat from Bapaume last spring, the Canadian cavalry went really into action with their horses. Operating from right centre, opposite the village o fMasnieres, the cavalry behind the line waited at dawn for the signal which would send them forward after the tanks and infantry had opened the way. The anxiously awaited signal came and hell-for-leather the Fort Garry Horse galloped to the attack.

But Masnieres was not clear.

It was 3:30 p.m. when they penetrated the enemy's country through wire cut by British troops who were south of the town and galloped on into the blue.

What follows equals anything in cavalry exploits in the history of the Empire. A single squadron found itself all alone. Racing forward with the enemy to the right and left of them the Fort Garrys galloped in section over the crest of a hill concealing the enemy's guns. Charging down the slope they found themselves facing a hostile battery of four 77 light German field guns. Charging straight for the battery, sabring everything as they came, officers and men raced to the guns. With the sword the cavalry wiped out that battery. The majority of the enemy's gunners attempted to fly and others lay flat on the ground. Only a very few brave men stood to attention beside their cannon.

On went the little squadron.

The retreating enemy's infantry were engaged. Unchecked our horse went on until dusk found them two miles inside the enemy's territory, commanded by a lieutenant. A defensive position was essential. With the sword the horsemen fought their way through to a sunken road. There they dismounted.

Two messengers sent back to report their position had their horses shot under them but struggled back to our lines. Darkness was falling. The gallant band was isolated. They prepared to return.

FOUGHT ON FOOT.

As they had charged forward sabring everything, so now they fought their way back on foot with their Lee Enfields bayonetting their path. The retirement started about five. It was a succession of hand to hand struggles. Four times the little party met enemy working parties with the bayonet and dispersed them. Midnight had passed when they reached Masnieres again, and fought their way through the enemy country into the town, where they crossed to safety wading in water waist deep.

Forty-three of the men came through unwounded. But they brought their wounded back and over a dozen prisoners. One of the dieutenants, wounded in the throat had led his section back hundreds of yards to safety, and then refused to give up his prisoners until he had a proper receipt for them.

In addition to putting out of action of the battery, and killing a large number of Germans in the fighting between Masnieres and the sunken road, three main lines of enemy telephone communications had been cut and information had been secured of the enemy's dispositions.

LONDON, November 26.—The most vital week of the war began today. On the outcome of events in the next seven days may depend whether the Allies shall triumph before the spring of 1919, or the war drag further along. This week marks the first really practical determined effort at general unification, co-ordination and intensification of the Allies' war-making to cope with Germany's advantages of geographical, local and super-centralization control. The new inter-allied conference will inaugurate this effort. The American Mission has had a far-reaching effect on the Allied plants. Both British and French officials have been profoundly impressed with the energy, far-sightedness, complete unselfishness of the American part in the war as evidenced by these commissioners. The initial meetings of the Allied representatives will be for the discussion of military matters.

First of all there will be a critical, merciless examination of weak spots in the Allied war machine. There will be a most minute search for waste. Unnecessary and wastful effort, overlapping and interference are to be eliminated. Secondly come plants for the future conduct of the war on the basis of a single front. The ideal sought is a delicately balanced piece of machinery, capable of most rapid execution of all co-ordinate plans which may be necessitated by changing conditions.

PARIS, November 26.—Violent artillery activity is continuing in the Verdun region east of the Meuse, where the French are organizing ground they captured yesterday to the north of Hill 344, says to-day's War Office statement.

TREMENDOUS RECEPTION FOR THEODORE ROOSEVELT

TORONTO, November 26. — Tremendous enthusiasm greeted ed Colonel Theodore Roosevelt and his party on his arrival here at 12:35 p.m. to assist in the great Victory Loan meeting this evening. The Premier of Canada Sir Robert Borden, who was leaving for a political meeting at Uxbridge, had his train held especially in order to shake hands with "Teddy." When the ex-president stepped off his car he was greeted with three rousing cheers, and when he reached the street which was jammed with people the ovation was immense. The Headquarters band played "The Star Spangled Banner," and a guard of honour from the Canadian Officers' Training Corps presented arms. Cheering crowds lined the streets all along the route to Government House, whither the party proceeded in motors accompanied by an escort from the Royal Flying Corps on motor cycles.

At Hamilton where the distinguished visitor stopped off and spoke to thousands at the Lyric Theatre, Colonel Roosevelt declared he had come not to educate Canada, but to learn from her. Canada had taught a lesson of vital importance to democracy, and he had profound respect for what Canadians had done in this war. The Colonel gave conscientious objectors a thorough scorching, and said they ought to be put on mine sweepers where they couldn't kill any one but were on grave danger of going skyward themselves.

$2,000 NEEDED TO FURNISH NEW CLUB ROOM FOR VETERANS

This Was the Amount Decided Upon by the Joint Committee After Securing an Estimate of the Cost of the Articles That Will Be Required

A TREAT FOR CHILDREN

$2,000 was the approximate figure to cover the equipping of the Great War Veterans' new club rooms, decided upon at a meeting of the provisional committee of the Ladies' Auxiliary, and representatives of the Veterans and citizens' committee, held at the City Council Chambers on Saturday evening. The citizens were represented by Mayor Duffus, Alderman Dobbin and Mr. G. N. Gordon, while the Ladies' Auxiliary and the G.W.V.A. had a full representation present.

The figure decided upon followed a report from the ladies who had interviewed city dealers and secured an estimate of the cost of the articles required. The proposed equipment will be necessary for general meetings, club chairs, card tables, board tables, a telephone, a desk and other similar articles, while other things that were considered necessary for the comfort and entertainment of the veterans were added at Saturday night's meeting. These include a piano, a pool or billiard table, and a piano, a stove, the latter being a necessity on social evenings when refreshments are to be served.

It was decided to have the committee report the result of their work to a general meeting to be held at the Grand Opera House, and to be called by His Worship Mayor Duffus as soon as is convenient. An effort will be made to have Comrade Norman Knight of Ottawa, the Dominion Secretary, whose eloquent address on his last visit here made a great impression, to address the meeting. On this occasion too, the organization of the Ladies' Auxiliary of the G.W.V.A. will be completed on permanent lines.

A Treat for Children.

The G.W.V.A. have received a cheque for $50 from Mr. G. N. Gordon with the suggestion that it be made the nucleus of a fund by which the Veterans may undertake the holding of a Christmas treat for the children of Peterborough soldiers overseas. The G.W.V.A. will take up this matter in the near future and will endeavour to give the little ones a time that they will remember.

The Campaign.

At Saturday night's meeting it was decided that teams should be formed and a campaign to secure the necessary funds organized started immediately after the public meeting which will likely be held next week.

CO-OPERATION OF SOUTH AMERICAN FLEETS IS LIKELY

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

(By Lowell Mellett.)

PARIS, Nov. 26.— Co-operation of fleets from South American allies is to be one of the points discussed early in the sessions of the Inter-Allied Conference.

Brazil, with her splendid navy and good merchant marine, is anxious to lend fullest aid to her allies. The announcement was made here to-day that a meeting of represenatives of all the allies to discuss the economic and industrial situation, would be held in London soon. Assistant secretary of the Treasury, Oscar T. Crossby, will represent America at this conference. The members of the American Mission to-day continued their conferences with French officials. Col. House expected to see Premier Clemenceau again this afternoon. Yesterday, although Sunday, saw no let up in the round of conferences in which all the Americans participated.

LOCAL LIST AGAIN HEAVY

Well Known Peterboro' Boys Are Officially Reported Killed in Action or as Having Died of Wounds

TO-DAY'S MILITARY NEWS

KILLED IN ACTION.

Corp. S. J. Staples, formerly of the 93rd Battalion machine gun section.

Pte. G. A. Boyce, 2nd Battalion, Peterborough.

—DIED OF WOUNDS.

Pte. Harold Lebarr, formerly of the 93rd Battalion, 160 Charlotte street.

Pte. G. Vincent Mulligan, Canadian Army Medical Corps, 804 George street.

Pte. Andrew Sodum, formerly of the 93rd Battalion, Peterborough.

GASSED.

CORP. S. J. STAPLES.

Word has been received in the city that Corp. S. J. Staples, a former member of the machine gun section of the 93rd Battalion, is officially reported killed in action on November 6th. Corp. Staples, who was known to his many friends in the battalion and throughout the city as "Dick," was one of the little squad who came to Peterborough from Port Hope early in the autumn of 1915 to join the 93rd Battalion. He was a comrade of Jack Tutton, died of wounds, as [illegible] Albert Micks, who is missing. Corp. Staples went to England with the 93rd machine gun section and was transferred to the 1st Canadian battalion at the front. His mother is at present living in Rochester, N.Y. The young soldier had many friends in Peterborough who will be shocked to hear that he has given his life for the Empire.

PTE. G. A. BOYCE.

Another original Peterborough member of the 2nd Battalion, is officially reported killed in action to-day, in the person of Pte. G. A. Boyce. Pte. Boyce enlisted here in the first few days of the war with the 57th Regiment's quota, and left Peterborough in August, 1914 for Valcartier, going overseas as a member of A company, 2nd Battalion, under Major Bennett. In the charge of A company at Langemarck on April 23rd, 1915, Pte. Boyce was wounded and was in hospital in England for some time, afterwards returning to the firing line. His relatives are in England.

PTE. HAROLD LEBARR.

Mrs. L. Lebarr, 160 Charlotte street, received official word from Ottawa yesterday that her son, Pte. Harold Lebarr, formerly of the 93rd Battalion, is officially reported to have died of wounds at the 6th British Red Cross Hospital, Etaples, on November 19th. The news will be received with deep sorrow by a large circle of friends, and by the citizens generally. Pte. Lebarr, who was twenty years of age on the 8th of November, was reported wounded a short time ago, and then a second message a few days afterwards stated that he was dangerously ill. Mrs. Lebarr had received a letter from him written after he had been wounded, in which he said he had several operations to remove the shrapnel from his wounds. Pte. Lebarr was among the first to join the 93rd Battalion and also among the first to be drafted to France after Lieut.-Col. Johnston's battalion reached England. He was a bright, likeable youngster, who had a host of friends in the city.

His father, Pte. Lewis Lebarr, who also went overseas with the 93rd Battalion, is now in France with a Canadian Labour Battalion. The bereaved family will have the sincere sympathy of the city in their sorrow.

PTE. VINCENT MULLIGAN.

Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Mulligan, 804 George street, received an official message from Ottawa yesterday, stating that their son, Pte. Vincent Mulligan, is officially reported to have died of wounds on Sunday, November 18th. Pte. Mulligan was wounded on November 4th and his death occurred two weeks afterwards. The young soldier—he was only twenty years of age—enlisted in London, Ontario, with the Canadian Army Medical Corps, going overseas last spring and crossing to France a short time after. When he decided to enlist he was a student at Moody's Bible Institute in Chicago. He was a young man of strong Christian character and his death leaves a vacancy that will be hard to fill.

Pte. Mulligan is survived by his parents, and by three sisters and one younger brother. They will have the sympathy of the citizens generally.

Mr. R. R. Hall at Saturday Night's Meeting Dealt With the Importance of This Problem to Which the Borden Government Has Been Utterly Indifferent—Series of Scandals Call For Complete Change.

MR. DANIEL O'CONNELL'S ADDRESS

Arraying the grave, insistent exhortations of the three leading statesmen of Great Britain against the chicane political appeal of the Borden government designed to distract attention of the electors from five long years of "the rottenest government Canada ever experienced," and to divert the people's wrath from the big interests, the overlords and directors of the Borden administration, and from the grafting camp followers who have waxed rich on the country's war expenditures, Mr. R. R. Hall convinced the Saturday night audience at the rally that the continuance of reinforcements to the Canadian army is not the most pressing problem before the Dominion today. He showed on the testimony of leaders of the Empire's destiny that conscription is not even of secondary importance. Lord Northcliffe, who, it has been said, wields greater power than any other man in the world, Lord Rhondda, the British Food Controller, and Sir Eric Geddes, head of the Admiralty were the anxious witnesses. Mr. Hall called to emphasize the Allies' present needs of, first ships, and second food. Mr. Hall's argument was simply this: If the British government required men above all other resources needed for victory, would they not have said so? As a matter of fact Canada has already sent overseas a far greater number than was asked or expected of us.

"Lord Northcliffe," said Mr. Hall, "aware of what Canada had done in this war, that she had sent 400,000 of her men, that she had been in the war from the very beginning, knowing also that the United States was raising an army of 1,000,000 men to send to France (and had the United States contributed in proportion to Canada's recruits would now have 5,500,000 men in her army), Lord Northcliffe said that he did not see the signs of that bridge across the Atlantic without which all the recruiting, all the enthusiasm and energy would be useless to the Allies in Europe.

Therefore I entreat you to believe,' Northcliffe had urged, 'that your army without transports will be valueless'."

Lord Rhondda, Britain's Food Controller, has stated that during the coming year Canada and the United States will be called upon to supply England with 10,000,000 tons of foodstuffs, at a total cost of $1,250,000,000. "The danger does not lie so much in the submarine peril as in the world's shortage of cereals, meats and fats."

These supplies can be obtained from nowhere else except America, and if there is a failure to provide them, victory may slip from our grasp."

"I have failed to find in Sir Robert Borden's speeches one single constructive policy to stimulate the production of food in Canada." Nothing in the utterances of any of the so-called Union government representatives indicates that there has been the slightest move toward a well conceived plan for the increased production of food in the one place from which the Allies are expecting greater supplies.

PRIVATE SOLDIER IS COMMANDER OF MOSCOW DISTRICT

City is Completely Under the Control of the Bolsheviki Military Committee—Shops Are Open But Business is at a Standstill

CLASSES VS. MASSES

Canadian Press:

LONDON, Nov. 26.—Moscow is under the complete control of the Bolsheviki Military committee, according to the Petrograd correspondent of the Daily Mail who visited Moscow last week. M. Moralofu, a private soldier, has been appointed commander-in-chief of the Moscow military district. The streets are filled with crowds of sightseers, the correspondent says, and the shops are open, but business generally is at a standstill, as everbody is discussing politics.

All administrative offices are in confusion.

The relations between the classes and the masses are more strained than ever before, and the masses are being told that the classes will have to pay their wages.

The Bolsheviki have ordered the banks not to pay out more than 150 roubles weekly on each account, but according to the correspondent, the average family in Moscow cannot exist on this sum. Proclamations have been posted alleging that the Bourgeoise is blocking efforts to provision the army and to provide funds for the support of the government. They are signed by Lenine and Trotsky.

The committee on the salvation of a revolution in a proclamation to the army declares that the last step of the Bolsheviki is final ruin for Russia.

The Bolsheviki have taken over the State bank in Moscow, whose vaults are estimated to contain seven hundred million roubles.

STILL HOPE FOR FRANK STATEMENT OF ALLIES' AIMS

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

(By Carl D. Groat.)

WASHINGTON, Nov. 26th. — That England and France are balking at making a revised statement of their war aims, and at publishing any secret war treaties was hinted in authoritative quarters to-day. This, however, has not discouraged the United States government' in its desire to have such a show down. Though the Paris Inter-Allies Conference may not deal with the subject directly, the press publication of the Russian State document showing secret diplomacy gave impetus to American hopes for a frank statement. These documents revealed that Russia was to have her say in the peace council as to the alignment of the eastern frontier and France was to be the arbiter on the western front.

Varty Remanded For Another Week

Walter Varty, the young Belmont township man who is held on a charge of having set fire to a house in Havelock belonging to J. B. Pearce, on November 17th, was remanded for another week, when he appeared before Magistrate Langley in the Police Court this morning. Mr. G. N. Gordon, solicitor for the accused, objected to the postponement. He was prepared to proceed with the case, and had his witnesses present.

Crown Attorney Hatton replied that the evidence had to be obtained from the country and required more time than usual to obtain.

Chief Thompson explained that he didn't know until 10 o'clock on Saturday night that an adjournment would be necessary.

QUEANT ALMOST SURROUNDED BY THE BRITISH TROOPS

Head of German Switch Line Imperilled by the British Hold on Bourlon Village—British in Possession of Dominating Heights

CAMBRAI IS USELESS

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

(By William Philip Simms.)

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES IN THE FIELD, Nov. 26.— The sixth day of Gen. Byng's great drive to-day saw Cambrai and Queant both wobbling from the great crack in the Hindenburg lines and the everlasting battering of the British troops. The Crown Prince Rupprecht's garrison at Queant head of the "switch line" is directly imperilled. The town is almost surrounded.

Cambrai is useless to the enemy.

To-day it had been cut off from Queant by the British hold on Bourlon Village. The Queant defenders therefore had only a precarious line of communications. To the north the dominating heights of Bourlon have been saturated with German blood, chilled in mad assaults to take this promontory. Whoever holds Bourlon Wood holds a constant menace over the land for miles on either side. The Wood itself has been literally blasted away. The village is a crumbling powder of ruins. The whole German sector is rocking with the shock of the impact of the British battering ram.

Mr. Gordon's Warm Reply To Review

Hasn't Made a Political Speech in East Peterborough For Five Years He States

Mr. Gordon gave the following statement to the Examiner this morning:

"The Review, in Saturday's edition, stated that I appeared at a public meeting supporting the Union Government and then addressed a meeting in Havelock in behalf of the Laurier candidate, who is opposing Mr. Sexsmith. I wish to say that I have learned this if they had made Havelock or East Peterborough for five years, and the Review might have learned this if they had made inquiry. As far as Mr. Sexsmith is concerned he is not a Union candidate but he is just hanging on to try to get Senatorship. He pulled out $15,000.00 from the last Parliament, and the only thing he ever did was to get a few jobs for his friends.

As far as Mr. Johnston, his opposition, is concerned, he is a far better Win-the-War candidate than Mr. Sexsmith ever was or ever will be, and he believes in conscription, with a reasonable and fair exemption for those in food producing occupations, while Mr. Sexsmith has stood by and let the Pork Barons wax fat on the earnings of the workingmen without a word of protest."

NEPHEW OF R. R. HALL GASSED IN FLANDERS

Mr. R. R. Hall received word to-day that his nephew, Private W. R. Hall, has been gassed in the battle that is going on in Flanders. Mr. Hall's brother William lives in the township of Fenelon, is a farmer and has only two sons. His son George was killed at the battle of Vimy Ridge and now his other son is gassed, which invariably carries with it prolonged suffering and serious consequences.

MONDAY, NOV. 26, 1917

THE HOLY CITY.

The Germans are beginning to accustom themselves to the preliminary course of the menu by the taste of "sour grapes" in preparation for the descent of humble pie" they will be taking before long—hey are telling their people that "Jerusalem is of no military value"; simply because they can't hold it. The possession of Palestine has been counted among the plums of conquest which Germany expected to pluck out of the war. It was for its possession that the Kaiser paid the tremendous price of apostacy from Christianity by joining bloody hands with the "unspeakable" Turk, that has sacriligiously held the cradle land of Christianity under the thrall of persecution and oppression, two-thirds of the Christian era.

It will not be one of the least of the strange experiences of "God's Chosen People" if they come into possession of the Hold Land through the working of the religion, whose Divine Founder they persecuted and killed. Nor would it be less than an act of wonderful poetic justice if the possession of the Holy Land should be restored to the Jews by the English notion, which sent Richard of the Lion Heart forth upon a crusade to save their country from the heathen amidst cruel persecution of the Jews at home.

The provision for the exchange of Class A eligibles by Canada and the United States of their respective subjects reduces the loophole of escaping military service to a very small size.

TAKE IT ALL.

There is every prospect that the Victory Loan will be greatly oversubscribed. The call is for 150 millions, and it is probable that there will be great disappointment to many if their offerings are not allotted and that after they have shown their patriotism and given practical evidence of their desire to selp Canada in her war work, their services, in the shape of their money, when popular service is is universally demanded, are rejected.

According to appearances the war will drag a long time yet, and in that event there will be demand for more money. Would it not be well, therefore, to take all the offerings of our people while they are in the vein?

If, however, by some happy process of fortune the war should end sooner, Canada will need money to finance the tremendous work of reconstruction that will have to be done when the war ends, and the country has to adjust the abnormal conditions that have prevailed for the past three years. The artificial stimulus to industrial and other production will be withdrawn and if the war should end soon, the conditions of disorganization in all deportments of the national life will have to be met; and there can be no doubt that money available for national purposes in this connection will be most useful.

In this connection too, it will not be amiss to have the money in the hands of the government available for use at a time of possible industrial stress; if the slump, the period of reaction, the hard times, which many gnanciers believe will follow the ending of the war, comes upon us. If money is needed for national enterprise; to help the country over the hard spots, it will be hard to get it from the people; they will not have the abundance of means they possess to-day.

Abundance of employment at high wages the past two or three years has enabled the people to make the splendid popular response to the appeal of the Victory Loan that is now being made.

It would seem, therefore, that taking everything into consideration, forecasting possible conditions of industrial and commercial disorganization, it would be well for the government to accept all the money that is offered from the Victory Loan. The chances may never be so favourable again for getting money for national purposes that may be needed, at a time when appeal to the public for a loan would not, because, in the nature of things, it could not be so generously met.

Besides there is an international reason for accepting in full the loans made by citizens of our United States allies. Henry Ford, of Detroit, has subscribed a million, and the American Federation of Labour has subscribed $35,000, divided amongst several International Unions. This fine spirit of international comradeship and cooperation in the fight for liberty, of which the instances mentioned are by no means the only evidence, should be practically appreciated and not be discouroged as might be done by refusing allotment to part of the subscriptions made.

Suppose the Victory Loan of 150 millions is over subscribed one-third, acceptance of the full amount of 200 millions will place the country in possession of ready money which might well be useful for the "rainy day" that may follow the present prevalence of the sunshine of prosperity, that helps our people to place their money freely at the service of the country through the Victory Loan. The interest obligations arising from an additional fifty millions would not be great—only two and a half millions a year, and the money will thereby be coming back to the people; and no one has a better right to the benefits of it.

The women of Canada are not politically mercenery. They are working as hard for the soldiers, as if they had been given the right to vote.

ORATORICAL OPTIMISM.

It would be pleasant if we could all share the optimism of Hon. Mr. Rowell. Speaking at Stratford of the benefits of the Union Government, he said:

The steps taken to control food profits, were more radical than any piece of legislation yet enacted in the States or in England. There had been abolition of the patronage system in appointments to office and in the purchase of supplies. The War Purchasing Commission were giving its services to the nation gratis.

None of us have noticed that "the steps taken" have reached and particular point of relief to the public suffering under the burden of high prices. If high prices for food are due to piratical profiteering, not very much has been done to control food profits. When the people are called upon to make big sacrifices to give their sons and their money to the cause and the Government they should be freed from the grip of the harpies who hoard food to create scarcity and raise prices. To the Unionist politicians—for they are politicians who shout the shibboleths of the politician and use his methods—the people may not seem to be objects of prompt solicitude. But the people think of these things and demand something more substantial and price-cutting than oratorical platitudes and optimistic generalities. That the common people think of the apparent futility of food control is shown by a heckler in Mr. Rowell's audience, asking:

"What about Hanna?"

Mr. Rowell's answer was a patent evasion — "Mr. Hanna is giving his services without one cent of reward."

It is not much to the credit of the Food Controller's unfeed services that the results, as far as affecting prices and ending food profiteering bear a very close relation to the extent of his "reward".

Canada's Need Will Be Conservation And Development

While after the war European nations will need restoration and reconstruction, Canada will need conservation and development That the period of pioneer achievement is not over in this country but has entered upon a new phase, is one of the points emphasized in the valuable report of Mr. Thomas Adams on rural planning and development, just issued by the Commission of Conservation, Ottawa. The question is not whether we will grow but how we will grow. Mr. Adams who has made a life study of his subject, points out that broadly speaking, we require to lay emphasis on the following needs as a means of conserving human and natural resources in connection with any policy inaugurated in the future:

(1) The planning and development of land by methods which will secure health amenity, convenience and efficiency, and the rejection of those methods that lead to injurious speculation.

(2) The promotion of scientific training, improved educational facilities for securing co-operation, rural credit, and development of rural industries.

Out of the total area of 2,306,502,-152 acres of land in Canada, it is computed that 358,162,190 acres of land are capable of being used for productive purposes. The population of the Dominion in 1911 was 7,206,643 or 1.9 persons to each square mile of territory. We have 35,582 miles of railway, or about one mile to every 200 persons, providing means of distribution by railway in advance of the needs of commerce. The natural resources may be said to be unlimited in extent, subject to proper conservation and development; and the means of distribution by main railways may be regarded as capable of no limitation in meeting demands for many years to come. But, while there is practically an unlimited quantity of natural resources, and of railways to distribute them, we are limited in the economic use to which we can put them. "Wealth is produced," Mr. Adams reminds us, "not from the existence of natural resources but from the conversion of these resources into some form for human use. Canada is seriously limited in actual resources by the extent to which it lacks sufficient population to apply the human activity necessary to adequately use and distribute its resources. Hence there is nothing so vital in the interests of production in Canada as to conserve and develop human life—not merely to conserve the physical qualities, but also to develop the intellectual qualities." Mr. Adams' volume is well worth a careful perusal by those who have in hand the problems of national development.—Monetary Times.

We still have the walls of cold storage houses bulging with their hoarded supplies and the withheld contents contributing to a scarcity that hoists prices and lines the pocket of the food profitters.

Sir Robert Borden, in his disfranchising act, denied fair play to a large body of electors, and his reception in iKtchener is a naturally indicated dose of his own medicine.

Editor of the Examiner.

Sir,—Those who fail to hear Dr. T. T. Shields at Murray Street Baptist Church to-morrow night will miss a rare treat. His lecture, "England in War Time," has created a sensation in Toronto, and has given Mr. Shields an added fame throughout Canada. It is well known, of course that for several summers Dr. Shields has taken two months' vacation from his church in Toronto, and that during these two months each year he has preached to the immense congregation of Spurgeon's Tabernacle London. This experience has given him an unusual opportunity of sizing up the situation in England each year of the war, and The Toronto Saturday Night has given him the credit of being one of the best informed men in Canada on the conditions in the Mother Country. He has also made a special study of the Canadian Army overseas, and his lecture is full of interesting sidelights concerning our boys at the Front.

It is expected that Dr. Shields will have a capacity house to-morrow night, and those who wish to avail themselves of the opportunity of hearing the foremost pulpit orator deliver his famous lecture would do well to be at the church in good time.—Yours truly,

Anglo-Canadian.

Business Girls' Club Hold A Food Conservation Tea

Interesting Event Was Held in the Curling Rink on Saturday

A practical demonstration of the adaptability of Miss Canada to the new food regulations was made on Saturday afternoon by the Business Girls' Club, who held a tea in the Curling Rink, conducted entirely on the lines of food conservation.

Brown bread, delicious brown bread sandwiches, cookies and tea, with cake conspicuously absent, was the unusual menu for the afternoon—all so deliciously prepared and daintily served that nobody missed the regulation accompaniment of afternoon tea, cake.

Dainty Decorations.

The decorations, all in harmony with the "rainbow tea" idea, were charmingly original and tastefully carried out by the decoration committee. Gay strands of many-coloured crepe paper interwoven covered the walls, the lights wore pretty shades of pink and blue, even the costumes of the charmingly pretty girls carried out the rainbow colour scheme, each wearing white dresses and dainty caps of coloured paper.

Mrs. F. C. Neal, honorary president of the club, poured tea.

Receipts $110.

The tea was a success in every way especially financially, $110 being realised.

Bogus Sergeant Is Brought Back From New York

TWEED, Nov. 24.—Private James Henderson, whom the police and military authorities have been looking for for the past two weeks, was arrested in Bridgeport, Conn., and is now in the county jail at Kingston, where he will remain for a week, when he will face trial. Henderson is accused of passing a number of fraudulent cheques in this vicinity and other places. He posed as Sergeant McDonald, of the Canadian Military Police in Montreal and other cities, and at the request of the military authorities was followed as far as Bridgeport, where he was arrested, accused with stealing an automobile in Plattsburgh, N.Y.

Henderson, it will be remembered, had a chequered career in the different towns of the district, by posing as a military police officer running down deserters. He would arrest a deserter and then proceed to pass bogus cheques in the different places he worked.

A man describing himself as Sergeant McDonald, afterwards found to be Henderson, of the Canadian Military police, and accompanied by a private of the Canadian army and a sergeant of the American army, left a prisoner in a cell at Paterson police headquarters, directing that he be detained for them for deportation to Canada as a deserter. Since then the action of the two sergeants and the private and the protests of the prisoner have been such that the police decided to investigate.

After a Paterson bank had notified the police chief that Sergeant McDonald, accompanied by a Sergeant McCurley, of the American army, had tried to have a cheque cashed there the chief sent round to the United States hotel and found Pte. Matthew W. Wall, of the Canadian Army.

WILL ROUND UP "FAKE" OFFICERS

NEW YORK, Nov. 24.—A concerted country-wide effort to round up "fake" British army officers who it is said, have imposed on the American public in many ways, is to be made by British army officials now in New York, it was announced today. An investigation has disclosed, it was said, that at least fifty men posing as British officers, are now operating throughout the country. A recommendation has been made to Washington whereby all subjects of Great Britain repotred as undesirable by British officers, will be deported.

The British officers here are indignant over impositions practiced upon Americans by the alleged representatives of the army. One man is said to have registered at one of New York's most exclusive hotels and succeeded in borrowing $70000 from elderly women. The impostors have been able to get unlimited credit in other hotels.

One alleged officer is said to have dined with American army officers, upon representations that he was a colonel in the British army, and actually took part in a review of troops.

A Man's Worth is Measured These Days by what he is Doing for the War

The hero of to-day is the man in khaki, who is fighting the Hun. No doubt of his claim to the laurel crown. In secret we tearfully marvel at him. In public we cheer him until the rafters ring. If he has gone from our own fireside, human shortcomings are forgotten: our love verges on idolatry.

Soldier, sailor and aviator, you have set a gauge by which the conduct of the rest of mankind is measured. The world applies it to us. Are we Women and Men at home facing our responsibility in the same heroic spirit?

Our duty at the present moment is clear. The call has come to invest in Canada's Victory Loan. The Government has appealed to us to lend our money for the purchasing of food, munitions and other equipment for our army overseas. Therefore we must save—sacrifice if need be—and buy

LOCAL BOY IS PROMOTED TO MASTER SALESMAN

Linden A. Richardson Scores Success in the League of Curtis Salesmen

Linden A. Richardson, a local boy, has just received the news of his promotion to Master Salesman in the Vocational organization known as The League of Curtis Salesmen.

This Vocational League embodies a plan for vocational guidance and training, which has attracted the attention of educators and progressive business men throughout the country. The League is composed of the most efficient boys engaged in the selling of the periodicals issued by The Curtis Publishing Company, Philadelphia, and is a part of the great nation-wide movement which is striving to—

Keep the boy in school longer; to educate him in the particular subjects which will help him most when he leaves school; and to help start him in the kind of work for which he is best fitted.

The League of Curtis Salesmen is the concrete application of this plan. Any school boy is eligible to qualify for membership in The League. After he becomes a member, he may, in the course of time, after fulfilling certain requirements, advance to Master Salesman. Linden is now a Master Salesman. When he has finished his schooling, The Curtis Company guarantees to secure for him, upon request, a salaried position with a reputable concern in or near his home town — a position which, from the Company's knowledge of his ability and inclination, offers him an opportunity to develop and advance.

It will be good news to the many friends of this boy to learn that in earning his promotion, he has made a record for initiative and for successful salesmanship. One of the qualifications for his new honour is that his school work in all studies has been exceedingly satisfactory.

There are two adult male salesmen for every male bookkeeper in the country. Salesmen enjoy higher salaries than bookkeepers. Every commercial high school teaches bookkeeping. Yet almost none of them teach salesmanship.

Speaking recently of The League of Curtis Salesmen, Charles W. Eliot, former President of Harvard, said:

"The method of The Curtis Publishing Company, in enlisting a large number of boys who are still at school, in selling its publications, and teaching them how to sell the journals to the advantage of the Company and to their own profit, gives a useful example of co-operation between schools and industrial companies in the training of boys. It is a first-rate example of vocational training, given by a commercial company during the period of school life.

"It has kept thousands of boys in school longer than they would otherwise have stayed there; it has taught them thrift and accurate accounting—an invaluable lesson; it has given many thousands of boys a knowledge of the art of selling journals which easily becomes available in many other businesses; it places many boys in good situations on well-grounded recommendations, when, being fit for larger service, they leave the employ of The Curtis Publishing Company. The Curtis Method has thus been a great service not only to more than 50,000 boys, but also to employers in a large variety of industries."

Says Premier's Speech Was Camouflage

Distracted Attention of the Germans From General Byng's Preparations

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

LONDON, Nov. 26.—It remained for Major Moraht, Germany's military critic, to discover to-day one of the reasons for Premier Lloyd George's "brutally frank" speech at Paris recently. Moraht in articles just received here from Berlin, is struck with the inspiration that Lloyd George's disagreeable remarks and his scolding of the Allies distracted the attention of the Germans from the west front and offered an effective camouflage for Gen. Byng's preparations.

CHARGE THAT OTTAWA ENUMERATORS HAVE BEEN CANVASSING FOR VOTES

OTTAWA, Nov. 24.—Although admitting that there have been grave irregularities in the taking of the census for voters, by some of the enumerators, Sheriff Richardson said that so far no arrests had been made. The situation was rather a difficult one to handle he seemed to feel.

Specific complaints have been received from interested parties showing more irregularities. The Journal Newspapers received a telephone call from a Wellington Ward resident, who stated that the enumerator in his ward began his work by first asking, "Are you or are you not in favour of conscription?"

The fact that certain enumerators went so far as to violate their duties by acting as political canvassers for votes has caused considerable commotion in the city. Many complaints have reached Sheriff Richardson that this has been done, the enumerators holding out inducements to certain parties showing them advantages which would accrue if they voted a certain way. Referring to the matter, Sheriff Richardson stated that while arrests might be made, time was passing and it was essential that no delays occur if all voters were to be placed on the list in time to vote.

If certain enumerators were apprehended they would have to be given a fair trial and this would involve considerable time. He stated that some offenders had been warned against their present tactics and he hoped that these warnings would eliminate errors and abuses.

From the present situation, however, it seems certain that there will be very many appeals to be placed on the voters' lists, as the enumerators have in many cases not taken sufficient trouble to investigate at different homes to ascertain who were entitled to a vote.

Carelessness or stupidity are assigned as the causes for this. Instances are reported of enumerators asking children certain questions as to whether any one in their home was a soldier and accepting their answers as sufficient, without the children really being able to understand what the information was needed for, or how important it was.

One effect of so many eligible voters being left off the list will be to increase the work of the deputy returning officers on election day, as many of these voters will have to be sworn in on that day, if they want to vote. This will occupy considerable time, and perhaps tie matters up worse.

WHAT THE GERMANS ARE SAYING

The Pan-Germans are raging furiously because the hopes they founded on Michaelis have been brought to naught. At present they are venting their wrath on Kuhlmann, whose speech on Belgium although far short of what the Allies could accept, showed clearly that the German hope of retaining Belgium and the Belgian coast must be abandoned. Reventlow, writing in the Deutsche Tageszeitung of October 12th denounces Kuhlmann as a friend of England. "Kuhlmann" he says, "was the champion of Bethmann-Hollweg's policy of an understanding with England. Shortly before the break with England, he declared that England would never take part in the war. He further asserted that if he had returned to England sooner he could have prevented the breach. Finally, he proclaimed the U-boat war to be madness, and said that Holland would break with Germany as the result of it. Kuhlmann looks on the war with England as a misunderstanding; he does not see the deep, underlying causes of British aims in the war against Germany. He also does not, or will not, understand the vital importance to Germany of the Belgian question." In a very remarkable sentence he refers to Kuhlmann's bombastic assertion that Germany would make no concessions to France in Alsace-Lorraine." And so it appears that even the fire-eating Count Reventlow has begun to realize that Germany will have to give up a good deal, but differs only from Kuhlman as to what is to be given up. The latter would evacuate Belgium, but is "bombastic" about Alsace-Lorraine, the former would evidently be prepared to treat with France as to Alsace-Lorraine if only Belgium could be retained as a jumping-off place against hated England. The successes of the Allies on the Western Front are beginning to drive some sense into the brains of the German politicians; yet a little longer and they will come to the happy agreement that both Belgium and Alsace-Lorraine have to be restored to their rightful owners. The recent French victory, in which all the objectives were attained and over 8,000 Germans captured, came at a happy time and in a happy place to hasten the process of bringing the Germans to reason. So recently as Oct. 11 Baron von Ardenne, one of the leading German military critics writing in the Berliner Tageblatt, singled out that region as showing clearly the exhausted condition of the French armies. "Activity," he said, "was limited to local attacks in the angle of the Aisne and Oise, north-east of Soissons, also east of Rheims and on the right bank of the Meuse. This fighting of course, had only limited objectives. It is of no serious significance, and shows that the French are more and more leaving the heaviest work in the dying general offensive to the British." An unhappy prediction indeed.

Whilst Germany continues to pay lip service to the idea of peace by agreement, the settlement of disputes by arbitration and the limitation of armaments it becomes more and more clear that the Pan-Germans consider the approaching peace not as anything more than a time of preparation for the next war. Vice-Admiral Galster, in an important article on the value of Flanders to Germany, contributed to the October number of the Preussische Jahrbucher, discusses how it might be used in war against England. He decides that the present headquarters behind Heligoland are much more suitable for the High Seas fleet. "If we look to the future, it is a fact that the conditions in Flanders are very suitable for minor skirmishing, but very unfavourable for the work of the High Seas fleet of battleships. It therefore does not seem worth while to build a base harbour in Flanders, if we retained possession of it and there were no technical difficulties in the way"—"Dover is about sixty miles from Ostend, and the mouth of the Thames at its nearest point is something like 55 miles. It is only a matter of two or three hours for light naval forces from Flanders to reach the English coast. For that reason the proximity of the Flanders coast to England is most favourable for the use of our submarines, torpdeo-boats and airships. The war has proved conclusively that it is possible to derange the traffic between London and Holland to an enormous extent, in spite of all the defences and safeguards in the way of mines, steel nets and patrol boats, and the use of innumerable aeroplanes; and it also shows that the nearness of our bases in Flanders is of the greatest advantage for our submarines acting in the English Channel against the merchant shipping there. "Not much sign of preparation for, or intention of, a county of the nations in these arguments. So also at the other end of Europe, German ideas relate to a future of war and of preparation for war rather than to a future of peace. The German engineer, Dr. Kohlpr, Inspector in the Ministry of Public works at Constantinople, has been reported on the advantage of a continuous water-way from the North Sea to the Persian Gulf. "The waters of such a continuous highway," he wrote, "would afford a means of getting German light war-craft, such as U-boats, torpedo-boats, and destroyers unnoticed and unchallenged form the North Sea to the Black Sea, and even further."

The Necessity of Sleep

Scientists Underwent Voluntary Test — Few Endured 90 Hours.

The question of how much sleep is necessary for the health of human beings has for long been of interest to scientists. In order to test the effects of wakefulness on the system, a number of scientific men some time ago agreed to be forcibly kept awake for ninety hours, or nearly four days and nights, and to be watched by colleagues throughout that period. At intervals of six hours various tests were applied to the experiments to determine the condition of their memory, vision, motor capabilities, and so on.

Only three "victims" were able to endure to the end, but, curiously enough, it was discovered that all three maintained a steady increase in weight during their time of trial, although after they went to sleep at the end of the experiment their weight decreased very perceptibly. Those who have ever suffered from insomnia will thoroughly appreciate the courage of these investigators who wilfully abstained from "Nature's sweet restorer" for nearly four days and nights!

FINGER PRINT ALL GERMANS

New York May Keep Elaborate Check on Aliens.

NEW YORK, Nov. 24.—In addition to plans to bar aliens from New York citys skyscrapers and other buildings where a view of the waterfront may be obtained, it is announced that a plan is under consideration by Federal and police authorities which calls for the finger-printing of every male German subject above the age of fourteen years in the city.

If this proposal is approved the police will be entrusted with the task of obtaining the finger prints of 130,000 Germans here. All aliens will soon be obliged to report to the police precincts in which they reside, according to the present plans. Each alien will be required to give a detailed history of himself from the time he arrived in this country. After registration he will receive a card bearing his photograph, which will serve as a pass to zones other than those along the waterfront or near munition plants and military works.

"THE ONLY GIRL"

Here Next Saturday For Two Performances

Here Next Saturday For Two Performances.

Patrons of the theatre will find pleasurable anticipation in the coming production of the musical comedy success, "The Only Girl," which will play an engagement at The Grand on Saturday next, matinee and evening. "The Only Girl," which is the combined work of Victor Herbert and Henry Blossom, is rich and brilliant with many charming melodies, and a really bright and unusually clever book.

The play is built around four bachelors who decide that no woman shall disturb their lifelong chumship. The curtain rises with three of them following each other to tell the fourth, a young librettist, that they have each found "The Only Girl," and despite their former relations, they each get married and try to maintain their former companionship. At a little dinner, six weeks after they announce their decision to marry and after their honeymoon, in the apartment of the librettist, jealousy among the three women spoils the affair.

In the meantime the fourth, unable to get a man as a composer, discovers a charming collaborator in the same building, in the person of a young lady. At first he refuses to consider her as a composer of his opera, but at last decides that they shall collaborate without any sentiment, as though they were machines. Love interferes with progress, and finally, despite the arguments of the married trio and the insight he gains into their domestic troubles, he decides upon a partnership with his fair composer that is quite the opposite of the one at first decided upon.

The company is said to be of exceptional brilliance, and includes Charles Fulton, Harry P. Young, Jesse Willingham, Charles Hall, E. F. Nagle, Rupert Graves, Julienne Costa, Raienier Cain, Louise Peyton, Annette Berger, Ethel Wayne, Katherine Williams, Carla Richman, and a great big beauty chorus.

LEADER OF JAMESON RAID DIES IN LONDON

Canadian Press Despatch:

LONDON, Nov. 26. — Sir Leander Starr Jameson, aged 64, died to-day in London. He was the leader of the Jameson raid on the Transvaal in 1895. He fought in the battle of Krugersdorp and surrendered to the Boers. He and his officers were taken to Pretoria and sentenced to be shot, but subsequently turned over to the British and sentenced to fifteen months in prison. After his release from prison he returned to South Africa and was Premier of Cape Colony from 1905 to 1908. He was knighted in 1911.

TRIBUNAL No. 275

COURT HOUSE.

Judge Huycke, Police Magistrate Dumble, Members Lt.-Col. E. B. Clegg, Military Representative

Joseph Vincent Shaughnessy, a farmer residing in Otonabee, was exempted until he ceases to be employed as a farmer. Shauchnessy produced a statement setting forth the amount of produce raised on the Shaughnessy farm.

"That's a good statement," commented Mr. D. W. Dumble.

Exemption Refused.

Roland McNaughton divides his time between operating the G.T.R. swing bridge at Nassau crossing the Trent Canal and assisting his uncle to run a farm close at hand.

Judge Huycke was of the opinion that a less efficient man could operate the bridge. The applicant has three younger brothers. His father and younger son work a 40-acre farm.

Lieut.-Col. Clegg thought that both the Grand Trunk and the applicant's uncle should get other help and release McNaughton for military service. The claim was disallowed.

A Quartette.

J. J. Leahy, Vincent Leahy, and B. Leahy, three brothers, all applied for exemption.

"Don't any of you want to go to war?" asked Judge Huycke.

J. J. and Vincent Leahy have not been examined, so the Court ordered the two men before the Medical Board for examination. Thomas, a fourth brother, has been examined, and will appear before the Tribunal to-morrow in company with his brothers. The Leahy brothers reside north of Nassau.

Judgment Deferred.

Frederick Goselin, 51 Crescent St., a carpet weaver at the Brinton Carpet Company's plant, applied for exemption on the grounds of ill-health and also in regard to the importance of continuing his present line of employment. Applicant enlisted in the 93rd Battalion, but was discharged on account of ill-health.

Mr. Turner, manager of the company, will be invited to appear in person in support of the company's claim for the exemption of Goselin.

The applicant has six brothers three are under military age, one is an E man, and the fifth man is in Class II.

R. E. Hinton, an employee of the Canadian General Electric Company claimed to be unfit to withstand the hardships incident to military life. Applicant also informed the Court that he was a university student having graduated from Queen's University in 1913.

"Don't you know that the Queen's University graduates of 1913 are all at the war?" inquired Judge Huycke.

Hinton said he would not have remained to appear before an exemption tribunal had he felt certain that his physical condition justified a military career.

Hinton was sent up for re-examination.

To Be Re-examined.

Gordon Richard Martin, a munition worker, took sick a couple of months ago, and his claim for exemption was based on physical grounds.

"You don't expect us to discredit the word of three doctors?" said Judge Huycke.

Martin was sent up for further medical examination.

Walter Brown was lost to view in a coonskin coat. Brown was instructed to visit the City Hall Tribunal, where he was slated to appear.

Was Disallowed.

Augustus Condon, 587 Sherbrooke Street, claimed exemption on domestic grounds, having been married since 6th July. Applicant also claimed to have rheumatism and to be financially responsible for certain payments on property. A brother of Condon's has reported for service.

"You were defying fate when you married after the proclamation," said Judge Huycke.

Condon's claim was disallowed.

Exemptions Refused.

Alexander Downey, 1821-2 Hunter Street, was exempted until Class II. is called.

Stafford Sullivan, 508 Sherbrooke Street, was refused exemption.

E Men Exempted.

George Walton, 23 George Street Alfred D. McDonald, 2 Crescent St. and Crawford J. Best, 501 Water Street, all C men, were exempted until C Class is called. The medical category of Best was originally A2, but this was changed to C3 on re-examination

Regie Windsor, 27 Ware Street, and Joseph H. Wilson, 212 Barrie Building, both B men, were exempted until B category men are required.

William F. Franks, 199 Simcoe St. an A2 man, was exempted until the first of March, 1919.

HEAD BLEW OFF MATCH CAUSING A SMALL BLAZE

A lighted head of a match which struck a mattress caused a fire, the extent of damages of which amounted to $51.50, at the home of Mr. A. Record yesterday afternoon at 5.28. The Fire Department was summoned but arrived to find the fire extinguished by the occupants of the house, and the contents of the room in which the fire occurred damaged to the extent of a burned mattress, bed clothing and wall paper and a ladies' skirt.

The fire was the fourth consecutive Sunday afternoon call Chief Grange has had.

Chimney Fire This Morning.

A chimney fire gave the Fire Department a call this morning at 6.30 to the home of Mr. J. Collins, 43 Lafayette avenue. A two gallon chemical extinguished the blaze and no damage was done.

General Sessions Of the Peace On December 18th

The December sessions of the County Court will open in Peterborough on December the eleventh and adjourn until December the eighteenth. On Saturday it was announced that the court would open on the fourth, but this was incorrect so far as Peterborough is concerned. Jurors attending this court will be required to present themselves on December 18th. The adjournment is for the purpose of enabling His Honour Judge Huycke to complete his duties in connection with the tribunals.

My Limbs Would Twitch

AND WAKEN ME—UNABLE TO REST OR SLEEP I WALKED THE FLOOR IN NERVOUS STATE—WHEN SPECIALISTS FAILED I FOUND A CURE.

Windsor, Ont., November 26. — This is the kind of cure that has set Windsor people thinking and talking about Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. The action of this food cure is so radically different to the usual treatments for the nerves that everybody wants to try it. Gradually and certainly it nourished the starved nerves back to health and vigor and the benefits obtained are both thorough and lasting.

Mrs. M. Smithson, 27 Arthur St Windsor, Ont., writes: "I was suffering from nervous breakdown, which was caused by a shock when fire broke out in the adjoining huose. My nerves were in such a state that after going to bed I could not get my nerves quieted down sufficiently to go to sleep. I used to get up and walk around the room or go downstairs. Even when I would be dropping off to sleep my limbs would twitch and waken me. I used to have cold, nervous, night sweats, sometimes would become unconscious and lie that way for quite a little time. I was always cold and it seemed impossible for me to get warm or keep warm. When on the street I would see two or three objects at once, and did not want any person to speak to me or bother me. Any little noise irritated and annoyed me very much. I had consulted specialists and tried many remedies during this time but could not gain relief. At last I tried Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and before long could see that this treatment was proving of benefit. I am now feeling so much better that I can go out on the street without any difficulty, can go across the river, and go about the same as usual. I sleep well at night and am feeling more like myself every day. I am pleased to be able to write you to tell you how much goodtheNerve Food has done me. It has strengthened and built up my whole system. I am recommending it to everybody I find suffering from nervousness of any kind."

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, 50 cents a box, a full treatment of 6 boxes for $2.75, at all dealers or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto. Do not be talked into accepting a substitute. Imitations only disappoint.

BONNER-WORTH COMPANY READY TO CELEBRATE

The Bonner-Worth Company are now ready to celebrate the next British victory in fitting style. Messrs. J. J. Turner have just finished erecting a large flag pole on top of the factory, and a big Union Jack has also been secured from the same firm.

Notice To Township Councils

Mr. Burnham has sent out notices to the reeves and councils of the townships of the west riding that if they wish to interview Sir Robert Borden regarding exemptions or other important matters, he will arrange an interview for them at the Empress Hotel previous to the meeting on Friday evening between the hours of 6 and 7.45 p.m.

MAY DECLARE WAR AGAINST GERMANY'S ALLIES

Canadian Press Despatch:

WASHINGTON, Nov. 26.— Declarations of war against Austria, Turkey and Bulgaria," Chairman Stone, of the Senate Foreign Relations committee declared to-day, "seem exceedingly advisable to simplify the situation which is now anomalous. "We are in fact," said he, "at war with Germany's allies."

THE WEATHER

Lowest temperature, Sunday morning, was 4 above zero; this morning the thermometer stood at 9 above. The highest yesterday was 20. Continued cold weather stillt prevails north and west, and there is no prospect of any immediate decided change.—W.P.

EDWARD EARLE HAS GAINED 14 POUNDS

Gets Complete Relief From Suffering of Five Years Standing

When I tell you I have gotten complete relief from five years of suffering and have actually gained fourteen pounds in weight besides, you can readily see why I think so highly of Tanlac," said Edward Earle, of 17 McGregor Avenue, Toronto. Mr. Earle is a well-known union carpenter, employed in the Canadian Pacific shops and has lived in Toronto for the past eight years.

"My stomach was all upset," he continued, "and so out of order that I couldn't digest anything. I had no desire for food of any kind, and what little I did eat would lay in my stomach like lead. I would bloat up terribly with gas and had sharp pains in my sides and all around my heart. My tongue was always coated. I had a bad taste in my mouth and would have dizzy spells when it seemed like a film of skin would form on my eyes and my vision would fail me. My sleep was poor, I was out of sorts all the time, felt tired and sluggish and had no energy. I really dreaded to eat anything because I knew how I would suffer afterwards.

"This is just the condition I had been in for five years, and while I tried all kinds of medicines I kept getting gradually worse until I read about Tanlac and began taking it. It's the only medicine I have found in all these years that I could conscientiously recommend to my friends. My stomach trouble has disappeared entirely with all the gas, pain and other bad feelings and I'm feeling well and strong in every way. My appetite is fine and I know I am getting nourishment from my food or I could never have gained as much in weight. I sleep good every night now, all my weak, dizzy feelings and bad taste are gone, and all this good has come from two bottles of Tanlac, for I have just started on my third. Tanlac is my medicine from now on and I believe anybody suffering like I did will do well to try it."

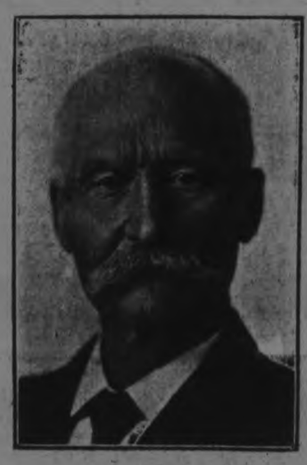
366 GEORGE STREET . . . NEAR SIMCOE ST



To the Electors of East Peterborough

Ladies and Gentlemen,—

I have the honour to accept the unanimous nomination of the Liberal Party to contest the election as a candidate to represent the people of East Peterborough in the House of Commons.

Now is the time in the history of this country when we should be guided by true Liberal principles and stand by the masses as against the classes; stand by the people who earn their bread by the sweat of their brow and against the classes who exact unjust profits and extortionate tolls out of even the very necessities of life.

The profits made by War Profiteers should be investigated. The profiteer should be made to disgorge his excessive profits to be used to increase the pay of our soldiers, their mothers, wives, sisters and dependents. None of them should ever be subjected to the indignity of cold charity by this grateful Nation on whose behalf they have suffered or died.

I have no confidence whatever in Sir Robert Borden who supplied our troops for many months with the Ross rifle and defective ammunition, which he must have known would jam and become a useless weapon after our Canadian boys had nobly entered the battle. The Ross rifle was used by our troops in six battles. In each battle the rifle jammed, and many a Canadian soldier was needlessly killed of wounded, and some of them languish to-day in German prisons justly cursing the Borden Gobernment without a chance of voting against it.

We must destroy the parasite, the profiteer, the grafter and the camp follower, who are our worst enemies, and fight our common foe with all the resources at our command.

I appeal to the women of this Riding, who are casting their vote for the first time, to act on the pure impulse of their hearts alone, and vote according to the dictates of their own conscience. My heart goes out in sympathy for them in these anxious times.

Let us unite our people in this Great War as the armies of Great Britain and France are united, marching and fighting side by side—the parents and guardians of Freedom and Justice.

With firmness in the right as God gives us to see the right, I appeal to you fellow electors to press on to a finish the great war in which we are engaged; to bind up the nation's wounds; to care for him who shall have borne the battle and his widow and orphan; to do all which we may achieve, and to cherish a just and lasting peace with all nations.

For these reasons I appeal to you my fellow electors for your vote and influence in the pending election on Monday, December 17th next.

Your Obedient Servant,

W. H. Johnston.

Executors' Sale of The J. C. Turnbull Co. Stock

ALTHOUGH the first two weeks of our Great Stock Reduction Executors' Sale has been away beyond our expectations, it does not satisfy the Toronto General Trust Corp., the Executors of the late Mr. F. J. Might's Estate.

We have been ordered to CONTINUE THIS SALE until our stock has been reduced to figures set by them.

Commencing Wednesday morning, we will start another drive to meet their demand.

Profits will be sacrificed, for the large stock must be reduced.

Watch Tuesday's paper for sale, which will continue all week, with additional daily ads.

John Alphonsus Shevlin, 229 King street.

Edward Harold Carew, Aylmer and Hunter streets.

Cyril Edmond Sullivan, 11 Park street.

Roland Gordon, 120 Lock street.

Joseph Frederick Shaughnessy, Haggart street, is indispensible to the Brinton Carpet Company, according to his appeal for exemption, which was urgently supported by Mr. Turner, the manager of the company. He is an expert weaver of Axminster carpets, with eight years' experience, all of which he obtained with this company.

"Our company has sent 25 men," Mr. Turner said, "and we are asking exemption for four men. Mr. Shaughnessy and his brother are two of them."

Shaughnessy operates a special loom of which there are only 18 in Canada and 25 in the United States. There are only three operatives for eleven looms in the Brinton factory. A further depletion of the staff would be a serious setback to the factory, and financial loss to the company.

"Your manufacturing a luxury," Mr. Aylmer stated, but Mr. Turner disagreed with that opinion, or interpretation of essential industries.

"A wise Government," he declared, "will not destroy its own industries." This was one industry that should be preserved.

"The Government wants men for military purposes," Mr. Aylmer replied, "and although this man is experienced in your work, we can't see that we are able to do anything else. You have the right to appeal to the Deputy Registrar at Kingston.

"We can't replace him in five years," Mr. Turner replied.

"Look at this in a broad way," Mr. Aylmer pursued. "We have grocers and others applying for clerks required in their businesses. These men are just as important to them as this man is to your company. But they are no more important to the general public than is this man's work." Exemption disallowed.

John J. Corkery of Otonabee works 190 acres with his father. Ninety acres are in South Monaghan. Last summer 140 acres bore a harvest. One brother, 16 years old, is also at home, another who works out with farmers has been refused exemption by the tribunal at the Court House, and there is another brother farming in the west. Decision referred.

Say He Is Rheumatic.

Charles Gordon Emery, 332 Water street, said he had no work at present. He mentioned rheumatism and a weak hip as disabilities the doctors didn't discover.

"I dont understand why you fellows didn't tell the doctors about your infirmities," Mr. Moore commented. Exemption refused.

Took It With a Smile.

David Clarence Green, 354 Stewart street, came up smiling. He is an inspector of munitions at the Henry Hope Company, and said he was supported in his appeal by the superintendent of the company.

"They have put in no claim for your exemption," Mr. Aylmer replied.

"I guess that means I go over." Mr. Green smiled "beating" the tribunal to the disallowance of his exemption.

Wanted Transfer to Montreal.

John James Lindsay, 496 Charlotte street, said he had applied for a transfer to the Montreal tribunals for the reason that he was going to work with the Metal Products Co.

"You're here now, we might as well proceed with it," said Mr. Moore.

Lindsay claimed exemption on the grounds that he was engaged in munitions work and also because of ill health. He said he hadn't told the doctors of his illness. Exemption disallowed.

Thomas Murray, 425 Charlotte street, was rated an "A 2" man by a Quebec tribunal, but claimed the doctors hadn't discovered disabilities he had neglected to mention to them. Rheumatism was one of his infirmities. He was sent up for examination by the local medical board.

Two Brothers in Khaki.

John Henry Graham and Walter Brown, Otonabee farmers, were exempted as long as they remain at that work.

Two Brothers in Khiki.

Hubert Joseph Legros, 322 Water street, with two brothers overseas, was exempted until the second class is called out. His father met with an accident and the son is carrying on his business.

Music & Drama

SEVEN DAYS' LEAVE.

A submarine, sunk by destroyers in full view of the audience, the thwarting of a clever pair of German spies, a love story of great interest, speeches tingling with patriotic fervor and scenic investiture considerably above the average, combined to make the military play "Seven Days' Leave" at the Grand Opera House on Saturday afternoon and evening a most enjoyable success. The play is frankly a melodrama of the old school, too, but the military atmosphere, as imparted by the fact that most of the principal male characters are in khaki, make the production most effective. As in other war plays that have been seen here the story is woven around the machinations of German spies. In this case they adopt the guise of Belgian refugees and their objective is the securing of information about a new British gun. Major Terence Fielding of the Royal Horse Artillery, who comes back to England on seven days' leave, has the information they require and they plan to abduct Fielding through the medium of a German submarine and extract the secret from him. How Fielding, with the assistance of his sweetheart, Lady Mary, fools the spies and secures the destruction of the German sub. by British destroyers, forms the story of the play. Lady Mary swims out to a buoy to give the signal for the submarine to come to the surface and immediately the searchlights of the destroyers locate the menace of the seas and two accurate shots do the work. The scene is a most realistic one.

The acting throughout was good, but not as smooth or as finished as it will be in a few weeks, as the American company only commenced its tour last week and Saturday night's was only the fifth performance they have given. The cast is a strong one and the play should have a good run on this side of the Atlantic. The English production is still running in London.

44,400 Communions At Sacred Heart Church During Year

The congregation of the Church of the Sacred Heart celebrated the anniversary of its opening yesterday. At the 8.30 o'clock mass there was a large number of communicants and the high mass at 10.30 was sung by the pastor, Rev. J. J. O'Brien, assisted by Rev. Peter McGuire, as deacon, and Mr. Michael O'Brien as sub-deacon. Pontificial Vespers were sung by His Lordship Bishop O'Brien, and Rev. Father McCarthy, of Norwood, preached an eloquent sermon. During the past year there have been 44,400 communions, an increase of several thousand over the largest number in any previous year. One of the special works enlarged by the pastor of the Sacred Heart church is the St. Augustine's advanced Catechism and Bible history class for High school pupils and boys and girls who are working. Father O'Brien has given this class his special attention with very gratifying results. The enrollment is large and the pupils who complete the course, extending over several years, receive a handsome diploma. The class room in the basement has been enlarged and adequately equipped, and is also used for little social gatherings, which Father O'Brien has inaugurated.

PTE. ANDREW SODUM.

Pte. Andrew Sodum, a former member of the 93rd Battalion, is officially reported died of wounds. Pte. Sodum enlisted here just before the 93rd Battalion left for Barrietield camp. He was transferred to another Canadian battalion in France and a few days ago was reported wounded. Now Ottawa announces that his injuries have proved fatal.

GUNNER J. R. PEARSON.

Mr. Harvey Pearson received official word on Saturday that his son, Gunner James R. Pearson, of the 26th Battery, is officially reported gassed on November 13th. Gunner Pearson enlisted here with the 26th Battery under Major Hall early in 1915 and went to Kingston with the 26th. He was then transferred to the Canadian Remounts and trained with that unit at St. John. After going overseas he was sent to a base camp in France in connection with breaking and training horses, and after a month's service returned to England and transferred to his old battery, the 25th. He has been on active service on the western front, going through the Somme battle and the Vimy Ridge engagement.

ST. ANDREW'S CHURCH NEWS

Monday evening at 8 o'clock: The Young Ladies' Mission Band are meeting in the School Room, and each member is earnestly requested to be present. This is an important meeting.

Tuesday afternoon: The pastor, Rev. Mr. Rowand, will be visiting the members of the congregation residing on Rubidge Street, south of Brock Street. The regular mid-week prayer meeting is being abandoned for this week in favour of the union prayer meetings being held on Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock in the George Street Methodist Church and Knox Presbyterian Church.

Thursday afternoon, from 2.30 to 5.30: The ladies of the Red Cross Society will meet for sewing, etc.

Thursday afternoon: The pastor will be visiting the members of the congregation residing on Aylmer and Bethune Streets.

Friday afternoon and evening: The Young Ladies' Mission Band are holding a tea and sale of useful articles, home-made cake and candy in the School Room, from 4-6 and 7-10. The ladies are invited to bring their knitting. A special invitation is extended to the gentlemen to be present during the evening.

Next Sunday evening the Rev. Mr. Jull, of Lakefield, will conduct the service.

On Thursday evening, 6th December, a special get-together social is being arranged for the men of the church, when it is hoped that all the men of the church will endeavour to be present. A splendid opportunity for men who are strangers in the city to get acquainted. Be sure to keep this evening open, as we need your presence.

Yesterday morning the Rev. Dr. Robertson, of Toronto, conducted the service, and in the afternoon addressed the Sunday School, also meeting the teachers and officers in a discussion of Sunday School matters. A most interesting and profitable time was spent, and it is hoped that we will be able to have Dr. Robertson with us again in the near future.

The flowers on the organ of St. Andrew's Church yesterday were in memory of Lieut. Stewart Laing, son of Mr. and Mrs. George S. Laing, who was killed in action a year ago.

Leaders of The Empire Declare Food The Allies' Greatest Need

Sir Eric Geddes has sounded a warning, Mr. Hall continued, that the war is likely to drag into 1920. What is the government of Canada doing to prepare for the Allies' increased requirements of food in the intervening years?

"There are millions of acres along the C.N.R., C.P.R. and the G.T.P. in the Northwest all ready for the hand of man to turn with the plough. But the Borden government has no vision, it offers no plan to assist Great Britain, to supply the growing needs for which Canada is peculiarly responsible. It continues to serve the grafters and parasites without intelligent thought and direction toward the mighty problems before the country.

"Sometimes we feel," declared Mr. Hall, "that if there were German agents in charge on Parliament Hill they couldn't do more to bring about the defeat of the British armies in Europe."

Mr. Hall related the experience of ex-Lieutenant Governor Brown of Saskatchewan who, by the use of tractors, that replaced one hundred horses, made a big success of his western farming. The Government, Mr. Hall stated, should long ago have inaugurated a policy by which thousands of these tractors could have been put to work on the immense tracts of the finest grain lands in the Dominion, kept idle by the railway corporations. It is too late this year to make a beginning, but from 100,000,000 to 500,000,000 bushels of oats could be grown next spring. This crop would help feed the stock of Ontario and the west. Flax seed could also be planted on the broken sod. There were hundreds of ways of increasing the production of foodstuffs on a vast scale not only for the feeding of the Allies, but also to curtail the advancing cost of living here at home. The government deliberately refuses to hear the call of Rhondda, Northcliffe and other statesmen, and offers no plan, makes no effort to meet this tremendous problem."

"Their criminal conduct is all the greater in their pursuit of a policy that is diametrically opposed to what the British government asks."

The Military Service Act in Quebec.

Mr. Hall discussed the operation of conscription in Quebec as compared with the vigorous action by the military tribunals in Ontario. With the knowledge and consent of Borden and the Nationalist, Mr. Sevigny, 96 2-3 per cent. of the applications for exemption in the cities are allowed. That is, only three out of every hundred men in Montreal, Quebec, Three Rivers, Hull and other towns are conscripted, and in the country districts not a single farmer is taken. They are all exempt. It is estimated, Mr. Hall stated, that under the Military Service Act no more than 5,000 men will be secured from the entire province of Quebec. The other 95,000 of the 100,000 conscripts will be taken from English speaking Canada, and the greater part from Ontario.

Should Be Equal Burden.

The Military Service Act, Mr. Hall recalled, was supposed to distribute the sacrifice of men proportionately on all parts of the Dominion. "Apparently Sir Robert Borden intends to take more men from the farms in Alberta and Saskatchewan, more men from the Maritime provinces and from Ontario than from Quebec."

"Is that justice?" Mr. Hall demanded. "Is that a law that commends itself to your idea of fair dealing. The Military Service Act is meeting with the disapproval of the people because of its rank injustice and because it is defeating the object and desire of the Canadian people who have at heart a strong determination to win this war.

How Can We Serve Best?

Referring to Sir Wilfrid Laurier's manifesto, Mr. Hall spoke of the proposed conference with British authorities to ascertain how Canada's resources could be best utilized for winning the war. "We don't want to be more British than the statesmen of Britain" observed Mr. Hall.

Laurier says to the British officials: "If you want men, then we will find them; if you want food we have the greatest granary in the world." But let us organize efficiently for the greatest influence and power we can exert in the prosecution of the war.

Government Made No Sacrifice For Soldiers.

The Borden government, Mr. Hall said, attempted to pose as the friend of the soldiers. Since the war commenced the cost of living has made big advances, munition workers have received unheard of wages, but there have been no adequate increases to the soldiers' wives and mothers who expected at least that they would be maintained as well as if their men hadn't gone to fight for their homes and their country. The Borden government had neglected the interests of the soldiers and their families. Judging by the spirit of the people of Canada, no body of men could be got together in Ottawa that would desert or withdraw support from the soldiers and live in office a single week.

"The soldiers would be better in the hands of Sir Wilfrid Laurier than in the care of those who put Ross rifles in their hands, rifles they knew would jam. Ask the returned soldiers their experience with the Ross rifle—there are many you can never ask. Knowing they were armed with the Ross rifle by Sir Robert Borden himself, they will know how to mark their ballot on December 17th."

Mr. Daniel O'Connell.

"I don't think there is in any part of the Dominion, with the possible exception of Nationalists in Quebec and prisoners in the internment camps, any man who is not exceedingly anxious that the war be brought to a successful conclusion," said Mr. Daniel O'Connell of Toronto, formerly of Peterborough, in a speech that turned the light upon many, but only a fraction, of the scandals of the Borden administration that have become cynical jokes in the assemblies of Canadian men, from that of the high-priced spavined horses down to Flavelle's "to hell with profits" hypocritical objurgation.

"The Borden Government says it has raised and sent overseas 425,000 men. I appeal to your experience that while the men responded to the call to the Colours that response was voluntary. And you will bear me out that from the experience of this county, as from the whole country, the regiments were not raised by the actual co-operation or assistance of the Borden Government. They were raised by the efforts of the patriotic people of Canada who gave their time and their talent to go into the cities, towns, villages, and out into the townships night after night, making patriotic speeches, sounding the need of the country."

This was the method employed, Mr O'Connell declared, in raising that very illustrious 425,000 men whose deeds of courage have reflected imperishable glory upon the name of Canada.

Government No Friend of Soldiers.

What has the Borden Government done for the soldiers? Men who remained at home, preferring to make munitions, received wages up to $10 a day, while the soldiers who had gone forth prepared to die for their homes and freedom were paid the insignificant and pitiable pittance of $1.10 a day. The other men secure at home enjoyed a prosperity the like of which they had never known before. Big as their pay was, the men at home found it almost impossible to make a living as a result of the depredations of the packers and other marauders of the people. With the Government indifferent to the sacrifices of the soldiers and their families, with the old rate of pay for three years, had it not been for the patriotic people of Canada the families of the soldiers might have been brought to extreme hardship and the verge of starvation. The first Patriotic Fund in Peterborough amounted to $60,000, the second to $70,000, and the third soared to $100,000. And thus it was everywhere. It was the patriotic people and not the Government that recruited the soldiers and paid millions of dollars toward the support of their wives and families.

Rotten Equipment.

Following up this question of what the Borden Government actually did for the soldiers, Mr. O'Connell referred to the Ross rifle, which, he said, had never been tried out in war, but with this weapon Canada's volunteers were armed to face the greatest military force the world had ever seen. In the heat of battle this rifle jammed, and for a year and a half it remained in service until the complaints of the soldiers became loud and insistent. It was impossible to tell how many lives had been sacrificed uselessly when rifles failed.

In the 1917 reports it was shown that $6,000,000 had been spent on these rifles, and at that time not a single one of them was in the hands of the soldiers at the Front. But they had the audacity to vote the further sum of $2,000,000 for the supplying of the men at home with Ross rifles, and only when the company was unable to maintain its supply was the Government released from its contract.

Rotten Boots—Ancient Horses.

To Mr. Ames, one of the coterie of manufacturers that control affairs in this Government, was given an order for hundreds of thousands of pairs of boots. Out of 1,000 pairs examined, not a single shoe was found fit for service. The men discarded them in Halifax and Valcartier, and wore shingles on their feet or tied the old boots on with rags. It was found that the soles had been interwoven with varnished cardboard.

This was the Government that posed as the protector and solicitous friend of Canada's valiant soldiers.

Mr. O'Connell passed over the graft in the purchase of horses, including the equestrian relic which it was shown had been too old for service at the time of the Boer War, yet it drew a big price in its purchase for service with the great war expeditionary forces.

But this was only a patch on the munitions graft, Mr. O'Connell said, and after recalling the sordid story of Honorary Colonel Wesley Allison and his $1,000,000 rake-off in a fuse contract, Mr. O'Connell passed on and on from one scandal to another showing that the Borden Government was the friend only of its masters, the big interests, and that the only soldiers who were accorded any consideration were the "Honorary Colonels."

Government of Puppets.

"The fact to remember," Mr. O'Connell explained, "is that the class of people who are ruling this country are not the men at Ottawa. They are mere puppets in the hands of the National Trust Co., McKenzie and Mann, Sir Joseph Flavelle, Sir Thomas White, and the rest of the big interests."

Mr. O'Connell said he was sorry to have to mention Sir Joseph Flavelle, a former Peterborough man. "Sir Joseph" obtained a bacon contract from the British Government on a cost basis. He got a carte blanche order and went up and down the country buying all the hogs he could, regardless of price. It made no difference to him what he paid; he was sure of his profit. As a result of this method of buying hogs, the price of pork soared until it was almost beyond the means of the average citizen.

Mr. O'Connell referred to the Flavelle honours of the hereditary title of baronet, of his "to hell with profits" outburst of puritanical hypocrisy. "He was preaching sacrifice and noble and high ideals," Mr. O'Connell observed; "he was committing the profiteers to hell while he made $2,000,000 personally and his company made $3,000,000 with his specially favoured contract."

The Classes Against the Masses.

"If any question of importance has ever been before you, this is the greatest you have faced since you were born. It is a fight of the masses against the classes, of the common people against privilege, for freedom of speech and for our democratic institutions."

Mr. O'Connell touched lightly upon the C.N.R. deal, by which the stockholders are given $10,000,000 for stock the Government and Canadian people had under mortgage. The debts were greater than the assets but a commission was appointed to arbitrate the value of this stock, with $10,000,000 as the minimum fixed by the Government.

"And some of those who made the loudest protests against that steal are now included in the so-called Union Government." The acts the Borden Government has been guilty of—the corruption, graft, and dishonesty, especially during the years of the war—have been so stinking in the nostrils of the Canadian people that in his trips about the Province Mr. O'Connell had found a determination that on the first opportunity the people would put this Government, the most dishonest the country had ever seen, out of power and keep it out of power while this generation lived.

The Disfranchisement Act.

To perpetuate themselves in office the Borden Government made up their minds to hold their position by hook or by crook. The terms of the Disfranchisement Act were so unjust that the Liberal party in their indignation rose in a body and made the strongest protest. The votes of 10,000 or 15,000 soldiers from the United States will be allocated in any place they are needed by the Government to thwart the desires of the Canadian people at home.

Mr. O'Connell agreed that the women had a perfect right to vote, but the relatives of soldiers were not the only women whose patriotic labour since the commencement of the war deserved the recognition of the Government.

"They have gone further than the British ever thought of going. It has ever been our boast that this is a country of religious freedom." But Mr. O'Connell pointed out that the Mennonites and Quakers are disfranchised "if they seek exemption on the grounds of religious conviction." These people have proved themselves worthy citizens in times past and have invariably raised the standard of living in their communities.

By this breaking faith with these people, "the Huns at Ottawa have dragged the honour of Canada in the mire."

Same Old Trickery.

always played by such men as Flavelle who cried out 'to hell with profits" while he was making millions. In 1911, they waved the old flag, prostituted the Union Jack, appealed to the racial and sectarian feelings of the people. In Quebec they spoke of shooting holes in the flag they waved in Ontario. They spoke of no truck and trade with the Yankees, and they have been doing nothing else since they came into power. Sir Thomas White has borrowed hundreds of millions of dollars in the United States, and where would the Allies be to-day were it not for the aid, the billions of dollars, the munitions, the food, received from the United States?

"But they'll not deceive the people now," Mr. O'Connell predicted. "As they waved the flag in 1911, now they are crying Conscription. The Imperial authorities never asked for four divisions of Canadian troops; they asked only for three. In August we had 176,000 men in reserve, and were raising reinforcements at the rate of 5,000 a month. I ask you, don't you think that it is the emptiest kind of hypocrisy to try to tell us that the Canadian ranks will be depleted in a few months unless Conscription is immediately resorted to?"

Mr. O'Connell emphasised the complete lack of plans and of vision in the Borden Government. General Mewburn stated that it is not a question of 100,000 men, but of two or three hundred thousand men, or as many as will be required.

Farmers have been ordered by Tribunals to sell their farms within two months and report for service.

They are making the same mistake Britain did when she sent her skilled mechanics to war in the early stages and had to call them back again. Just as surely will Canada, if she persists in taking men from essential industries, if she persists in that folly; assuredly will she have to bring them back again, if it is not too late.

Mr. O'Connell spoke of the opposition shown by farmers to the severity of the Military Service Act, and stated that it was everywhere conceded that Canada's first duty was to increase her production of food.

Mr. J. J. Hartley, who presided as chairman, stated that Mr. Hall's campaign in this riding was now in full swing. He had met with splendid encouragement in the back country, and the prospects in the city were bright. "Mr. Hall's election is practically certain and we must leave no stone unturned during the next month. We never had a representative so energetic and faithful as he nor one who carried more weight in Parliament. To him is due the credit of obtaining for Peterborough the fine Armories we possess."

Mr. Hartley reminded the audience of the fact that a weekly rally will be held in Victoria Hall every Saturday night.

To the Electors of East Peterboro

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN:—

I believe no greater disaster could, at the present time, befall our country than the defeat of the Borden Union Administration at the polls on December 17th.

The Policy of this Administration is the speedy and continuous reinforcements of our Canadian troops on the battle front; and the putting forth of all our National strength for the cause of civilization and freedom.

To carry out this Policy, a number of Canada's ablest Public men of vision—sinking for the present all political differences now stand together—strong to battle for the right—united to WIN the WAR.

For over three years thousands of Loyal Canadians of many creeds and of different Nationalities, have stood shoulder to shoulder on the Battlefields of Europe, gallantly fighting a common foe, and sometimes standing, sometimes falling, have won for the name of Canada undying fame. Shall we, with all possible speed, send help to these, our heroic defenders now holding the battle-line or shall we break faith with them as well as "with those who die"—delay—vote—while the enemy advances?

As a Union Candidate in this Riding, I am putting forth every effort to win East Peterborough to the support of the Borden Union Administration and if elected shall to the utmost of my ability support the same.

To this end I now earnestly solicit the co-operation and influence of every loyal, patriotic man and woman in East Peterborough.

I have the honor to be, faithfully yours,

J. A. SEXSMITH

Here Next Wednesday, with Rea Martin the Leading Role.

For the coming attraction at the Grand Opera House on Wednesday, November 28th, the United Producing Co., Limited, by special arrangement with Oliver Morosco, will present the comedy "The Brat," by Maude Fulton. While the plot of "the Brat" has to do with a homeless street waif, who is found in a police court by a novelist and taken to his home as a type to be studied it is clean and wholesome. The development of the uneducated yet worldly wise young girl through her change of environment is splendidly worked out. The play is interpreted by a cast of well known players. The cast includes Miss Rea Martin, who plays the part of "The Brat," Bert L. Robinson, Arthur La Rue, Leonora Gnito, Agnes Lee, Edna M. Holland, Arthur Pacie-Ripple and Edwin Burke. OBITUARY

JOHN B. McWILLIAMS.

The death took place at noon today of John B. McWilliams, a lifelong resident of the city, at his home, 558 Gilmour Street, in his 73rd year.

Further particulars will be given in to-morrow's Examiner.

JOSEPH YOUNG.

The death occurred at Young's Point yesterday of Mr. Joseph Young, a lifelong resident of that place. Deceased has been ailing for a number of years. He is survived by two children, William and Loretta, both at home. A brother, John, residing in California, and a sister, Mrs. DuBoise, of Denver, Colorado, who is at present here. The funeral will take place on Tuesday morning at 9:30 o'clock to St. Mary's Church and cemetery at Young's Point.

MARJORIE SULLIVAN.

Marjorie Sullivan, daughter of Mr and Mrs. John Sullivan, Detroit, died this morning at the residence of her grandfather, Mr. Louis Fobert, of Bridgenorth, after a long illness. Deceased was born in Durand, U.S. 18 years ago, where she has resided practically all her life.

The funeral will take place on Wednesday morning at 9 o'clock from Mr Fobert's residence to the Young's Point Cemetery.

JOHN SANDERSON.

John Sanderson, for many years well-known residen of Peterborough, died on Sunday morning, aged 78.

Mr. Sanderson has not been in good health for some months, having had a sunstroke during the summer, but his death following on a weak spell on Thursday, was quite unexpected.

Deceased was born in Cavan, Ireland, and came to Canada in 1883 settling in Emily and Smith, later moving in 1889 to Peterborough. He retired from business some years ago. In religion he was a Presbyterian, in politics a staunch Conservative. He leaves of the immediate family two sons, Fred of Peterborough, and Joseph, who went overseas with the 93rd and is now in the hospital in London England; one daughter, Mrs. W. J. Kirk, at whose residence, 262 Hunter street, he died; and two brothers Robert of Monaghan, and Edward of Scotland.

The funeral to the Little Lake cemetery, will take place on Tuesday, at 2.30, service conducted by Rev. Mr. Pogue at the residence of Mr. Fred Sanderson, 267 Hunter Street, at 2 o'clock.

SPECIAL MEETING OF THE G.W.V.A.

There will be a special general meeting of the Great War Veterans' Association in the Recreation Rooms of the Armouries tonight at 7.30 o'clock. A full attendance of members is requested, as business of importance is to come up. As many members as possible are asked to be on hand.

Mr. R. R. Hall's Reply To Questions Put Forward By "Review"

The Review newspaper asked Mr. Hall the question,

"Would he, if elected to Parliament, vote for the immediate enforcement of the Military Service Act, or would he favour Sir Wilfred Laurier's policy and demand a referendum?"

Mr. Hall answered on Saturday night that

"The Military Service Act is now the law of the land and must be obeyed, but the Act requires revision. It would be a disgrace to Canada to comply with this Act in its present form and take only 5,000 men from the Province of Quebec and the remaining 95,000 from English - speaking Canada when as a matter of fact Quebec should send 70,000 men to the front before Ontario could justly be called upon to contribute a single man.

"I see no necessity," said Mr. Hall, "for a referendum. Canada is in this war and must supply our Allies with men and food."

The Review further asked,

"How would he vote as between the two leaders, make Sir Wilfred Laurier Premier of the Dominion, or keep Sir Robert Borden at the head of affairs?"

"I would vote against Sir Robert Borden as leader and Premier," said Mr. Hall, "because I know from his past record he will simply blunder on from one folly to another; but I pledge myself to support any effective war measure that may be brought forward by Sir Robert Borden or Sir Wilfred Laurier, or any other member of Parliament, which will effectively prosecute the war. We must give immediate and constant support to our Canadian army. We must support them with men. We must feed them.

"I will support Sir Wilfred Laurier if he acts upon the advice of the British Government in supplying Great Britain with whatever she most immediately requires, and which will be within the resources of the Canadian people to furnish.

"Sir Wilfred Laurier has pledged himself to do this."

BRITISH AND FRENCH ARRIVE ON ITALIAN LINE

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

NEW YORK, Nov. 26. — French and British troops have now arrived in force near the Italian northern fighting front, heavy columns having marched more than 120 miles in eight days, evidently from the railway terminal in Northern Italy to the battle zone. They are reported in fine fettle and apparently are about ready to reinforce the Italians on the important line.

From the Cambrai area Field Marshal Haig reports the Germans letting down in the violence of their reaction. They failed to repeat last night their futile attacks on the British positions in the Bourlon sector.

CORPS CADET SUNDAY AT S. A. TEMPLE

The Corps Cadet Sunday at the Temple yesterday was a decided success in every way. The singing, and especially the addresses given by the Corps Cadets in the afternoon was very much enjoyed, and reflected great credit upon the teacher, Miss T. Lang, and the Corps Cadets themselves.

Miss Lang's address in the evening was a splendid one, and was enjoyed very much.

The Corps Cadets and other Guardians will have a special place on the programme on Wednesday evening.

HAVE NOT REPEATED THEIR ATTACKS

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, November 26. — The Germans have not repeated their attacks on the Bourlon positions west of Cambrai since their failure of yesterday, Field Marshal Haig reported to-day. The statement issued by the War Office reads: On the Cambrai battle front the enemy has not repeated his attacks on the Bourlon position since the failure of his attempt at midday yesterday, and the situation is unchanged. Northwest of Ypres there was considerable artillery activity on both sides early last night in the Passchendaele sector, but no infantry action developed.

GIRL MOTHER UNMOVED AS VALET RECITES STORY OF THE KILLING OF HER DIVORCED HUSBAND

Prosecutor Says He Will Prove Premeditated Murder and Ask Death Penalty—Defence Scores in Cross-Examination of Several Regarding Telephone Call.

SEVEN WITNESSES FOR STATE HEARD

NEW YORK, Nov. 27.— When the jury was completed, rapid progress was made yesterday in the trial in the Mineola court house of Blanca Errazuriz de Saulles on the charge of killing her divorced husband, John Longer de Saulles. The prosecution, restricting the opening address of the District Attorney to a twenty minute outline of the State's case, presented seven of its important witnesses.

In the cross examination of the first witnesses Henry A. Uterhart, counsel for the defendant, scored several telling points, bearing directly upon the motives animating the defendant when she summoned a taxicab to Crossways, her home near Roslyn, on the evening of August 3, and hurried to The Box, the home of her divorced husband, where she afterward shot him to death.

Julius Hadamak, the de Saulles valet, has been relied upon as one of the vital witnesses in establishing the State's contention that Mrs. de Saulles went to The Box with the deliberate, preconceived purpose of murder in her heart; that she disbelieved the false message given her over the telephone that de Saulles had gone to the Meadowbrook Hunt Club for dinner, and that she hurried to his retreat in the expectation of finding him there and taking her revenge.

Says Master Dictated Message.

Hadamak testified that the false message was dictated to him by his master, who stood at his elbow at the telephone. He swore that at the prompting of de Saulles he had said: "Mr. de Saulles will be home in an hour." The valet further affirmed under cross examination that Mrs. de Saulles had then said: "Very well, then, do no say that I rang him up. I will be right over to get little Jack."

The valet also admitted under cross examination that the mother's first question over the telephone had been, "where is Jack?" meaning the child, and that she had then asked him if he could not get the lad and bring him to her.

Defendant counsel contend that this evidence is in direct support of their theory that the mother's whole purpose, before she met de Saulles face to face and was goaded to frenzy by his flat refusal to surrender the child, had been to get to The Box before the boy's father could return in an hour from the club and to bring her baby home with her in the father's absence. In other words, it will be argued that the anxious woman believed the false message telephoned to her and acted promptly upon its purport.

The facts, also brought out from leading witnesses for the prosecution, that she had chided the taxicab chauffeur who drove her to The Box for being dilatory in responding to her summons; that she had then asked him if he knew a short cut to the place, and had promised him an additional dollar "if he should get there in time" clearly indicated not her intent to commit a crime, but her intense desire to reach her destination within the hour, before the child's father could return from the club, and so obstruct her projects.

Bullets Shown to Jury.

Witnesses for the people told in detail the story of the shooting. The bullets taken from the five wounds inflicted by her revolver were displayed in court and the flattened missile which had caused death was exhibited to the jury. Throughout the entire recital the sad faced girl mother sat seemingly unmoved. With hands resting in her lap or with arms folded over the counsel table, at the end of which she sits, she listened without for a moment betraying emotion. Seldom were her downcast eyes raised to glance at the witnesses who were testifying against her life.

Her mother was not present in court. The senora, since her prostration last Tuesday, has not been strong enough to risk another such heart strain. Behind the defendant sat in their accustomed places her brother and sister and her faithful French maid, who accompanied her on the journey that had ended in death.

At the opposite side of the court house was another group, each member of which listened eagerly to every word of the evidence. Its central figure was Major Arthur de Saulles, father of the slain man, a soldierly face and form, but a man evidently suffering bitter pangs. He had arrived from his home in Bethlehem, Pa., at the apartments retained for him in the Garden City Hotel on week days, but he had remained under the ministrations of his three daughters, Mrs. Caroline Degener, Mrs. Louise V. Heckscher and Mrs. Armide McClintock, until it was time for them to go to court for the opening of the afternoon session.

In his opening address for the defence, Mr. Uterhart said, in part: "Our defence in this case is founded on a question of responsibility. It is not disputed that the defendant's hand held the weapon that fired the bullets. But, by reason of facts, which we shall show to you clearly, this defendant is excused for the act she committed.

"Our defence does not consist of a 'brainstorm' or of emotional insanity, of the so-called 'unwritten law.' It is based soundly upon the written law, upon that statute of the State which says that no person shall be held accountable and convicted of a crime 'while labouring under such a condition of mind as not to know the nature and quality of the act, or not to know that the act was wrong.'

Mr. Uterhart explained that this language did not necessarily indicate a person who is a raving lunatic. "We expect to prove," he continued, "that the defendant on the night of August 3 was irresponsible mentally and legally, within the language of the penal law. To establish her condition on that night, however, it is necessary to go back many years. It is my purpose to sketch briefly what you will hear—or much of it—in greater detail from her own lips.

Tells of Meeting with "Jack" de Saulles.

"This young defendant is just twenty-three years and seven months old. She was born in Santiago de Chili and is descended from a most distinguished family, which has given two Presidents to that country. Her home later was in Vina de Mar, which means 'the vineyard, by the sea.' When she was eleven years old she was sent to England, where she passed three years in a convent. When fourteen years old she went back to Chile and she was only sixteen when she first met John Longer de Saulles, who was introduced to Senora Cergara-Errazuriz and her daughter. That, I think, was in February, 1911. There is no doubt de Saulles had a superficially attractive manner. He was invited to come to their house, where his friendship later ripened into a strong appear to have changed."

"He went to her mother and told her he loved Blanquita as he called her. He assured the mother he had no intention to take the daughter away to a foreign country after their marriage, as it was his purpose to settle down and remain in Chili. But as soon as he had won the mother's consent to his engagement to Blanca his intentions pear to have changed."

Defendant Attentive Listener.

During this recital of Blanquita's girlhood and engagement there was no more interested listener than the senora herself. The defendant's mother, accompanied by her older daughter, Amelie, and by her son, William, occupied their usual seats behind the defendant. During much of the day the members of Blanca's family were grouped on one side or the court room, while on the opposite side, behind the press tables, sat the father, brother and sisters of the man she had slain.

Continuing his narrative, the attorney told how it had been suggested that the Chilean mother and daughter should make a trip through the United States, going thence to Europe, John Longer de Saulles, however, opposed the trip to his own country, saying that a doman and her daughter could not travel about in America as they might in Europe, without provoking unpleasant comment. Somewhat regretfully, they followed his advice, and as "Jack" had to be in Paris, as he said, they went directly to Paris and joined him there. In Paris "Jack" and Blanquita were married on December 13, 1911.

"After visiting some of his relatives in America, after the marriage, they went back to Chili in 1912. Then it was that a cloud began to come over their lives. The administrator of her father's estate turned over to Blanca papers representing what had come to her from her father. De Saulles looked these over and then said: 'Why, this is hardy anything; it's absurd to call you an heiress.' He then told her he had no intention of remaining in Chili, as he could not afford to do so unless she could furnish more extensive resources. Blanca wrote to her mother and told her that Jack was determined to take her away to the United States to live unless he could get more money. The mother, loath to lose her daughter from her native country, offered to supply more funds from the sale of part of her Vina del Mar properties. And then, despite the condition of this little woman at the time, which was such as commonly calls for the greatest kindliness and gentleness a man can bestow, he dragged her about from one country to another.

Husband Bought Her the Revolver.

"They took a little cottage at Larchmont, where he left her alone much of the time. It was there he bought for her the revolver, and when she went out alone at night she got in the habit of taking it with her. In the latter part of November, 1912, he took her to the home of his father and mother, in South Bethlehem, Pa., accompanied by a trained nurse. He then returned to New York, and for a second time he then sold some of her stocks and Chilian securities. Going back to Bethlehem, De Saulles remained with his wife until after the birth of little Jack, which was on Christmas Day, 1912.

"Soon after the birth of his son he returned to New York again, and all I can say of his conduct at that time is that he pushed her aside and treated her most shamefully, diverting himself in his own ways. In South Bethlehem, where she was left with her baby in the home of his parents, she was most unhappy. She knew she was unwelcome there. Mrs. de Saulles, her husband's mother, then a very old woman, used to ask her how long she was going to stay and to complain about having to take care of her son's wife and baby.

"The husband and father seldom came to see his baby and his lonesome little wife. Sometimes he would telegraph that he might come at the week's end, and she would go to the station and wait for his arrival, only to be disappointed, for often he failed

Borden Meeting In Kitchener Broke Up By Organized Crowd

Kitchener, November 26. — Three or four hundred young hoodlums, on Saturday night gave Kitchener, the Berlin of pre-war days, the unenviable distinction of being the only city in Canada that has refused a hearing to Sir Robert Borden. Insulted and abused by a yelling, disorderly mob, the Prime Minister after five minutes of good tempered effort to discuss the issues before the country, gave up the attempt. For two hours, the great skating rink, crowded to the last inch of available space, was a seething inferno of uproar. Time after time incipient riots threw the audience into excited panic. Appeals for fair play, warnings and open threats hurled at the disturbers by local men, aghast at the measure of the insult to the Prime Minister, beat vainly against the overwhelming tornado of noise. Attempts to sing patriotic songs as a counter-measure were drowned with yells for "Laurier" and "Euler"—the Laurier candidate. The police did not interfere—the task was beyond them, but some of the more hot headed Unionist supporters were ready for it. One or two men jumped up on the chairs calling for volunteers to clear out the disturbers. For a moment or two the situation was serious, but calmer spirits moved quickly and prevented trouble. There were hundreds of women in the vast audience and under the stress of excitement many of them took up the challenge of the rowdies with bitter scathing taunts. Here and there women, face to face, abused each other with fiery vigor. Through it all sat hundreds of people, absolutely disgusted with the spectacle. One woman sat with bowed head and hands nervously gripping each other, repeating over and over again in a hurried whisper, "Let us set our minds above it, let us set our minds above it." Mayor Gross appealed for order. He was clubbed into silence with an avalanche of derisive yells. He returned to the charge with threats of arrest, "or something worse," and they shouted defiance. Dr. Housberger tried it, and except in moments when the uproar ebbed for the next onrush, he might just as well have been making soundless lip motions. H. M. Mowat, K.C., the Liberal whom the Conservatives of Parkdale honoured with a Unionist nomination, gave up a perspiring effort to make himself heard by the press tables not 15 feet away.

FRANCE PRODUCES LESS FOOD NOW

Food Controller Issues Figures of War Time Production There.

OTTAWA, Nov. 23.—The Food Controller's office to-day made public figures of food production in France which are far below the pre-war average. The most serious decline is in wheat, the 1917 crop being short 33.3 per cent., or 176,000,000 bushels as compared with the production of 1915. The potato crop is short 33.1 per cent., of 165,000,000 bushels. The sugar beet crop has fallen off by 67.9 per cent., or 143,000,000 bushels.

The number of cattle has declined 16.5 per cent., or 2,436,000 head. The number of sheep has been reduced by 36.6 per cent., or 5,535,000 head. There has been a decline of 40.2 per cent., or 2,825,000 head in the number of hogs.

In order to conserve its much reduced supplies of wheat, France required that not more than 80 per cent. of wheat flour may be used in making of bread, the remaining 20 per cent. consisting of rice, barley, oats, rye, maize, beans and ground nuts.

NEW WINNIPEG TRAIN

Travel between Eastern and Western Canada is always heavy in the winter months, particularly during December, with its holiday season. To meet the requirements of the public, therefore, a Special Daily Service between Toronto and Winnipeg is announced by the Canadian Northern Railway; Westbound, December 3rd to January 2nd, 1918, only; Eastbound, December 1st to January 5th, 1918, only. Thereafter regular tri-weekly service, will be resumed. A Through Tourist Sleeping Car will also be operated daily between Toronto and Calgary as part of the above special service, and connection will be made with regular daily trains between Winnipeg and Edmonton. Service between Toronto and Vancouver remains tri-weekly, leaving Toronto on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays, as at present. For further particulars apply to Thomas Mark, Town Agent or write General Passenger Department, Canadian Northern Railway, Toronto.

GRAIN MARKET

The continued strong demand for cash C.W. oats at Winnipeg, presumably by agents of the Government, forced the market up about 3 cents yesterday. Fort William in store prices are therefore quoted 3c higher by local dealers. Ontario cash oats are correspondingly firm and 1c to 2c higher, according to freights at outside points. Corn markets were slightly easier yesterday, the clear, cold weather being favourable to the bear side of the market, as improving the quality of the corn now widely was threatened with serious damage.

"THE FILM OF FEAR"

By ARNOLD FREDERICKS

"What was it about that photograph that upset Miss Morton so?" he asked. "And what has become of it?"

Duvall drew him to one side.

"Let us go to your office, Mr. Baker," he said; "I have a most important matter to discuss with you."

Baker regarded the detective for a moment in surprise, then seeing that Duvall was very much in earnest, he led the way to his private office.

"I am not a newspaper writer, Mr. Baker," Duvall said as soon as they were seated. "As a matter of fact, I am a detective, in the employ of Mrs. Morton, Ruth Morton's mother."

"A detective?" he questioned. "Why has Miss Morton's mother employed a detective?"

"Because someone is persecuting the girl by sending her threatening letters, saying that her beauty is to be destroyed. This photograph"—he drew the hideous picture from his pocket—"is a sample of their work."

Mr. Baker regarded the photograph for a moment in silence, then rose with a growl of rage and struck his clenched fist upon the desk.

"This is outrageous—damnable!" he cried. "It cannot go on. No wonder that the poor girl looks tired out. We will put the matter in the hands of the police. We will spend any amount of money——"

"Wait a moment, Mr. Baker," Duvall interrupted, urging the angry man back to his chair. "Nothing is to be gained by giving any publicity to this matter. The scoundrels who are at the bottom of it will at once be warned, and then our chance of catching them will be small indeed. So far not a soul knows that I am working on this case, outside of Mrs. Morton and yourself. Even Miss Ruth does not know it. I have already unearthed some very surprising things connected with the case, although I have been occupied with it only since this morning. Within a few days I have no doubt I shall be able to place my hands upon any person or persons responsible for the trouble, but I must insist that the matter is left in my hands."

"But," Mr. Baker expostulated, "she may be in immediate danger. At any moment something may happen that would mar her beauty, and incidentally ruin us as well. She is our star attraction."

"I don't think the danger is immediate," Duvall replied gravely. "All the threats so far received set thirty days as the period within which the attack is to be made. Only three days have passed, so far. And in addition, Miss Morton is being very carefully guarded."

"She certainly shall be while she is here at the studio," Mr. Baker exclaimed. "But, man, something ought to be done at once."

"The first thing to be done is to find out how that photograph got here—who brought it—and when. It was not delivered by mail. Look here." He handed the angry official the torn manilla envelope, which Ruth in her excitement had dropped to the floor.

Mr. Baker regarded it for a moment in angry silence, then pressed an electric button upon his desk. A young woman responded.

"Send Jim here," he said. The girl nodded and withdrew.

A few moments later a freckled-faced boy of twelve or fourteen came in. Duvall saw that it was the same boy who had brought in the photograph.

"You sent for me, sir?" he asked.

"Yes. Where did you get the package you deliverid to Miss Morton a little while ago?"

"From Mr. Curry, sir."

"Good." Mr. Baker rose and went toward the door. "Come with me," he said to Duvall, "and you, too, Jim." The three of them went along the corridor, arriving presently at the main entrance to the building. An elderly man sat at a high desk behind a wire grating.

"Curry," Mr. Baker burst out—"this boy tells me you gave him a package for Miss Morton a while ago."

"Yes, sir."

"Where did you get it?"

The man looked up in surprise.

"Why, sir, someone left it here—on my desk. I don't know who, sir. Right after lunch it was. You know people deliver things here all the time. I didn't take any particular notice how it got here. It was just pushed through the window I guess, same as usual. There was a lot of mail in the rack, after lunch, and everybody asking after theirs as they came in. In fact, I don't remember seeing the package handed in at all. Just found it lying on my desk, along with a lot of letters and things. Why, sir? Is anything wrong?"

Baker turned to Duvall in disgust.

"No system here at all" he grumbled. "The trail is lost of course. Half a hundred people come through here every hour. That's all, Jim," he said, turning to the boy, who disappeared at once. Accompanied by Duvall, Baker returned to the private office.

"Well?" Mr. Baker asked. "What next?"

"How many typewriters have you in your offices, Mr. Baker? Machines, I mean, not operators?"

"About thirty I guess. Or maybe thirty-five. Why?"

"I want you to get me a sample of the writing of each machine, without letting anyone know about it. Put each one on a separate sheet of paper, with a note added, stating whose machine it is—that is, in whose office."

Mr. Baker nodded. "I'll do it tonight," he said. "Attend to it myself. I see your idea. You think this thing is the work of someone inside the studio?"

"It may be; I don't know. But I mean to find out."

"All right. Anything else?"

"Yes. Tell me something about this new film you've just gotten out, 'An American Beauty,' I think it is called."

Mr. Baker's manner became enthusiastic.

"Greatest film Ruth Morton ever did," he exclaimed. "A knock out, it is to be shown at the Grand, on Broadway, to-morrow night. First time on the screen. You had better look it over."

"I probably shall. Now, tell me this. If I wanted to add anything to that picture, put in an insert, I believe you call it, could I do so, if I told you about it to-morrow?"

"Well—it might be done," Mr. Baker replied dubiously. "But we wouldn't want to change the film any. It's perfect as it is."

"I don't doubt that. I have no idea of improving it in any way. But it is just possible that I may have a scheme that will help us to catch these people who are threatening Miss Morton. I'll tell you more about it to-morrow. Meanwhile don't forget about the typewriter samples. I'll see you in the morning." He rose. "And for the present I think it would be best for you to keep what I have told you to yourself."

Mr. Baker nodded.

"I'll do that," he said, putting out his hand, "for the present, at least. But don't forget, Mr. Duvall, that this is a very vital matter to our company, and we can't afford to take any chances."

"I realize that fully. You can depend on me. I intend to save Miss Morton from any harm, not primarily on your company's account, but on her own. Good day."

"Good day, and the best of luck."

Duvall went toward the entrance, and in the corridor met Mrs. Morton. She was was to pass him, but he detained her.

"Twenty-seven days more," he whispered to her.

She turned sharply a look of fear upon her face, but as she recognized Duvall, her expression changed.

"Oh—it's you," she exclaimed. "I have just come down in the car to take Ruth home. Is everything all right?"

"Yes, so far. At least no harm has come to your daughter. But I am sorry to say she has received another warning."

"Here?" Mrs. Morton started and glanced about in alarm.

"Yes."

"What was it?"

"A photograph." Duvall explained the contents of the mysterious package, but did not show the hideous picture to the girl's mother.

"And you haven't found out anything yet?"

"Nothing definite. There has scarcely been time. But we will. You may be sure of that."

"Have you seen Ruth?" Mrs. Morton asked.

"Yes. Mr. Baker introduced me to her. She thinks I am a newspaper man, who wants to write a special article about her for one of the Sunday papers. She suggested that I call at your house some evening, or possibly Sunday. If you are going back to town soon, I think it might be a good idea for me to drive back with you."

"By all means. I shall feel much safer. Suppose you wait for us at the entrance. I shall not be long."

Duvall nodded and strolled toward the street, his mind busy with the events of the day. He stood for a while near the door, watching the people who came in and out. Most of them were women. He wondered if among them was the woman who was responsible for the threats of the past three days. It seemed improbable, and yet, there were indications that it was within the studio rather than outside it that the guilty person was to be found.

Mrs. Morton came out presently, accompanied by Ruth. The girl looked pale and troubled. Duvall went up to her.

"I have met your mother, Miss Morton," he said, "and she has very kindly suggested that I ride back to the city with you."

The girl nodded, without particular interest.

"We shall be very glad of have you," she said, "but you will excuse me, I know if I do not talk to you about my work. I am feeling rather bad to-day and I'm sure I could not tell you anything interesting."

"I'm sure I would not expect it under the circumstances" Duvall replied, as Miss Morton, accompanied by her mother, went towards the automobile that stood near the entrance. "I don't doubt that your work is full of trying incidents."

"Oh, it isn't my work," the girl replied, as he assisted her into the car. "I love my work. But there are other things." She glanced toward her mother with a tired smile, then sank back upon the cushions.

A moment later they were whirling toward the city.

Are These YOUR SYMPTOMS?

Pains in the Back or Sides, Constant Headaches, Swollen Joints, Urinary Troubles, Stone or Gravel? If so you will find the remedy in the box below—

QUIT MEAT WHEN KIDNEYS BOTHER

Take a glass of Salts if your Back hurts or Bladder Troubles You

No man or woman who eats meat regularly can make a mistake by flushing the kidneys occasionally, says a well-known authority. Meat forms uric acid which excites the kidneys they become overworked from the strain, get sluggish and fail to filter the waste and poisons from the blood, then we get sick. Nearly all rheumatism, headaches, liver trouble, nervousness, dizziness, sleeplessness and urinary disorders come from sluggish kidneys.

The moment you feel a dull ache in the kidneys or your back hurts or if the urine is cloudy, offensive, full of sediment, irregular of passage or attended by a sensation of scalding, stop eating meat and get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast and in a few days your kindeys will act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate the kidneys, also to neutralize the acids in urine so it no longer causes irritation, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and cannot injure, makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everyone should take now and then to keep the kidneys clean and active and the blood pure, thereby avoiding serious kidney complications.

20 YEARS IN PRISON FOR DODGING DRAFT

Military Court Sentences Norwick, Conn., Man Who Failed to Report with His Contingent.

AYER, Mass., Nov. 23.—Military authorities at Camp Devens announced recently that a sentence of twenty years in the Federal Penitentiary at Atlanta had been imposed on Tony Petroshki of Norwich, Conn., convicted before a court-martial of failure to report here with other drafted men from his district.

The district quota was assigned to the 304th Infantry Regiment, and when the men arrived Petroshki was not among them. He was arrested by Federal officers.

Government Directs Manufacturers to Make an Inventory Then.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 23.—The Commissioner of Internal Revenue to-day issued an order that manufacturers of tobacco, snuff, cigars, and cigarettes will be required to make inventories on Jan. 1 next, in accordance with the law. Manufacturers are notified to observe the following instructions:

All tobacco material in the factory should be segregated according to classification.

Each class of tobacco should be weighed separately. The inventory must include unstemmed tobacco to be stored off the bonded factory premises.

All stamped as well as unstamped manufactured plug, twist, fine cut, and smoking tobacco, snuff, cigars, and cigarettes of the several classes must be separately weighed or counted.

CREAM FOR CATARRH OPENS UP NOSTRILS

Tells How To Get Quick Relief from Head-Colds. It's Splendid!

In one minute your clogged nostrils will open, the air passages of your head will clear and you can breathe freely. No more hawking, snuffling, blowing, headache, dryness. No struggling for breath at night; your cold or catarrh will be gone.

It's just fine. Don't stay stuffed-up with a cold or nasty catarrh—Relief comes so quickly.

POWDER PLANT BLOWS UP.

Static Electricity Causes Loss of 40,000 Pounds of Explosive.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22.—Fire, attributed to static electricity, destroyed between 40,000 and 50,000 pounds of powder last night at the United States naval powder factory at Indian Head, Md., on the Potomac River, south of Washington. No one was killed, and only one man was slightly injured. An official statement issued this afternoon said:

"The fire started about 8.45 o'clock last night. Powder which was being removed from a tank in the solvent recovery house caught fire, due to static electricity. This fire communicated to the powder remaining in the tank and spread to the building itself. All three attendants in the building escaped, two by jumping from an upper storey.

"The fire spread to two other buildings, but was extinguished about 11 p.m. without further damage. Between 40,000 and 50,000 pounds of powder were lost."

A SLUGGISH LIVER CAUSES LOTS OF TROUBLE

When the liver becomes sluggish it is an indication that the bowels are not working properly, and if they do not move regularly many complications are liable to set in.

Constipation, sick headache, bilious headache, jaundice, heartburn, water brash, catarrh of the stomach, etc., all come from a disordered liver.

Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills are a specific for all disease or disorders arising from a slow, sluggish, lazy or torpid liver, and they have been universally used throughout Canada for over 20 years with the greatest success.

Mrs. W. A. Harrison, 7 Poplar Grove, Halifax, N.S., writes: "I take pleasure in writing you concerning the great good I have received by using Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills for a sluggish liver. When my liver got bad I would have severe headaches, but after using a couple of vials of your pills, I have not been bothered any more."

Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills are 25c a vial at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

A Deathbed Injunction

It Was Fulfilled

By F. A. MITCHEL

In 1915 there was a lull in the fighting in Flanders. Two British officers passed each other in rear of the trenches. Both stopped and stared.

"Upon my word," exclaimed one, "if I was not sure I had no brother I would think you were my father's own son."

"The resemblance between us is remarkable," replied the other.

"What's your name?"

"Hethrington."

"Where from?"

"Formerly from England; recently from Canada."

"Are you Ralph Hethrington, who left his home in Hampshire some years ago a runaway boy?"

"I am."

"Then you are my cousin. I am Alan Hethrington."

"Heir to the barony of Medowcroft?"

"The same. Why did you run away from home?"

"It was a case of stepmother."

"I see. I know all about your stepmother. She was a bad woman. But why did you not write to your father."

"I was a mere boy when I ran away, and I feared father would try to get me back. When I grew older I thought that since father had preferred his wife to his son the son owed him nothing."

"Your father and stepmother are both dead."

"That I know. I was found in America by the solicitor who had charge of the estate."

"You are very rich."

"My wealth does me no good here."

"I am heir to a title with nothing on which to keep it up."

"You may not need to keep it up. Only one out of every three of us will get home."

The cousins parted with an agreement to look each other up. Indeed, they met again that same evening.

"Are you going to write your folks that you have met your runaway cousin here?" Ralph asked Alan.

Alan cast a quick glance at the questioner.

"Why do you ask that question?"

"I don't know."

"I haven't written yet of meeting you, and I don't think I shall."

"Why not?"

"I have something in my mind. But I don't care to make it known to you now. I may never make it known to you. It is dependent upon a certain contingency."

Ralph did not press the matter. Alan's tone was sad, and his cousin surmised that the contingency referred to was the death of one or both of them. Ralph lived for the present and thought little of his own death, though it was ever before him. He preferred to talk with his cousin on other subjects.

"Did you leave a girl behind you?" he asked.

"Yes; Lucy Arden."

"You don't mean it! Why, Lucy and I were great chums when we were children. I used to tell her all about my stepmother's treatment of me. Lucy was my only confidant and sympathizer."

"She is a noble girl. She should marry a man more worthy of her than I am."

"Tut, tut! You're good enough for any woman. My ideas of the sex, when grown up, have been derived from my stepmother, who was not attractive."

"Your stepmother was a devil. Lucy Arden is an angel. I infer from what you say as to women that you did not leave a Canadian sweetheart behind you."

"No, I did not. Perhaps it is as well. If I am killed no one will be hurt by the loss."

"You are right," Alan rejoined sadly. "It would be better if I were similarly situated."

This was the last conversation held between the cousins in a state of quiet. Soon after it was held the Germans made one of those vigorous attempts to reach the coast which were attended with great slaughter, and both young men were wounded. One morning Ralph Hetherington woke up in a ward in a hospital, and at the other end of a long line of cots on the opposite side of the room he espied his cousin. Alan was very pale, and Ralph was some time in making out his identity.

A nurse gave Ralph the information that Alan was very badly wounded and not likely to pull through. Ralph had lost an arm, but was in no danger for his life. He arose and went over to pay his cousin a visit. Alan looked up at him with an unintelligible eagerness.

"Heaven must have sent you here," he said to Ralph. "You are all right except for the loss of that arm, I suppose."

"Yes; not scratched elsewhere. I hope you will come out all right."

"No, I won't. I'm done for. And that's the reason why I have been wanting to see you. Everything works for my plan."

"What plan?"

"You'll be retired on account of that empty sleeve and will be no more exposed to this hell."

"Better this hell than a life without a purpose."

"Listen to me. You remember what you said about leaving a girl behind to mourn you when you are killed? Well, I want to save Lucy that mourning."

"You'll do that by getting well."

"I won't get well. I'll never leave this cot alive. Now, I want you to do this: When you go home to England go as Alan Hetherington. You're enough like me to be my twin brother. Besides, this hell's crater will change any man. It has changed both of us. Lucy will believe you are I. You have what she would not get with me—a fortune. By my death you will inherit the title, but since you are supposed to be I you will get it either way. Nurse, what became of my identification tag?"

"Here it is, sir." And the nurse produced it from where she had hung it at the head of the cot.

Alan was too far gone to take it, and Ralph received it. When the nurse was out of hearing Alan, after a brief rest, proceeded.

"Hang your tag on my cot, and when I am put away as Ralph Hethrington you will be Alan Hethrington. You will give comfort to my father and mother and to the dear girl who would otherwise mourn me. Moreover, when you come into the title you will be able to keep it up as it was kept up centuries ago when Richard Hethrington received it at the hands of his sovereign.

"I desire that Lucy Arden shall receive all that she has been led to believe would be hers; that she shall be Lady Medowcroft; that she shall have the fortune you will bring to the barony."

"I see your design," said Ralph. "You would have me invalided home as her fiance and that she shall marry me believing me to be Alan Hethrington."

"There is a suitor with a fortune double yours. But I shudder at the idea of her marrying him."

Ralph Hethrington made no reply to this proposition. He was thinking of winning Lucy Arden as the man to whom she had engaged herself. He shrank from the deception. On the other hand, by perpetrating the deception she would be Lady Medowcroft and he would be enabled to bestow upon her the fortune he had made in America. What if he refused? No one could tell. But Ralph feared that she would decline the title and the wealth, possibly on conscientious scruples, possibly because she would not marry a man she did not love, for he had not seen her since she was twelve years old.

Naturally this dying request had a serious effect on the man to whom it was spoken. It was heightened by one consideration of which the man who made it was ignorant. Ralph Hethrington had carried with him to America a vision of his child friend, Lucy Arden, and it had grown into a dream that some day he might return to England and the boy and girl friendship might be replaced by the love of a man and a woman.

Singular that a plan for the realization of this dream had been provided for him by the very man who, had he lived, would have stood in his way. Ralph was stupefied. He knew not what to think about this strange fate that had overtaken him. Had Alan not made the request that he should personate him Ralph might go home and quite possibly the plan be worked out, Ralph maintaining his own identity. As it was, he felt that the request complicated matters. But he shrank from not carrying it out, in deference to his cousin's wishes.

What Ralph finally did when he was returned to England, retired from the army, was to go to his cousin's parents and say nothing as to his identity till they had shown whether or not they regarded him as their son. The father greeted him as such; the mother probably would not have done so had not her sight begun to suffer from old age.

Hethrington put off making a final decision as to whether he should personate himself or his cousin till he had met Lucy Arden. Lucy was sitting on the porch as he came up the walk.

At sight of him she arose to run to meet him, but paused. In the advancing figure she saw that which reminded her of her boy friend of years agone. Was it in the walk? Was it in the way he carried his head? Was it a peculiar way he had of swinging the arm that was left him? No matter; he was not Alan Hethrington, but Ralph Hethrington.

The figure advanced to the steps and looked up at her inquiringly.

"Ralph!" she said.

"Lucy! You know me?"

"Yes, you are Ralph Hethrington grown. I see that you have come from the war. Do you brings news of your cousin Alan?"

"Yes; he is dead."

A shiver ran through the girl's figure. Presently Ralph spoke again, in a low tone.

"Alan wished to spare those who loved him from mourning him. He asked me to personate him. I have already done so to his father and mother."

There was a long silence, during which the soldier ascended the steps and sank on to a bench. Presently Lucy said to him:

"Do not set his parents right in this matter for the present. Did Alan say anything about me?"

"Yes; he told me the relationship between you and him."

"Did he—did he ask you—to personate him to me?"

"He did," was the almost inaudible reply.

A faint color appeared in the girl's cheek.

The soldier of the empty sleeve is now Lord Medowcroft, though he was known as Alan to his uncle and aunt till they died, near together, a few months ago. He married Lucy Arden.

24,000,000 Men Under Arms.

The fighting armies of the belligerents to-day, according to Sir William Robertson, number 24,000,000 men, says The London Chronicle. Such a figure as this is impossible of realization, but a few familiar comparisons may help the public to grasp what it means.

The most familiar sight before the war was a football crowd at Everton or Chelsea, both of which grounds will accommodate 60,000 spectators. If every man, woman, and boy in that seething mass were a soldier, that would constitute only one of four hundred similar masses of humanity, or three hundred times the average number who used to witness the Final at the Crystal Palace every April.

If all the people in greater London, in Paris, Berlin, Petrograd, Rome, Vienna, and Constantinople were gathered together in one great crowd, there would still require the populations of New York, Chicago, Liverpool, Glasgow, and Manchester, to the very last new-born babe, to come anywhere near the total of the belligerents engaged in this unexampled war.

Suppose it was announced that this army should march along the Thames embankment, ten abreast, at a walking speed of four miles an hour, the spectator who had vowed to see them all pass would have to stand for two solid weeks, night and day, the men never pausing for a moment's rest, but keeping on this seemingly endless tramp.

LESSONS OF WAR.

What the Empire Has Learned in Three Years.

Lieut.-Gen. Sir Robert S. S. Baden-Powell, in a statement on the opening of the fourth year of the war, sums up the lessons which the war has thus far taught as follows:

"Tactical: Strategy, consisting as it does of principles, remains but little altered; but tactics, or the methods in the fighting field, have been strangely twisted through the use of high explosives, mechanical transport, machine fighting overhead and under water, and by the vast numbers of men employed.

"Scientific: In the field have been devised new explosives, poison gases, curative drugs, and many ingenious devices for killing or for saving men.

"Industrial: State control has been experimented with; intensive work has been introduced, and new industries, including standardization in ship-building and aeroplane manufacture, as well as the home supply of overseas products and of many things hitherto made in Germany.

"Social: Class distinctions have largely disappeared; work is done for work's sake; reforms long used in theory for political cloaks are becoming practical reality.

"Political: The exaggerated value of party politics and the inefficiency of our politicians at home and our diplomats abroad have all been shown.

"Imperial: What some were pleased to look upon as British colonies are now recognized as great self-contained nations actuated by a common tie and common aim, whose strength is in their freedom.

"International: Communion with our Allies in fighting for a high ideal has brought us into closer touch and mutual sympathy than any mere commercial alliance could have done.

"Domestic: The war has discovered the splendid courage and sense of duty that animates our race throughout, while the women by rising to the occasion have put themselves upon a new and higher plane.

"Educational and Religious: The need of new methods and new standards to meet the exigencies of the future has been more than plainly shown."

Mother and Children Had Awful Coughs

WERE CURED BY

DR. WOOD'S NORWAY PINE SYRUP

Mrs. Arthur Appleyard, Novar, Ont., writes: "This past winter my children and I had awful colds and coughs which we got by being in drafts. I tried a number of different remedies for us, but got no relief. I thought I would try Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, and I found it a most excellent and sure cure. It gave relief to the tickling in the throat, and stopped the cough, and with a few bottles we were all cured."

Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup is a remedy that has been on the market for over twenty-five years, and we can recommend it as being without doubt, the best cure for coughs and colds that you can posibly procure.

There are a lot of imitations on the market, so when you ask for "Dr. Wood's" see that you get it. Put up in a yellow wrapper; three pine trees the trade mark; price 25c and 50c; manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Imprisoned British at Verdun.

Verdun has always been looked upon with interest by the British race, for it was there that our civilians were imprisoned at the time of the Napoleonic war. For a time they enjoyed their internment, and were allowed a good deal of liberty. Horse racing and kindred sports were permitted on those very plains where the Germans have been attacking, but under Wirim's regime those concessions were withdrawn, and the plight of the prisoners affords the most painful reading in all that melancholy period. They were taxed out of all comparison to their means, and those who were unable to pay were often cast into dungeons, where they lingered until death came as a release. For no apparent reason numbers of these unfortunate beings were marched barefooted to the neighboring fortresses only to be ordered to renew the journey back some months later.

Verdun was the blackest stain in the Corsican's character, and the horrors perpetrated there have only been excelled by the German treatment of the civil population of Belgium and Northern France.

TO TAKE THE VOTE OF THE SOLDIERS OVERSEAS.

Mr. Hamnett P. Hill, an Ottawa barrister, has been appointed to participate in the taking of the soldier's vote overseas.

School Boy "Howlers."

Dr. Lyttelton has provided the nineteenth century with personal experiences of "Some Humors of Boyhood," and a very entertaining paper it is. There is something of the nature of deliberate opinion in the account of the three creeds given by the boy of Shrewsbury school: "A long time ago they wrote the Apostles' Creed. Nobody believed it. So they waited a bit, and wrote the Nicene Creed. Still nobody believed it. So they waited a bit and wrote the Athanasian Creed; and they had to believe that." Then there is the youth of seventeen, who, after referring to Dean Stanley's writings, explained the origin of the Septuagint thus: "A long time ago Thucydides, Lord Clarendon, and Sir W. Raleigh sat down at a table; and the result of their laborious toil was the Septuagint." Dr. Lyttelton gives some other instances of "howlers" of which he has heard, but which he thinks are too clever not to have been touched up. For instance, the answer to: "Trace the growth of the power of parliament during the reign of the Tudors." "In the reign of Elizabeth the Commons were always petitioning the Sovereign to marry; a thing they would not have dreamt of doing in the time of Henry the Eighth." But unquestionably genuine was the reply of the boy in class to the question concerning two lines in the poem "To Althea: From Prison." Dr. Lyttelton explained to the boys that the lover prisoner, when he had sight of his lady, forgot his captivity. Then he asked X. what the lines meant:

"Enlarged winds that curl the flood Know no such liberty."

Such liberty as what or whose? and the youth, after a great deal of thought and some confusion, gravely said: "Such liberty as his when he'd got rid of her."

Wooden Soles for Soldiers.

The Commander in Chief of the Dutch Army notifies the corps commanders that an experiment is to be made with wooden soles for shoes, in consequence of the increasing advance in the price of leather.

For the experiment, 5,000 pairs of shoes will be made; 2,000 are now ready. The wooden soles will be on new shoes, each pair having an extra set to replace wornout soles.

The wooden soles are first soaked in water to increase their flexibility.

When a definite judgment of the experiment can be formed, and if it is found feasible, it will be extended on a large scale.

Japanese Make Buttons.

Japan is supplying this country with some of the buttons used here, and which formerly were provided by Germany and Austria. The value of the Japanese shipments of buttons has trebled in three years, while at the same time our own exports have more than doubled.

Man and Civilization.

The marvelous progress of the last fifty years has lulled us into a sense of self confidence and security as regards our racial progress, says Dr. Eugene Lyman Fisk in the Scientific Monthly. Dr. Fisk believes that "civilization" has not improved mankind. He writes:

"I do not think we have any evidence that man as an organism, whether in regard to his physical or mental capacities, now presents a higher average type than characterized the nations of antiquity. Indeed, so far as his physical structure is concerned, there is much evidence to the contrary, and I think we may be assured that the great minds of antiquity would have made equally good use of present day knowledge if they were with us today and in a position to utilize it."

Submarines and Speed.

The size of the submarine must be limited by its ability to maneuver, and to maneuver quickly. In quick submergence lies the only hope of safety for the submarine attacked on the surface. It is figured that a boat built to make twenty-five knots on the surface would, through its great size, take nearly ten minutes to submerge. A destroyer traveling at thirty knots would cover something like six miles in that length of time, which simply means that the commander of such a submarine, caught on the surface by a torpedo boat or a destroyer anywhere within a radius of six miles, might just as well surrender his ship, for if he did not he could not escape ramming and sinking.

When The Kidneys Fail

POISONS REMAIN IN THE BLOOD WHICH CAUSE PAINS AND ACHES—READ HERE OF THE SUREST WAY OF SETTING THE KIDNEYS RIGHT.

Brockville, Ont., November 27th. — If you have headaches, backaches and rheumatic pains you have reason to suspect the kidneys. Pain is caused by poisons in the blood when the kidneys are defective and fail to do their work.

This Brockville lady has reported her case because she believes that a great many people are suffering as she did without knowing the cause or cure.

Mrs. Frank Noyes, 9 Stuart Street, Brockville, Ont., writes: "For years I was afflicted with kidney complaint. I became very nervous, was easily worried and had frequent headaches, and neuralgic pains, especially through the back. I had indigestion, poor circulation of the blood and often was bothered with weak spells. I commenced using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, and had only taken two boxes when I felt greatly relieved. I continued the treatment, however, until I was completely cured. In all I took about ten boxes and have not been troubled in this way since. I highly recommend Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, and I think also that the Plasters and Ointment can't be equalled."

Here is another letter to show how rheumatic pains disappear when the action of the kidneys is awakened by Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills:

Mr. John May, Walkerton, Ont., writes: "I was troubled with rheumatism in my legs and I became so lame that I could scarcely get around. Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills were recommended to me and so I commenced using them. After I had been taking them for a while I was delighted to find that my rheumatism had left me, and to-day I am as proud as a bell, able to get around and attend to business. I have made use of Dr. Chase's medicines in many ways for the last forty years and cannot speak too well of their good qualities."

GIRL MOTHER UNMOVED AS VALET RECITES STORY, ETC.

to come. Then she would go back to the house where she was unwelcome and weep. There will be some letters read to you, gentlemen of the jury, which voice what her feelings were at that period. And, if ever a cry went up from a broken heart, you will hear such a cry then. A Mrs. O'Neil, who at that time was her only confidant, so far as I know, will be a witness here, and she will tell you how after one of these bitter disappointments the stricken young mother, taking her baby in her arms and calling him fondly by his pet name, wailed, 'Oh, Toodles, daddy don't love us any more.'

Seldom Went to See Family.

"Later, when he brought her and her baby back, they took a cottage at Deal Beach. That was easily within commuting distance from New York, but Jack did not go down there much. In August, however, when she received something like $20,000 from the sale of her stocks in Chile, he was discreet enough to get a check for $15,000 from her for himself. Occasionally he and Marshall Ward would come down there, but when they did, they slept most of the time. Then they went back to the city 'to work.' You heard this morning, in the cross-examination of Ward concerning his bond transactions, something about the kind of 'work' they were doing together.

"The summer of 1913 was very hot and in August of that year Blanca was overcome by the excessive heat and suffered a sunstroke. She had a hemorrhage a short time thereafter and had to be taken to the Maternity Hospital for an operation, after which she returned to Deal Beach. In September de Saulles took an apartment for them at No. 18 East Sixtieth street. He was always out late at night and was very little in her company.

"In the year 1914 he was appointed Minister of Uruguay. It was arranged that his wife should go to London and afterwards join him at his post in Uruguay. Before they parted Mr. De Saulles, of course, thoughtfully got her to sign two blank checks for him to pay his expenses to South America. After she had arranged to comply with his wishes and had gone away, he telegraphed her that he had resigned the diplomatic post and that she should not go there. He said he had taken a cottage in Huntington and wired her to join him there, and she did so.

Companion of Duke of Manchester.

"It was about this time—the summer of 1914—that the Duke of Manchester was engaged in furnishing a fresh sensation each day to the jaded New Yorkers, and de Saulles became an inseperable companion of the Duke's. On one occasion, while Blanca was out on August Heecksher's yacht on the Sound, they came up to the yacht, which the Duke had hired and never paid for, and there, standing on the quarter deck, were the noble Lord and John de Saulles, surrounded by a bevy of Broadway's choicest beauties. That was a pretty sight for a young wife!

"It was about this time that old Mrs. de Saulles, John de Saulles' mother, wrote Blanca from South Bethlehem, saying that the way 'Longer' as she always called him, was running around with the Duke of Manchester was terrible, and asking her if something couldn't be done to stop him; that there had been a scandalous article about him in Town Topics. Blanca got Town Topics and read it, and you will hear the article read, gentlemen, and I think you will agree with me that it was not pleasant reading for any wife, let alone this girl only twenty years old, who had given up everything she had in the world to follow her husband to a strange country.

DESCRIBES TRIP TO LONDON.

"In the following September she did not see her husband at all, didn't know where he was. Later in the fall he wrote to her that he had bought the property at No. 122 East Seventy-eighth street, paying $12,000 for the house. She, hoping at last that she was going to have a real home, went there and was doing her best to get the house in order when he suddenly sent word to her that he was off for Europe.

"In the meantime, he had told her that in lieu of an old obligation owed to him by one George Young. Mr. Young had supplied the furniture for the house. After John de Saulles had gone to Europe Mr. Young came to the house in order when he suddenly which, he said, "Jack" had obtained without paying for.

"In December of that year her husband cabled her to join him in London, and she did so. She found that he had apartments in the Berkley. He would not consent, however, to permit her to live there with him. He told her that it was not the right sort of a place for her to live in, and that he was too busy to have her at the same hotel with himself. One day she went to the Berkeley to call upon her husband and when asked her name replied: 'Why, I am Mrs. de Saulles.' 'Which one?' asked the clerk.

A ripple of laughter swept the court room. Judge Manning wranped sharply with his gaven, and Mr. Uterhart said: "That may seem funny to you, but it was not funny to a little girl wife nineteen years old."

RETURNED TO HOME IN CHILI.

"For the following seven days she never saw her husband, but she heard of him through one scandal after another. In sorrow she came back to America. In February he cabled her, begging her to join him in Paris. She closed up the house, in Seventy-eighth street, and was prevaring to take passage for Europe when a cable message reached her from him, saying: 'Don't come; I'm coming back.' Again, somewhat later, he played her this same trick. Finally, he did come back, and then she thought they were going to settle down at last in their home, but there her life absolutely was intolerable. He was drinking and carousing all the time, and when he did take her out, he always wanted to go to some all-night cabaret."

Mr. Utterhart here described how the wife was driven to a heart-to-heart talk, in which she told de Saulles that she couldn't stand such treatment any longer, and suggested, saying that perhaps it would be best that they should be divorced, as she feared he was not fitted for married life. The lawyer emphasized the pang this must have caused little Blanch, especially as she had been educated as devout Catholic, and had been taught that divorce was not to be countenanced. The narrator proceeded to tell how the wife returned to her own home in Chili; that she came back in Decmebr, 1916, to America, after he had cabled, begging her to do so. Her heart sank, the speaker said, when she met him at the pier and saw how disappointed he looked. He then established her in an apartment at No. 14th East 10, but he himself maintained what he called bachelor quarters at No. 4 West Fifty-seventh street.

LEARNED OF OTHER WOMAN.

"One day she visited him in his so-called bachelor quarters and was delighted with the place. It pleased her much better than her own apartments and she spoke of it as being lovely, and said she should like to live with him there. But he said no. He told her he had to transact his business there; that the place was only for bachelors and that she would not be allowed to live there.

"It was while they were living in separate apartments in this way that he sent an automobile one day and asked her to let little Jack go with him to the Bronx Zological Park to see the animals. She assented willingly, and the child went off happy. It was on Easter morning. Not long after the automobile had gone a messenger brought to her a box of beautiful flowers. It bore John De Saulles' card, on which was inscribed: "To their one and only sweetheart, from Big and Little Jack."

Blanca was delighted with this little courtesy from her husband. Some hours later, however, when little Jack returned home he told her in his childish way what fun they had enjoyed poking sticks at the lions. 'Miss Jo, mamma,' the boy said, called the lion "Good old lion."' Blanca wondered who Miss Jo was, and she questioned the boy. Little Jack informed her that he had always called the woman 'Mrs. Jo' until she told him that she should call him 'Miss Jo' and she and daddy had told him that he was not to say anything to his mamma about it.

"After reciting this incident Mr. Utterhart remarked impressively 'Miss Jo was the popular Broadway dancer who afterward became the corresponden in Blanca's divorce suit against John de Saulles."

On another occasion, the lawyer said, at her husband's urgent solicitation, Blanca had gone to his apartments, remaining there over night. She then begged him to tell her if any other woman had ever shared his rooms with him. John de Saulles made a solemn oath to her that no woman had ever been there with him except herself. It was afterward proven in the divorce suit that he had been entertaining "Jo" in those apartments all winter.

DECIDED TO ASK DIVORCE

The sordid story went on to tell how domestic conditions became so intolerable that, despite her scruples, she decided to get a divorce. Her first effort was to obtain the necessary evidence through the valet, Julius Hadamek, but he declined to do anything for her. She was afterward referred to a firm of private detectives, who did obtain the necessary evidence. She had then gone to the Majestic Hotel to live. Mr. Uterhart said that as soon as action had been begun De Saulles informed his wife that he would fight her to a finish for the custody of the boy. She then consulted her attorney, and the lawyer told her that, because she was a Chilian and an alien the court hardly would be likely to give her the custody of the child.

Acting under that advice, Mr. Uterhart said, she had signed a stipulation to the effect that De Saulles was to have possession of little Jack during seven months of the year and she five months. That agreement was ratified by an exchange of letters between them. It also provided that so long as war made ocean travel unsafe the boy was not to be taken out of the United States. Blanca later yielded to the urgent invitation of her brother and sister, who were much worried because of her physical and mental depression, to join them in Scotland, where they had a cottage. Little Jack in the meantime had been sent to South Bethlehem, to the home of De Saulles' parents.

On her return to America Blanca wired to South Bethlehem asking that the boy be sent to her at the Gotham Hotel, in New York, and the elder Mrs. de Saulles replied that she would refer the matter to her son. Blanca afterwards received a telegram signed by John de Saulles saying "Jack and I at Atlantic City over election." She learned some time afterward, through the boy, that they had been all the time at the Box, her husband's place near Westbury. Her baby prattled to her frequently about the great times they had there; how "Jeff, the nigger," who was the valet, had laughed about "the thousand dollar kid." Mr. Uterhart said afterward "the thousand dollar kid" was a motion picture celebrity who was supposed to have been paid that sum for the portrayal of her talents on the screen.

Blansca observed that the child was wearing a little finger ring. She asked him where he got it, and he replied that Daddy had taken a lady to a jeweller's shop one day and had bought her a bracelet and that, as he wanted something, too, Daddy had bought him the ring.

WILL OFFER IMPORTANT LETTER.

Beginning to realize that the stipulation she had made would prevent her from taking her child to Chili, where she wished to rejoin her mother, Blanca directed her attorneys to bring action to have that stipulation set aside. She went to Chili in 1915, but before going de Saulles got her to sign a deed making over the Seventy-eighth street property to Stephen Tuttle, his secretary. "That," said Mr. Uterhart, "was so that in her absence he might be able to sell the house, which, by the way, was paid for with her money. In the subsequent sale of the house, it appeared from the lawyer's statement, the little wife again was forced to sustain a considerable loss.

The modified arrangement was made subsequently, under which each was to have custody of the boy during alternate months of the summer period. Blanca returned to America and took the house at Roslyn, known as Crossways. Her counsel promised, with strong emphasis, that a letter should be read to the jury in which John de Saulles wrote: "The boy is yours until the sixth." Concerning this period of time, an incident was told to the effect that while little Jack had been staying at the Box with his father during a spell of very warm weather, Ellen, one of his servants, had put ice down his back to keep him cool. The mother heard of it through her child and wrote to de Saulles protesting that such treatment would be likely to cause pneumonia. To this de Saulles replied: "Oh, he's a de Saulles; pneumonia won't hurt him."

Coming down to August 3 the night of the tragedy, Mr. Uterhart reviewed the testimony already given for the prosecution. He emphasized the mother's zeal to get her boy and bring him home, as indicated by her first words over the telephone to Jules, the valet. She next called up Stewart Iglehart, a member of the firm of W. R. Grace & Co., and a mutual friend of both her and her husband. She told him "They are keeping little Jack from me; I want to get him and bring him back home and put him to bed."

SOUGHT ONLY HER SON.

She asked Mr. Iglehart to accompany her to the Box by automobile, but he replied that he would not intervene in so delicate a domestic matter. "It was then," said Mr. Uterhart "that she took the pistol and put it in her pocket, knowing how lonely the road was and that there was not another house near.

It was in the hope of reaching The Box before the expiration of the hour when de Saulles was expected back from the club that she offered Donner, the chauffeur, an extra fee "if he got there in time." She never expected to see de Saulles at The Box. The testimony of her maid, Suzanne Monteau, would show that Blanca during the taxicab journey said repeatedly "I hope to get there in time." The speaker then outlined the mother's arrival at The Box, her request for the boy and the firm refusal made by de Saulles.

"She saw her baby boy coming down the stairs with Mrs. Degener," said Mr. Uterhart, "and then when de Saules said, 'No, you can't have him' she saw the look come over his face that she had learned to know, the look that she saw there whenever he was going to do something particularly nasty, as when he had once said to her: 'If you don't like it get out of the house; this is my house.' She saw the look, I say, and then she felt as if a blow had struck her on the head. After that she knew nothing of what happened until she found herself in the Mineola jail."

PHYSICIANS FOUND CAUSE.

"The following day she was attended by Dr. J. Sherman Wight, of the Long Island College Hospital, and his colleague, Dr. Louis C. Johnson, of Johns Hopkins. Dr. Cleghorn, the county physician, was also present at their invitation. They found Blanca lying on her bed. She was not the woman you see before you now after months of care, attention and treatment. She was dazed, listless, taking little notice of her surroundings, and giving all the signs of mental confusion and mental lethargy.

"She complained of severe pains in her head, and her whole demeanor was as if she saw no occasion for the doctors being there, and much preferred being left alone and not to be put to the trouble of answering questions. Her teperature was low ,way below normal, and they could scarcely feel her pulse beating; her face was ghastly white, and then these doctors went systematically to work to determine the cause of this condition, to determine why she was so sick and pale and weak and confused. And they found it, gentlemen they found that for some time she had been suffering from a disease which affected the nervous centres and brain and which rendered her irresponsible, and brought on the mental confusion the night of the shooting.

"Hypothyreosis, the doctors call it. I do not suppose that means any more to you, gentlemen, than it did to me when they first told me of it, but I am going to try to tell you, in a very inadequate way—for a full and clear explanation you will have to wait until you hear the testimony of the doctors themselves—I am going to try to tell you what hypothrreosis, or a hypothyroid condition is, in plain untechnical language.

IT GROWS NEW SKIN!

When Zam-Buk is applied to a skin disease it soothes pain, ends irritation and draws out the inflammation. At the same time it destroys all germs and thoroughly cleanses the diseased part. Then the herbal extracts act in such a way upon the tissues that they actually grow new skin, which replaces the worn-out tissue and a complete cure is the result.

Mrs. Minnie Carmichael, of 72 5th Ave., Maisonneuve, Montreal, writes: "I had suffered with wet eczema for so long and tried so many treatments that I had begun to think that my case was incurable. I even took treatment in a hospital, but got no benefit from anything until I used Zam-Buk. This wonderful balm ended the discharge, soothed the sores and drew out the inflammation, and in a comparatively short time completely cured the disease, so that there has not been the slightest trace of eczema since."

For ulcers, abscesses, chronic sores, ringworm, scalp sores, salt rheum, boils, pimples, blood-poisoning, running sores, bad legs, piles, chapped hands, sore lips, chilblains, cuts, burns, scalds and all skin injuries Zam-Buk is always reliable. 50c. box, 3 for $1.25. All dealers or Zam-Buk Co., Toronto. Send 1c. stamp (for postage) and free trial box will be sent you.

SURPRISE ATTACK BY THE FRENCH A BRILLIANT SUCCESS

Poilus Left Their Trenches In Broad Day Light And Swept Over The Surprised Germans Taking 800 Prisoners And Gaining Valuable Ground In The Verdun Section—British Repulse a German Counter Attack Against Bourlon Wood.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

(By W. S. Forrest).

WITH THE FRENCH ARMIES IN THE FIELD, Nov. 27.—France's victory north of Hill 304 was another Allied surprise attack. It was different from that in which the British soldiers triumphed farther south. But, like General Byng's blow, it was successful because the Germans didn't hear the accustomed drumfire of artillery preparations.

The French attack really began at 6.30 Sunday morning. There had been the usual fire artillerying all night with the usual German reply, but in the case of the French their guns at 6.30 were concentrated on certain spots.

Their firing was not noticeably faster than before and hardly louder than under the ordinary conditions of Verdun cannonading—which is always intense.

Four hours later, in broad daylight, the Poilus left their trenches. In astonishingly short time, they had swept over the surprised Germans and passed beyond their objectives. While they were consolidating other units followed behind, combing 800 prisoners from the ravines at the foot of Hill 304 after the attacking waves had passed over. The first losses were insignificant considering the magnitude of the operation and its complete success.

Although smaller than the smashing Verdun victory of last August, the Sunday drive, within a few minutes, wiped out the advantages which the enemy had gained only after two months of continuous costly efforts. It brought into French hands a bit of the German lines on the northern flank of Hill 304 which, since the end of August, has enabled the enemy constantly to nibble and seriously compromise French operations.

To-day the Germans had not made any attempt at a recapture by infantry, although the German artillery strafing was intense.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, Nov. 27.—British troops have repulsed another German counter attack at the north-east corner of Bourlon Wood, west of Cambrai, according to an official report to-day from Field-Marshal Haig.

The announcement follows: "During the night the Germans undertook another counter attack against our position in the north-east corner of Bourlon Wood. The attack was repulsed. There is nothing of special interest to report on the remainder of the front. The weather is stormy and wet.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PETROGRAD, Sunday, Nov. 24.—The election of delegates to the Constituent Assembly began to-day, and will continue throughout Monday and Tuesday. Nineteen lists, representing various parties, factions and organizations, are in the field, including two women's leagues. The Moscow Metropolitan Committee has announced that the elections there have been postponed for a week.

WITH THE ITALIAN ARMIES, Nov. 27.—Terrible blizzards sweeping over the mountains in the north to-day came to the aid of the Italians in holding back the invading Austrians. A heavy fall of snow forced the enemy to delay moving up heavy artillery, and made the movement of his reinforcements practically impossible. The Italians, accustomed to mountain fighting, repeatedly attacked with all fury of the storm which was raging across their lines. They harrassed the Austrians day and night. British reinforcements for the Italian line are now almost ready for the trenches. They are marching to the front, eager for the fighting, even if they are footsore from long forced marching.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, Nov. 27.—The French last night overcame the resistance of the Germans still holding out on the field of operations of the French attack on the Verdun fronts on Sunday, says to-day's official report. Prisoners were taken in raids elsewhere on the battle line.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, Nov. 27.—The Council of People's Commissaries, according to an Exchange Telegraph's despatch from Petrograd, has declared two months' moratorium from the day of the beginning of the recent revolt. A decree issued by the Council creates a special State Education Commission to replace the Ministry of Education. All schools are placed under the control of the municipalities.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 27.—The United States War Department, in its summary of the week's war developments, says the recent events are very favourable to the Allied arms. The success of the British offensive in the region of Cambrai and the steady resistance of the Italians in Italy, are given as the chief incidents of the Allied victory.

NEW YORK, Nov. 27.—A delegation of the United States Congress, arriving here to-day after a tour of the Western front, say the general opinion overseas is that the war may last four years more, but will be a complete victory for the Allies.

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

LONDON, Nov. 27.—Premier Lloyd George of England and Premier Venizelos of Greece have departed for Paris for the Inter-Allied Council, it was announced late to-day.

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

PARIS, Nov. 27.—Detailed operations carried out by the French troops north of Hill 304, on the Verdun sector, completed the gains of November 25, the French official statement announced to-day. The consolidation of all the new positions was completely carried out. Raids were reported in the Champagne, north-east of Prunay, west of Tapurs, and in Lorraine, north-east of Nominy.

PTE. SCULLY IS MISSING

An Official Message From Ottawa Conveys Bad News To His Relatives—Pte. W. J. Conners, Another Former 93rd Man Is Wounded.

TO-DAY'S MILITARY NEWS

MISSING.

Pte. Robert Scully, formerly of the 93rd Battalion, 517 Sherbrooke St.

WOUNDED.

Corp. William John Conners, formerly of the 93rd Battalion, 480 Reid Street.

Driver Asa B. Downer, 33rd Battery, C. F. A., River Road.

Dr. Carmichael has received a wire from his son, Gunner Hugh Carmichael, who has been invalided home, that he has arrived at Halifax.

PTE. ROBERT SCULLY.

Mrs. Robert Scully, 517 Sherbrooke Street, has received an official message from Ottawa that Pte. Robert Scully, formerly of the 93rd Battalion, is officially reported missing between 6th and 7th November.

Pte. Scully enlisted here early in the autumn of 1915 with Lieut.-Col. Johnston's unit, and after going overseas with the 93rd, was transferred to another Canadian infantry battalion at the Front.

CORP. W. J. CONNERS.

Mrs. Esther Conners, 480 Reid St., has been advised from Ottawa that her husband, Corp. William John Conners, formerly of the 93rd Battalion, has been admitted to hospital, on 13th November, suffering from gunshot wounds in the left leg, shoulder, and hip.

Corp. Conners was one of the first to enlist in the 93rd Battalion, joining in the second week in August, 1915. He went overseas as a sergeant, and reverted to the ranks to get to France. A younger brother went overseas with the 93rd Bugle Band.

DRIVER A. B. DOWNER.

Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Downer, River Road, have received official word from Ottawa that their son, Driver Asa B. Downer, of the 33rd Battery, C.F.A. is officially reported wounded on 11th November. The official message stated that Driver Downer had been wounded in the neck. He enlisted here with the 33rd Battery in the late summer of 1915, and had been sixteen months in France. Another brother, Newton Downer also went over with the 33rd, and was invalided back to England some time ago.

CORP. VICTOR R. FELL, of Bailieboro, who has been awarded the Military Medal for bravery at the front.

SEPARATE PEACE WITH GERMANS IS NEXT RUSSIAN STEP

Country Has Reached The Lowest Depths of Misery With Her Armies Starving And Her People Wavering Among a Score of Political Parties.

TO WITHDRAW TROOPS

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

LONDON, Nov. 27. — Her armies starving, her people wavering between a score or more of political parties, her only semblance of a "government" tottering, Russia apparently reached the lowest depths of her national misery to-day. A separate peace with Germany is regarded as the next frantic step of the Bolsheviki. Officials here indicated they would not be surprised if actual negotiations to this end were not now in progress.

PETROGRAD, Nov. 27.—Despatches to-day reported that army delegates had recommended to the Bolsheviki the withdrawal of Russian troops at various places on northern front "inorder to prevent excesses and wholesale desertions due to lack of food."

The Soviet representative despatches said it is reported that only twenty carloads of food supplies weer arriving daily on the northern front instead of a hundred as required. Some sectors were reported without bread for days. The men are restive, famished, dispirited.

The Bolsheviki government is expecting to win at the general elections out of a field of nineteen different political parties. Everybody in Russia—men and women — more than twenty years of age will vote. The Bolsheviki now boast of controlling not only Petrograd and Moscow, but Kieve, Odessa, Kharkoff, Kazan, Saratoff and practically every city of any size in Russia.

Allied ambassadors meeting in Petrograd according to Swedish dispatches to-day, have determined to ignore Foreign Minister Trotsky's communication announcing his plan of a world armistice. Another message asserted that allied diplomats were prepared to demand their passports at once if the Bolsheviki make a separate peace.

TWO CALLS FOR THE FIRE BRIGADE

The Fire Department had two calls last night. The first alarm was rung in at 9.57 to a chimney fire at 529 Rogers street, the home of Mr. Michael Toomey. One three-gallon chemical was used and no damage was done.

Overheated Pipes.

Overheated furnace pipes at the home of Mr. T. McGarretty, Romaine street, caused what threatened to be a serious fire last night at 11.15. Chief Grange's timely arrival and prompt action in pulling down the walls between which the pipe ran saved the situation. Damage to the building to the extent of from $75 to $100 was done.

American Homes Are Overheated

Full Administration Says Temperature Should Not Exceed 68 Degrees.

Canadian Press Despatch:

WASHINGTON, Nov. 27.— Declaring that North American homes are overheated, the Fuel Administration today urged all upholders to maintain a temperature of not more than sixty-eight degrees, recommended by eminent physicians. With that temperature, the saving in coal will go far toward meeting the enormous war demand for fuel, the officials announced.

Veterans Decide To Invest In Canada's Victory Loan

CHRISTMAS TREAT FOR THE SOLDIERS' KIDDIES

Christmas is near at hand, and this year as the past three finds in many homes in Peterborough, a father absent, fighting the battle for liberty overseas. It is the desire of the Great War Veterans' Association to see that the children in these homes have as happy a Christmas this year as can be provided under the circumstances, and accordingly they are planning a Christmas treat that the kiddies will remember for a long time. In Toronto this work is looked after by the Sportsmen's Patriotic Association who are readily supported by the patriotic citizens of the Queen City. The Veterans believe that the people of Peterborough are just as anxious to bring joy to the youngster as are the residents of Toronto, and accordingly they ask the citizens to subscribe to a fund for this purpose. Mr. G. N .Gordon has started the ball rolling with a cheque for $50.00. Who will be the next to help? Subscriptions will be received by the Review and the Examiner. The Veterans are making this appeal not for themselves, but for the sake of the little ones. Subscriptions may be left at the newspaper offices at any time and will be gratefully acknowledged.

QUESTION OF SUPREME COMMAND TO BE SETTLED

Divergent Opinions As To Whether One Supreme Generalissimo or A War Council Would be Preferable —British Representatives Favour The Latter.

COMPROMISE LIKELY

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

(By Lowell Mellett.)

PARIS, Nov. 27.—The Allies' conference will be called upon to decide whether the nations fighting for democracy shall establish a single military dictator or create a military oligarchy to fight the German military aristocracy.

Representatives of democracy here to-day for the Inter-Allied Conference are of a single mind as to unification of the Allies' efforts, but their ideas are divergent.

The French favour the creation of one supreme generalissimo as against the British idea for a supreme War Council in the role of an Advisory committee. The British, inherently individualistic, foresee the possibilities of trouble at home if the British armies cease to be controlled by the home government. They are not disposed to concede a complete transference of authority, particularly since the con-comitant idea is apparently that the generalissimo be a Frenchman. Not that there is any distrust of French generalship—on the contrary there was some disposition to-day to regard it as inevitable if such a supreme war chief were created, that the man named would be a French commander.

The British, however, recognize there is a necessity that they preserve their own remarkable unity and keep the British people's confidence in the army at its present high mark. The Italian viewpoint on the two plans was not available to-day.

AMERICA'S POSITION.

As for Americans who will participate and whose votes may actually decide the matter they are keeping close counsel, listening, doing some hard thinking and hard working.

The spirit dominating all the Allies' represanatives assures that no impasse is possible and that there will be a smooth working out of the scheme before the present conference gives way to the Supreme War Council.

This latter body to have the duty of operating whatever system is devised.

Viewed from outside to-day, the situation seemed to warrant the prediction that conferers would reach a compromise solution—the same sort of a compromise that sometimes takes place in business organizations. Possibly this would mean the naming of an executive officer for the Supreme War Council. Such an official would greatly facilitate co-ordination, make the Council a mobile, decisive organization and yet he would be considerably less than a Supreme Commander.

Frank Jenne says:

They are strikingly original, but as far as possible from anything of a freak nature. Price, 50 cents. "Come to me."

HOLLANDERS ARE GROWING BITTER AGAINST AMERICA

Restrictions Enacted by The United States Have Seriously Strained Friendly Relations Between The Two Countries—Premier Gives His Views.

FOOD IS VERY SCARCE

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

(By John A. Brunna.)

(Copyright by United Press.)

THE HAGUE, Nov. 27.— A serious strain in the traditionally friendly relations between Holland and America's export restrictions has affected not only the stomachs and minds of the Hollanders, but has tempered their high regard for democratic America.

Diplomatic negotiations are now in progress. Meanwhile public sentiment in Holland is daily becoming more bitter against America for what is regarded here as an incomprehensible attitude.

The correspondent of the United Press sought the Dutch point of view from the man best situated to outline it, Dr. Cort Van Der Linden, Premier of the Netherlands.

"In a phrase," as he expressed it, "Holland desires only that America shall apply to her President Wilson's own announced principle of fair treatment to small nations and respect of their rights.

Holland's "grand old man" has, heretofore, refused all interviews since the start of the war.

HOLLAND'S VERSION.

But he was eager to give Holland's version of her difficulties with the United States. He said Holland's feeling of resentment against America was "easy to explain."

"We Dutch nationals," he continued, "unreservedly believed President Wilson's idealistic messages. They found a warm response in our country. Therefore we do not understand America's attitude toward a nation striving for perfect neutrality, and trying to save the nucleus of International law by reminding belligerents of the violation of her rights, or of the interests of the rules which the best and most responsible lawyers in the world codified.

"America—the America which took a leading part in this work of civilization—now detains ships of small neutrals. She withholds foodstuffs and raw materials. After a time there will be no bread left in Holland and unemployment will reach a proportion dangerous to the public order. Do you wonder then that this nation resents America's policy of guarantees that imported cereals shall not be re-exported, when they are in fact consigned to the Dutch government through the Netherlands Overseas Trust?

RESENT U. S. POLICY.

We resent this policy, when the best guarantees of our good faith is the fact that we ourselves need these supplies so badly. The Premier paused, vigorously emphasizing his point.

"Of course," the Premier continued, "we export our dairy and agricultural products as compensation for coal, iron, potash and other chemical products which Germany exports to us. But do not forget that these exports are offered to both belligerent parties as an annual proposition.

G. W. V. A. Will Use $1000 of Relief Fund to Buy Bond—Question of a Veterans' Band is Also Discussed at General Meeting Last Night.

VICE PRESIDENT LEAVING

The Peterborough branch of the Great War Veterans' Association decided at a general meeting held in the armouries last night to invest $1,000 in Canada's Victory Loan.

This amount will be taken from the Association's relief fund, and a motion to adopt this course was unanimously carried after a short discussion.

The matter was introduced as a suggestion from the executive committee and was enthusiastically received by the members. It was pointed out that the relief fund of the Association totalled $1,294 and that after investing $1,000 in the Victory Loan the balance would be sufficient to meet all requirements until further funds were secured through the series of concerts and entertainments planned for the winter.

The citizens generally may not know that the proceeds of the Veterans' Tag Day last April were put into a relief fund to look after all cases of distress among returned soldiers and their families or among the dependents of soldiers overseas or of those who will not return. In many cases the relief provided by the Veterans was in the form of a loan and as the money advanced has been in many cases afterwards returned to the Association, the Veterans still have a balance of nearly $1300 in the relief fund, which, of course, is entirely separate from the working fund, the latter being largely made up by members' fees.

Several members expressed the opinion that in investing the surplus funds in the Victory Loan the Association would be only doing its duty to the country in the present hour of need.

A motion that the Association buy a $1,000 Victory bond moved by Comrade R. H. Muir and seconded by Comrade J. Coppick, was unanimously carried.

A New Member.

An application for membership in the Association was read from Pte. Chas. Mongour, a young veteran of the 2nd Battalion, who enlisted in August, 1914, and is still serving. Pte. Mongour left Peterborough with the first infantry quota and returned from the front last week. He was only fifteen years of age when he donned the khaki. His application was unanimously accepted.

A letter was read from Mr. G. N. Gordon, enclosing a cheque for $50 and suggesting that the Veterans arrange a Christmas treat for the families of Peterborough soldiers overseas.

On motion of Comrades Colenian and Coppick, the secretary was instructed to write Mr. Gordon and express the hearty thanks of the Association.

Later in the meeting Comrade Walter Hughes remarked that the Veterans should act upon Mr. Gordon's suggestion and provide the best possible time for the youngsters of the men who are overseas. He thought that subscriptions should be asked for through the press. A motion to this effect by Comrades Hughes and Coppick was carried.

Extra Men at Post Office.

A letter was read from Capt. J. H. Burnham, stating that two men and fifteen boys were required during the Christmas rush at the Peterborough postoffice and asking that the Veterans submit the names of suitable men for the positions. There were a number of applicants, and upon a ballot being taken Comrades V. Hagerman and M. J. Gahagan were selected and their names will be forwarded to the postmaster.

Vice-President George Toone presented the report of the committee in regard to the new club rooms. He explained the work that had been done and informed the members that after a general meeting had been held, which would likely be addressed by Dominion Secretary Knight, the citizens' committee would commence a campaign for the necessary funds, and it was hoped that the Veterans would be installed in their new quarters before Christmas.

Secretary Whatley read a letter from the Department in answer to an inquiry from the G.W.V.A. that it was not at present proposed to appoint an assistant caretaker for the Peterborough armouries, but that when such

NOT A FAVOUR, BUT A GIFT.

It takes a long time for truth to filter through prejudices in some minds.

Nothing has ever been presented for popular approval so free from objection, on economic or patriotic grounds, as the Victory Loan. Yet we have heard of doubts being cast upon its bona fides, that it is another defaulting bank affair, and looking for victims.

There is nothing further from the truth. The Victory Loan is a splendid medium for everybody doing their bit in helping humble the Hun.

As far as the stability of human things goes, the security behind the Victory Loan is perfect—no security could be better. The whole material, taxation, revenue and other resources of Canada are behind the Victory Loan. Great Britain and France, with all their developed wealth, are short of the undeveloped, potential wealth of Canada. They are not better security for a loan than Canada, with all its resources. Canada has a total area of 2,300 million acres of land. Of this immense expanse, 358 million acres are fit for crop-production purposes; while as to the rest of the area of Canada there is probably not a square mile that is not capable of yielding some form of wealth.

A dollar, or a hundred, or a million, or 500 millions loaned to the government of Canada, is as certain of repayment as anything human can be. Money invested in a Victory Bond is safer than if deposited in any bank in the world.

Then the return is satisfactory. Every buyer of a Victory bond is not only putting a nail in teh coffin of Hun tyranny but is making a profitable investment—a return of five and a half per cent.—payable half-yearly, without circumlocution or trouble — best return in the world for a loan with such impregnable security.

The bonds are of as low denominations as 50 dollars, and conjoined with easy terms of payment, enable everybody almost to become an investor—a subscription to a fifty dollar bond is payable in five monthly instalments, terminating May 1st next, and a full half year's interest on the face value of the bond, is payable June 1st. A subscriber can earn the money to make his payments month by month.

Then the money loaned is for Canada—for ourselves. Every dollar will be spent in Canada, making purchases for Britain or her allies, and the yearly interest on the total loan is no burden upon the country — it is only paying back to the people their own interest on their own money.

Whatever difference of opinion in other things may exist, there is no difference of opinion upon the merits, the safety, the profits or the uses of the Victory Loan.

The security is as solid as Cape Diamond.

The profits—the earning capacity—is large and easily collected, larger than any existing investment, considering the solidity of the security.

The money is needed in promotion of the highest interests of Canada and humanity.

The money is to be spent in productive purchases in Canada. It will all be spent in Canada to the help of agricultural and industrial enterprises.

The interest will all be paid back to the people of Canada.

The Victory Loan is mis-named. Considering all the advantages, direct and indirect, national and moral, it is not a loan made by the investor, but a gift to the investor.

THE URGENT NEED.

There are so many urgent needs in connection with the war it is difficult to give preference; a condition that makes it necessary for the government to have a broad and energetic policy. Some attach first importance to more fighting men; some to production; some to shipping. These claims are so evenly balanced that concentration of effort upon one is energy spent at the expense of another Money is a prime essential, and we are getting that splendidly. Production is another essential and that is not so promising. If the government had put as much energy or would now put as much energy, in a large scheme of promoting food production, and in organizing recruiting, as it has put into organizing the Victory Loan, equal success would probably attended both.

The despatches now bring the news that ships are the "supreme allied issue." That means that ships are needed to keep up not only a steady supply of men from Canada and the United States, but adequate supplies of food. This argues the large importance of both food and shipping.

Canada, at a moment's notice, cannot, comparatively, do much in the matter of providing shipping, but with proper government initiative and organization she can do a notable share. Canada can, however, do, with, of course, proper government organization and initiative, much more than we are doing in increasing food production. We are trifling with merely the fringe of the food problem by dilletante dabbling with the food problem—more frills and academic and speculative theory, than taking the bull by the horns or the food profiteer by the nape of the neck.

We have so far no organized and nation-wide scheme of increased production — nothing that will place the organization resources of the government at the service of the food producing classes. The Union Government is beginning to see light in the matter of the supreme importance of the production of food.

We have all along been told that if the Union Government is defeated, Canada thereby automatically withdraws from the war. Speaking at Dundas, with Sir Robert Borden on the platform, the Minister of Militia said:

"Some people have the absurd idea that if the Union Government is defeated the war would stop. He could tell them that not one Canadian would be withdrawn from the battle line, na matter what party was elected."

The Minister of Militia is evidently not of the opinion that with opposition success the war will stop. He knows that all Canadians, except some misled Quebecers, corrupted by Sir Robert Borden's Nationalist allies, are in the war to a finish. Nor does General Mewburn say that more men is the great essential. He and his government are beginning to see that feeding the soldiers we have enlisted is supreme. He therefore pronounced in favour of exempting all farmers' sons engaged in actual farming; and if such are not exempted and are called up for military service. "I give you my word that I will have them honourably discharged provided they go back to the farm."

Food production to feed our soldiers and their allies, together with adequate shipping, to carry food overseas, is the one great problem, and General Mewburn will not solve it by keeping farmers' sons at the plough, but by persuading the government to organize, equip, and conduct a nation-wide campaign of food production. The Victory Loan will provide means that cannot be better employed than to stimulate and aid to production to the fullest capacity of the country.

Meat or mass never hinders work. Food and fighting are twins. Victuals and victory go together.

THE MIRACLE OF UNION GOVERNMENT.

Hon. N. W. Rowell, speaking at a meeting in the interest of the so-called Union government, declared in effect that, politically, "old things have passed away, behold all things are become new." He said:

"The day of rake-offs is ended; that means the saving of millions of dollars to the people of Canada."

This is reassuring; if we could believe it. Many will, however, be inclined to be sceptical. It is very possible that Mr. Rowell himself doesn't believe it; because the conditions against its being true are promising.

Mr. Rowell's declaration is in itself proof of his belief that there has been an era of "rake-offs"; that "millions of dollars have been wasted." He himself held this belief before his sudden transmutation, and before a blameless, purely patriotic and unswervingly upright Union government replaced a government that prodigalized in "rake offs" and "wasted millions" of the people's money.

But, has the transformation taken place? Has the old Borden government, guilty of the war-time enormities of mal-administration, been eliminated? The Borden government has not been replaced; it has only been patched. Two-thirds of it is contained or retained in the Union government—the dominating element. Is it likely that the spirit of the old government has been changed in a moment by the fact of a few Liberals, who spent their ante-Union days in denouncing the "rake-offs," the "waste of millions" perpetrated by the present members of the Union government in their degenerate days, having been tolerated — that the leopard would in a moment lose his spots by contact with the regenerating element?

Mr. Rowell himself must feel in strange company, and be somewhat self-conscious in "slang-whanging" his colleagues and by implication accusing them of monstrous maladministration. He cannot but feel in the midst of his special pleading that he is weakly charitable in his judgment of the superiority of the Union government. He sees the same gang of profiteers for rake-offs, the same aggregation of the "big interests" showing their gratitude for past favours by a fidelity to the remains of the Borden government, suggestive of gratitude for favours to come.

The Union government may be the patriotic thing he thinks it — it may have put an end to "rake-offs" and "waste of millions," but if it has done so, the big end of it must, to adapt the striking words of the late Sir John Macdonald, have taken "a d——d sharp curve."

Sir Robert Borden, when he changed the name of his government to a Union government, promised a "fifty-fifty" arrangement of portfolios—as between Conservatives and Liberals. He promised Labour representation in the Union government. He has not done either. He now substitutes an I.O.U. for fulfilment of his promise. In politics, especially, the proverb applies—"a bird in the hand is worth two in the tree."

The Union government may have brought a few politicians of discordant sentiments together, but it has brought or is attended with more popular discord and disunion, more heartburning, than any other thing in our history.

SUDDEN DEATH OF A PETERBORO RETURNED SOLDIER

Mr. Robert J. Mahood Who Was Invalided Home Last Year Dropped Dead Yesterday.

Death's call came very suddenly yesterday to Mr. Robert J. Mahood, a local returned soldier, who dropped dead from heart failure at the home of his father, Mr. Robert Mahood, in Otonabee, near the Locks' Bridge.

The deceased, who was forty years of age, enlisted in Calgary with the 50th Battalion and went overseas with that unit in January, 1915. He was invalided home in November, 1916, and since then has been living here, with the exception of a few months spent in the West. He was widely known in the city and district, and the news of his death will come as a shock to his many friends.

R. J. MAHOOD, returned soldier, who dropped dead yesterday. He went overseas with the 50th Battalion and was invalided home a year ago.

He is survived by his father, four brothers and eight sisters, i.e.: Messrs. Fred and Stanley of Otonabee; Mr. Ernest Mahood of Smith; Mr. Hartley Mahood of Superior, Wisconsin; Mrs. Geo. Lackey, and Mrs. David Jordan, city; Mrs. James Simpson, Bobcaygeon; Mrs. Oswald Cragg, Eyreme, Alta.; Mrs. Norman Smart, Port Arthur; Mrs. Joseph Newman, Kingston, Mrs. Arthur Hunter, Smith, and Miss Rose Mahood, Toronto.

Another sister, Mrs. John Ackison, predeceased him over a year ago.

The funeral will take place on Thursday afternoon at 2.30 o'clock to Little Lake cemetery.

Wm. McMullen to Report For Service Following Trial

William McMullen of Havelock, charged with failing to comply with the Military Service Act, appeared before Mr. Harry Rush and Mr. Frank Adams, Justices of the Peace, in the Police Court, this morning. He was found guilty and sentence was suspended on the consideration that he would surrender himself to the military authorities.

At the opening of the hearing Mr. Gordon, defendant's solicitor, stated that McMullen was ready to report for service, but Mr. Gordon objected to paying the Police Department's costs. He declared that it savored of Prussianism that his client should have to pay for his liberty, and after other strenuous objections, he agreed to pay the costs, but under protest.

Crown Attorney Hatton was willing to drop proceedings before the trial was opened if Mr. Gordon consented to pay the costs that had been entailed in the arest of McMullen, but Mr. Gordon replied that there was nothing in the Act providing for costs.

Proceeding with the case, Chief Thompson was called for the prosecution and stated that McMullen had told him in Havelock that he was thirty-one years of age, and that he had neither reported for service nor claimed exemption under the Military Service Act. He was disgusted, he had said, by the repeated urgings of an Englishman who had worked with him and of the foreman of the C.P.R. shop. Finally when the order from the Company was posted, McMullen picked up his tools and departed.

This was the only evidence, Mr. Gordon declining to adduce any for the defence.

It is understood that a defaulter who is found guilty of failure to register found the Act, thereby forfeits his right to claim exemption when he ultimately reports.

One Degree Below Zero Last Night

The first zero weather of the winter was experienced last night, one degree below being the figure. This is earlier than usual, but is not a record. The first zero of last winter was on Dec. 13th; of 1915, on Dec. 15th; of 1914, Nov. 18; of 1913, Dec. 27; while the previous winter, the zero mark was not reached until Jan. 9th, when 14 degrees below was recorded. Milder with light snow.—W.P.

FRENCH TROOPS ARE POURING THROUGH ALPS

Heavy Reinforcements For The Italians Travel by Historic Route

(By Henry Wood.)
(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

WITH THE FRENCH ARMIES IN ITALY, Nov. 27.—French troops are pouring through the Alpine passes to-day.

Relief is in sight for Italy. Men and guns to roll back the would-be despoilers of Venice are passing in seemingly never-ending streams through the century channelled ravines. They came through the same great gaps in the Alps where every great army has entered Italy from Hannibal's legions to Napoleon's invincibles. This time they came as friends of Italy, armed with modern war equipment to help Italy throw back the legions of the modern Huns.

Columns of French troops to-day are wending down the heights in the plains. Many are following the very road which their great Napoleon himself ordered constructed. At one point I watched the French lines, light artillery densely packed in come in snaky lines, while not far away another monstrous line of horse drawn army waggons, speeding automobile convoys, motor lorries, and the vast impedimenta of an army came along the road. They skirted precipitous mountain sides or dipped over into dark ravines. The mountain sides rang with the echoing lilt of the Marseillaise as sung by the happy poilus. Every group of the Italian Alpini which the columns met responded with the Garibaldi Hymn, the Royal Italian march, and short sharp cries of Italy's war slogan—"Avanti Savoi." When the French columns reach a certain point on the plains south of the Alps, they are to entrain on a net-work of Italian railways for transportation to the base of operations.

375,000 SLAV TROOPS HAVE LEFT THE TRENCHES

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

German Staff Officers Are Now In Petrograd

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

LONDON, Nov. 27.—German General Staff officers are in Petrograd intriguing with the Bolesheviki leader there, according to authoritative information reaching here this afternoon.

Voice of The People

Correspondence under this heading containing or involving attacks on individuals, or violent or extreme statements, must, to secure insertion, be signed with which thus assumes the responsibility.

To the Editor of the Examiner:

Dear Sir,—If Labour would care to interview Sir Robert Borden on Friday or to occupy a few minutes of the time of the meeting in speaking to the people, or in behalf of Labour, I would be glad to arrange it. The tremendous part played by Labour in the present war, both at home and overseas, would suggest that whatever Labour may have to say on an important occasion such as this would receive the attention which it calls for.

OTTAWA, Nov. 27.— To-day's noon casualty list contains 237 names, including 24 killed in action and died of wounds. The balance are wounded and gassed.

Veterans and Women's League Will Co-operate

The Great War Veterans' Association and the Woman's Unionist League, the latter just launched yesterday, have decided to link up their forces on behalf of the Union Government in the coming elections.

At last night's general meeting of the War Veterans in the armouries, a deputation from the Women's League comprising among others, Mrs. Arthur Stevenson, Mrs. W. R. Morris and Miss Pearce, waited upon the G.W.V.A. and suggested that the two bodies should co-operate especially in the work of canvassing the women voters.

Mrs. Stevenson, president of the Women's League, informed the Veterans that the League had been organized yesterday afternoon, that Miss Rush had been appointed organizing secretary and that headquarters would be secured on George street. It was proposed to inaugurate a house to house canvass of the city, and the Women's League asked the Veterans to furnish them with the names of at least fifty soldiers' or veterans' wives who would assist in the work and to co-operate with them in every way.

Mrs. Morris and other ladies present took part in the discussion. It was pointed out that the Veterans also proposed to canvass all the women voters on behalf of the Union Government.

After the deputation had withdrawn the Veterans selected a committee composed of Comrades A. Theobald, chairman, W. Perks, H. Gilbert and E. W. Watson to co-operate with the women.

They also discussed the question of a canvass by the Veterans and a resolution was passed authorizing the executive to divide the Association into groups to canvass the different wards in the city.

It was announced that there would be a women's mass meeting on Thursday night to be addressed by Mrs. L. A. Hamilton of Toronto.

RICHARD HALL & SON LIMITED

DEATH OF A WELL KNOWN AND PROMINENT CITIZEN

Mr. J. B. McWilliams Died at His Residence, 558 Gilmour Street, on Monday Afternoon

In the death of Mr. J. B. McWilliams, which took place at his residence, 558 Gilmour street, on Monday afternoon, Nov. 26th, the city, county and province will miss one who has filled for many years a large place in the affairs of the community, in many important capacities — government, municipal, educational and society.

Mr. McWilliams was of Irish descent; his grandfather came to Canada from County Cavan, Ireland, in 1831, and settled in the township of Cavan, afterwards removing to Belmont township. His father, the late James McWilliams, was married to Miss S. A. Bannon in 1843, and Mr. McWilliams was born on May 20th, 1845. His early years were spent in Norwood, and in 1857 he removed to Peterborough, where he resided till his death. He was educated in the Norwood and Peterborough grammar schools, as they were called in those days.

For several years he conducted a carriage business in Peterborough, but it was in his public and semi-public relations that Mr. McWilliams was best known.

He was an enthusiastic member of the Orange society, which he joined in 1863, at the age of 18 years, being continuously a member for fifty-four years, and received many evidences of the confidence of his brethren of the society. He was elected Deputy-County Master in 1870 and County Master in 1871; and occupied the latter position for sixteen years. Upon his resignation he was presented with a gold jewel by the District Lodge of Lakefield, and a complete dinner set of French china, by the County Lodge. In 1901 he was made an honorary member of L.O.L. No. 80. He was elected County Master in 1896 and in 1903. He also held the position of Grand Lecturer and Deputy Grand Master for Ontario East, and also that of Deputy Grand Lecturer of British America. At the meeting of the Grand Lodge of British America in Peterborough, in May, 1909, Mr. McWilliams was presented with a beautiful scarlet collar. In 1912 he was made an honorary member of the Royal Black Knights.

He also took an interest in military matters, was a member of the Peterborough Rifles and served with that company at the front during the Fenian Raid of 1866, and in recognition of his services received a medal and land grant and also the $100 gratuity from the Dominion government.

Mr. McWilliams occupied several positions of prominence besides those mentioned. He was appointed deputy sheriff of Peterborough in 1869 and Crown Timber agent for the Midland District in 1872, and was, in other ways, closely associated with lumbering and forestry. He served for a time as manager of the Ontario Lumber Company, and in 1894 was made Ontario Superintendent of Woods and Forests, resigning that position in 1906, and was appointed on the Provincial Forestry Commission in 1897; and a trustee of the Protestant Home in 1896.

Other positions of responsibility included that of Commissioner in the Queen's Bench for the counties of Peterborough, Victoria and Hastings, and in 1874 commissioner for the province.

The late Mr. McWilliams took an active interest in municipal and educational affairs. He was first elected a member of the town council in 1877—at the head of the poll, and in the years 1897, '98 and '99 was again elected, each time at the head of the poll. He was also a member of the School Board for four years. He was a director of the Agricultural Society for two years and vice-president of the Horticultural Society. He was made a Justice of the Peace in 1886, and a Justice of the Peace for the districts of Algoma, Parry Sound and Manitoulin Island.

In religion Mr. McWilliams was a Presbyterian, a member of St. Paul's church. Nearly all his life he was an active Liberal in politics, and his relations in this regard were provincial as well as local. His house was a home for years for leading Liberals on their visits to this district, among his guests having been Hon. T. B. Pardee, Hon. A. S. Hardy, Hon. John Dryden, Hon. J. M. Gibson, afterwards Lt.-Governor; Sir George Ross and Sir Richard Cartwright.

It will thus be seen that Mr. McWilliams lived a busy life and gave service in many important capacities. For the past few years he have lived retired, in contrast with the busy years of his life of active manhood.

The fact of his having enjoyed robust health to an advanced aged may be accounted for by the fact that Mr. McWilliams could boast that he never tasted strong drink nor used tobacco.

On May 15, 1867, he was married to Miss Isabella Davidson, who survives him, together with three sons—Messrs. Roland F. McWilliams, K.C., Winnipeg; Theodore McWilliams, of the Peterborough Hardware Company, city, and Dr. V. H. McWilliams, New York; and Mrs. Miller.

The funeral takes place from the family residence, 558 Gilmour street, on Wednesday, service at the house at 3 o'clock.

JAPANESE MISSION IS BACK

Viscount Ishii Amazed at the Extent of America's War Preparations

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

(By Ralph Turner.)

TOKIO, Nov. 27.—The Japanese mission to the United States, headed by Viscount Ishii, returned home to-day. "The magnitude of the preparations which America is making to wage war on Germany is literally undreamed of here," Viscount Ishii declared. "Her preparations will have a great influence on the victorious conclusion of the war." Ishii likewise glowingly praised the "firm determination" of the American people in their united work in preparing for war.

A Needless Alarm

It's a very relieved feeling that comes over you when you discover that something you were afraid of turns out to be of no particular consequence. You hear reports that coal, wood and other commodities are going to be impossible to procure, and then you have the pleasure of seeing the coal man drive in and leave you a load of fuel just when you need it most. The immense amount of leather used for war purposes has given rise to stories of paper and wood being the only thing left to make footwear, but when you go to to the Peterborough Shoe Store you find there as fine a selection of nice, soft, pliable leather boots as ever, although prices have soared somewhat. As an instance of what Mr. Erster can still do in the way of a shoe bargain, he is continuing for Wednesday and the balance of this week, his offer of ladies' patents with kid or cloth tops, and some all gun metal boots that would have sold at regular prices of $5.00 and $5.50 two years ago, and which he now offers at only $2.50. He has other good bargains, too. Find the right place, 201 George street, New Lundy Block.

Special Classes For Mentally Defective Children Discussed By Dr. McMurchy of Toronto

The difficulties that complicate the problem of providing special facilities for the care and training of the twenty-five or thirty mentally defective children in Peterborough's public schools found no immediate nor easy solution in the informal address and discussion on this subject by Dr. Helen McMurchy, of Toronto, at a special meeting of the Board of Education last night. Dr. McMurchy's wide experience in educational questions and particularly her knowledge of the Department of Education's recent measures to assist schools in this new and necessary work only served to confirm the doubts the Board has entertained since it began the consideration of this matter some months ago. Not that the obstacles appear insuperable, but rather in the repressive financial conditions, in the peculiar character of the work and in the fact that it is comparatively undeveloped in Ontario, the Board had foreseen the difficulties Dr. McMurchy didn't minimise. Toronto, Hamilton, Ottawa, and Brantford have organised auxiliary classes for backward and mentally deficient children with more or less success, but Inspector Mowat pointed out that Peterborough's problem is not materially lessened by the experience of these other cities.

Dr. McMurchy suggested as a preliminary step that a special class be opened in each school, but the accommodation in most of them is already taxed to the limit. The proposal of a class in one of the centrally located schools brought up the question of the transportation of children from the more remote sections of the city. The Department of Education offers a grant of $100 to any auxiliary class and will pay twenty per cent. of the cost of equipment, and fifty per cent. of the extra salary or bonus to the teacher in charge of it. Thus if a teacher in an ordinary grade receives a salary of $900 and is offered an additional $100 as teacher of an auxiliary class, the Government would pay half of the extra salary, or $50 in this case.

A Preliminary Step.

Dr. McMurchy stated that it was important to make a good beginning in this new work. A class might be organised for children who are backward in their studies. A boy, for example, who had not had a good chance to learn and thus found himself conspicuous among younger classmates, could be transferred to the auxiliary class, and with special teaching be advanced until he was prepared to enter a grade of children of his age. By this means the public would quickly recognise from its results the benefits of the auxiliary class, and it would gain the favour of the public. It would not only relieve the teacher in the regular grades of a difficult problem and increase the efficiency of the school, but the first success would direct attention to the whole question of backward and mentally deficient children.

Backward pupils, Dr. McMurchy said, included those who had fallen behind as the result of absence from school. "You don't realise what a terrible drag they are on the class and how they interfere with the progress of the other children.

"For the mentally deficient a medical advisor is necessary. In the teachers, the school nurse, and doctor you have all the machinery necessary."

"How are we to establish a class and how could we get the parents to accept?" Mr. Eastwood asked.

Dr. McMurchy: That's why I suggested a class for backward children to begin with. If I were opening a "backward class" I would keep the mentally defectives out of it.

Dr. Neal: Where would you put them?

"You would require a special class for them," Dr. McMurchy replied.

It was pointed out that there is no one to designate such children.

"That's where you need a medical for them," Dr. McMurchy replied.

Mr. Eastwood: And the Department doesn't provide for a medical advisor. We have a number of mental defectives to-day who are holding back the other children and the classes and we have no way of dealing with them.

Mr. Mowat: Our problem is not the backward children, but the mentally deficient.

Mr. Eastwood: We have some twenty-five of them, and we have no real machinery wherewith we can say "these children shall be specially treated."

"The Minister of Education will tell you that you should have a medical inspector. The doctor will then assume the responsibility."

Dr. Neal stated that in a city of Peterborough's size the care of defectives would cost almost a prohibitive sum. The number was increasing each year.

"We would keep them until they are 13 or 14 years old, then they would be turned out, and in a year our work would be undone," Dr. Neal commented. "Why should this be undertaken by the Department of Education? It should be the work of the Government. Why should we have auxiliary classes in our schools when we know these children will need care all their lives?"

"Do you think it wise to make an attempt here?" Dr. Neal asked.

"I certainly do," Dr. McMurchy answered him.

Mr. Crane: How many parents think their children are defective?

Dr. McMurchy: None of them.

However, she added, the parents do know, and she related a number of instances by which parents in Toronto had given their full sympathy to the work when they realised the relief it offered them, and the aid to the children.

Mental defectives are a disrupting influence in their homes, Dr. McMurchy said. They haven't the sense to conduct themselves as normal people do.

A new cottage to accommodate 150 defectives has been opened at Orillia and will be immediately filled.

A National Service.

Dr. McMurchy made an appeal for the special consideration of children in these days. "It is a national service to give them every chance, not only for the part they would ordinarily play in Canada's future, but also to fit them for the work that would have been done by those brave men who have given their lives in order that the children may have their chance. And many of these children have been waste product heretofore. I have seen them in Houses of Refuge, orphan asylums, Industrial Homes, and other institutions."

Dr. McMurchy was tendered the thanks of the Board for her visit to Peterborough and for the information she had presented.

Austro Germans Lose Heavily In Vain Attempt Against Italians.

Canadian Press Despatch

WASHINGTON, Nov. 27.—Heavily massed forces of Austro-German troops vainly trying to break the Italian defensive line, have suffered great losses, according to official despatches today from Rome. And between the Piave and Brenta rivers alone the Italians have worn out six divisions of Teutons.

To Avoid Rough, Coarse, Chapped, Blotchy Skin

Most skins require constant grooming at this season to keep them from becoming unduly red, blotchy, coarse, rough, or harsh, or if such condition has developed, to overcome it. In such cases it is particularly inadvisable to keep piling on cosmetics which clog the pores and make the complexion worse than ever.

It's a lot more sensible to use ordinary mercolized wax, which literally absorbs a spoiled complexion. Apply the wax, like cold cream, before retiring. Next morning, in washing it off, you'll wash away fine, flour-like particles of the unsightly cuticle. Repeat for a week or more and you'll have an entirely new skin—soft, white, spotless and beautiful as a child's. One ounce of mercolized wax, procurable at any druggist's, is all you'll need.

Six Enemy Submarines Are Destroyed

(Specail to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

NEW YORK, Nov. 27.—French Ambassador Jusserland was the authority here to-day for the statement that six enemy submarines have been destroyed in the last four days. He was said to have the statement to a group of American and French soldiers at the "Hero land" bazaar.

Hollanders Are Growing Bitter

"This is the only possible policy of neutral countries who want friendly relations with their neighbours, needing them on account of the geographical position, or economic structure. Besides, the quantity of our eastward exports is so small compared with the tremendous population of the Central Empires, that it is utterly impossible to understand how the Allied press can talk about Holland feeding Germany unless it is wrongly informed.

"I do not believe the American government wants us to break commercial relations with our easterners. He added a moment later: "America knows this is impossible, as it would force Holland into a one-sided economic policy which no responsible man wants, since it would kill the vital conditions for independence.

"It is a natural thought not to give much attention to a small neutral country when the war need of belligerents are claiming so much attention. But if from any nation, Holland may claim from America that the vital rights of a small neutral shall be respected.

"We are convinced we can stand the light of publicity and we sincerely believe, if well informed about our position, our needs, our aims, the American government and people will both acknowledge that our policy is right and that we ask nothing but to be treated according to the principles which America wants to prevail among nations."

EXCELLENT SKATING ON LITTLE LAKE NOW

Not in years has the Little Lake presented such an ideal sheet of ice than that which formed on Friday night and has since been steadily thickening. The absence of snow, the smooth glare surface, the moon light have combined to afford a skater's paradise with the single fault of the lack of comfortable dressing quarters. However, those who have friends in the neighbourhood may probably take advantage of a hospitality that would include refreshments after skating. Venturesome boys have gone far out over the current, but those who will take advantage of this immense natural rink are warned not to venture across to the east shore, even opposite the cemetery point. There is accommodation for the whole city in the bay that Crescent street skirts, and already hundreds have enjoyed the rare sport of skating unhampered by artificial accommodation.

ENJOYABLE MUSICAL PLAY CLEVERLY PRESENTED BY AMATEUR COMPANY

"The Prince O' Patters" Under the Auspices of the Peter Robinson Chapter at the Grand Opera House Was a Great Success—Many Musical Hits—Play Will Be Repeated To-night.

Bubbling over with bright and witty sayings, jingly music, and funny situations cleverly handled by the talented principals, the Prince o' Patters presented under the auspices of the Peter Robinson Chapter, I.O. D.E., by an amateur company drew a capacity house at the Grand last night.

The Plot.

The plot, or what there is of a plot in a musical comedy, is the story of a search for a happy woman, the discovery of which will save the luckless head of the ridiculous old monarch, H.R.H. the King of Timberling, cleverly portrayed by Mr. Campazzie. The search continues through a series of side-splitting situations, throughout which there is an overflow of wholesome, healthy humour which is made the most of. The costumes and stage effects represent a world of artistic merit, and as original costume after costume followed in the chorus, the audience could not but wonder at the diligence and the thought they represented.

The Cast.

Mr. Joseph Campazzie, as the amorous and doddering old monarch King of Timberling, made the most of the situations, taking his part with the absolute detachment of a professional, handling the lines in a natural and effective manner. His solos and clever local hits were received with much applause, especially his reference in a song to the effect that "Another City Council Wouldn't Do Us Any Harm." Professor and Mrs. Comicsection, the prosaic old scholar and his sprightly wife, were cleverly portrayed by Mr. Donald Denham and Miss Jessie Spence. Mr. Denham's natural manner added greatly to the situations in which he was at the heels of his erratic wife, while Miss Spence's handling of her lines would have been a credit to a stage star. Time after time her choruses were encored and each encore responded to in Miss Spence's well-known graceful manner.

Marie Fleurdelis, so charmingly presented by Mrs. Marguerite Birnie captured the hearts of the audience from her first appearance, and her original and brilliant portrayal of the lively little flirt was done in so winsome a manner she will long hold a place in the affections of her audience.

Before Miss Mabel Patterson, who took the part of Stella Foxey, had fairly entered the stage the audience in remembrance of her past year's accomplishment in the play presented, then applauded till the building rang. Dainty and winsome as ever, absolutely unconscious of the applause Miss Patterson again took the difficult part of the high stepping actress in her professional manner.

Mr. Herb Rush, as Piper Heidseick, was quoted by all who heard him last night as par excellence. His fine voice was heard at its best. As the Irish waiter, he with his clever handling and brilliancy of the lines kept the audience in roars.

Miss Madge Graham, as Prince de Kaciak, made the most dandified little prince imaginable. All the world loves a lover, so the audience was prepared to enthuse over Miss Graham, if only on account of her role, but her delineation of her part proved her histrionic abilities. Dainty and gracefully rendered, her solos were all that could be desired.

Mr. Lennox MacLaren, as Nasticus, took the difficult role of the "nobody loves me" self-imagined flirt in his killing manner so well remembered from last year, and was a huge success in every way.

Nakita, the role of a native princess, was cleverly portrayed by Miss Jessie Cressman. Her elusive ways of slipping from the pursuing Nasticus were cleverly and charmingly acted.

Mr. G. Walton Fitzgerald, as Ginger, the empty-headed nigger, can only be described as a side-splitting comedian. The reception Mr. Fitzgerald received on every appearance showed how the audience appreciated him. He was the life of every scene he entered.

Miss Helen MacLaren, as Dolly added a voice of unusual sweetness and power to a winsome personality which took the audience's heart by storm. In "Days of A B C" anything more exquisite than her rendering of the solo would be hard to find.

Miss Florence Scott, so well known for her charming voice, made a most lovable Pansy, and was greeted with hearty applause at her every appearance.

The Chorus.

The chorus, which would have served as an admirable recruiting poster of whether Canada was worth fighting for, was composed of a collection of pretty girls. No one could wonder the boys want to come home after seeing the chorus.

The Music.

Mrs. Alec Spence, who took charge of the music of the play, excelled herself, and was largely responsible for the magnificent success of the production, as in such a play practically everything hinges on the setting of the music. She, likewise the principals in the play, received beautiful bouquets of roses, fitting tokens of the appreciation of the audience.

Mr. Neville.

Of Mr. Neville, the composer and producer of the play, no praise is high enough for his patience in training the cast and of his own splendid acting in the role of William Slick, the professional crook.

Grand Finale.

The grand finale was particularly well chosen and effective, being a tableau, "United We Stand," composed of:

Miss France (Maisie Armstrong), Miss U. S. A. (Lettie Shearer), Miss Britain (Margaret Neill).

The Chorus.

Marie McCarthy, Irene Scott, Genevieve McCarthy, Hazel Eaton, Stella Fleming, Olga Johnson, Annie Kelly, Stella Cuffe, Lettie Shearer, Maisie Armstrong, May Lynn, Phyllis Dawson, Ida Lynn, Celia Dunsford, Margery Hatton, Seabourne Hamilton, Georgia Stevenson, Olive Conway, Edith Kerr, Mamie Cottingham, Alice MacFarlane, Kathleen Fanning, Emma Worth, Mamie Drope, Hazel Austin, Esmie Aylmer, Helen Stapleton, Gladys Mulholland, Margaret Eastwood, Dorothy Amor, Vermont, Margaret Neill.

Musical Numbers.

The musical numbers were as follow:

BOWLING On Water St. Alleys

TEN-PIN LEAGUE INAUGURAL MEETING.

Last night the inaugural meetin of the Peterborough Ten-Pin League, to be played at the Water Street Alleys, was held. The Captain of each team was present, and all matters concerning the league were dispensed with.

The following officers were elected:
Hon.-Pres.—Mayor J. J. Duffus.
President—R. W. Williams.
Vice-President—Mr. Jardine.
Sec.-Treas.—Wm. Henderson.
Executive Committee—J. D. Fitzpatrick, H. Carter, R. N. Early, N. Routley, F. C. Weber, W. D. Thomas, E. Smith, E. McDonald and the officers.

The following are the opening games of the League:

Monday, Dec. 3—Grocers vs. West Ends.
Tuesday, Dec. 4.—The Macs. vs. De Laval.
Thursday, Dec. 6—High Rollers vs. Can. Gen. Elec.
Friday, Dec. 7.—Printers vs. Centrals.

TORONTO VS. PETERBOROUGH.

Mr. J. D. Fitzpatrick received word to-day from the Toronto Bowling Club—champions of the Commercial Five-Pin League of the Queen City, will play the second match of the Inter-City championship series on Saturday night next, at het Water Street Alleys.

It will be remembered that the Peterborough team journeyed to Toronto some time ago and defeated this team in their own back yard. A good game is anticipated as the Toronto bowlers are looking for revenge. All bowling enthusiasts and others are invited to witness this match.

PETERBOROUGH BOY IS SERVING IN PALESTINE

Interesting Letter From Trooper Jack Allan Who is Attached to the Australian Light Horse Operating in the Holy Land

Mrs. Susan Smith, 214 Munroe Avenue, has received the following interesting letter from her son, Trooper Jack Allan, who has been in Egypt for the past two years.

Trooper Allan was a Peterborough boy, but was in Australia at the time of enlisting. Trooper Allan is a member of the Australian 4th Light Horse, now operating in Palestine. He was a stepson of the late Private Henry Smith, one of the first members of the 93rd Battalion to fall in action.

Strange to say, both father and stepson enlisted on the same day in the same year without knowledge of each other's intentions, in two widely separated countries like Australia and Canada. Trooper Allan learned his trade as a barber in Peterborough.

Trooper Allan's Letter.

Trooper Allan's letter follows:

Palestine, Sept. 19, 1917.

Dear Mother, — Your parcel to hand, all in good order. The tobacco was most welcome. I don't know where you got the idea that I didn't smoke. Didn't I smoke when I was home last? I forget. It's such a long time ago, I've almost forgotten what Canada is like. I haven't seen snow since the winter of 1910-1911. I sent you a photo last July. Did you get it? There was a mail boat sunk about the time it would be on the water, so don't be surprised if you don't get it. I sent one to Ethel, Nell, and Wess, also Cora Peters, by the same mail, and if the Germans have torpedoed me I'll be really annoyed and maybe shoot some of them.

Well, they call this the Holy Land. I dont' know why, unless it is because of the old well. It keeps you dodging mostly all day, worse luck. I am writing this letter in our daily dust storm. You can't see more than a hundred yards for dust, sometimes not that far, and as I said this is the Holy Land, the Promised Land, the land that flows with milk and honey. I've been here six months, and divil the bit have I seen. All I see out here is sand, sin, sweat, sdrrow, sore eyes, and syphilis. So I think when Moses gave the children of Israel that milk and honey song and dance, he sold them a gold brick.

I reckon we'll be doing the Turks a kindness if we take it off them.

Well, I think that is all for the present. Many thanks for the parcel. Address as before. Jack.

October 9th, 1917.

Dear Mother.—As you see, I wrote to you some time ago, but didn't get a chance to post it, but am doing so now. Did you get the photos I sent last July? I am afraid they were sunk. Jack.

NO DECLARATION OF WAR AGAINST AUSTRIANS YET

President Wilson Will Preserve an Attitude of "Watchful Waiting"

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

WASHINGTON, Nov. 27.—President Wilson will not ask for a declaration of war against Austria of Germany's other allies at the outset of Congress, was authoritatively learned to-day. Developments in the sinking of the American steamship Schuylkill may change the outlook, however. "Watchful waiting" of the situation will be the President's attitude despite the wishes of many congressional leaders for immediate action. Until an actual clash of Austrian and American forces is inevitable the administration prefers to let the diplomatic situation rest as it is.

A deadlock on the Italian plains or decisive Teuton defeats on other fronts may cause Austria to seek an advantageous peace. The United States has remained at peace with Germany's most powerful aid for the express purposes of being free to aid such a move if it is considered best for the allied cause.

Veterans Decide To Invest Etc.

an appointment was being made the usual procedure in regard to selecting a returned soldier for the position would be carried out.

A Veteran Band.

Comrade Muir wanted to see some action taken about securing the 93rd band instruments for the use of the Veterans. He thought that the Association already had the nucleus of a band and that they should send a strong delegation to wait upon the City Council in regard to securing the instruments.

Secretary Whatley remarked that he had discussed the matter with the Mayor and some of the aldermen and that he did not think there would be any difficulty provided the Council were sure that the Veterans could form a band.

Comrade Hughes, former bandmaster of the 93rd band, thought that the only way that a band could be formed at the present time was to take in about fifteen bandsmen in the city as honourary members of the Association and with the bandsmen already members of the G.W.V.A. a good organization could be formed which would be augmented from time to time by bandsmen returning from overseas. He did not propose that the honourary members should be dropped to make room for those returning, but that the membership should be increased by the veterans who come back, eventually bringing the band up to a strength of about forty-five.

The suggestion from Comrade Hughes was enthusiastically received and the secretary will get a ruling from headquarters as to whether honourary members can be admitted under such circumstances. If the answer is favourable the Veterans will undoubtedly proceed with the organization of a band and ask the Council for the 93rd band instruments.

Vice-President Leaving.

Secretary Whatley informed the meeting that Vice-President Toone had been appointed to a position on the Investigation Department of the Pensions Board and this appointment would necessitate him leaving the city. Comrade Whatley referred to the valuable services Comrade Toone had given the G.W.V.A. and moved that the thanks of the Association be tendered him.

Comrade Toone in acknowledging the vote of thanks, remarked that although his work would call him out of the city, he wished to continue as a member of the Peterborough branch.

The meeting was informed that it was the wish of Capt. Burnham that the chair at the Borden meeting on Friday night should be occupied by one of the officers of the G.W.V.A. President Staunton will be out of the city and Vice-President Toone will be unable to act, and the members therefore unanimously selected Secretary Whatley as chairman. The Veterans will attend the Friday night meeting in uniform and will be largely represented.

Owing to the absence of President H. J. Staunton, the chair was occupied at last night's meeting by the Vice-President, Comrade Toone.

To the Electors of East Peterboro

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN:—

I believe no greater disaster could, at the present time, befall our country than the defeat of the Borden Union Administration at the polls on December 17th.

The Policy of this Administration is the speedy and continuous reinforcements of our Canadian troops on the battle-front; and the putting forth of all our National strength for the cause of civilization and freedom.

To carry out this Policy, a number of Canada's ablest Public men of vision—sinking for the present—all political differences now stand together—strong to battle for the right—united to WIN the WAR.

For over three years thousands of Loyal Canadians of many creeds and of different Nationalities, have stood shoulder to shoulder on the Battlefields of Europe, gallantly fighting a common foe, and sometimes standing; sometimes falling, have won for the name of Canada undying fame. Shall we, with all possible speed, send help to these, our heroic defenders now holding the battle-line or shall we, break faith with them as well as "with those who die"—delay—vote—while the enemy advances?

As a Union Candidate in this Riding, I am putting forth every effort to win East Peterborough to the support of the Borden Union Administration and if elected shall to the utmost of my ability support the same.

To this end I now earnestly solicit the co-operation and influence of every loyal, patriotic man and woman in East Peterborough.

I have the honor to be, faithfully yours,

J. A. SEXSMITH

OBITUARY

JOHN S. PICKEN.

A well-known and most highly respected resident of Percy Township passed away on 16th November in the person of John S. Picken. The deceased, who was sixty-five years of age, had been ill for a month. He was born in Percy Township, and had lived practically all his life there, enjoying the esteem and respect of a large circle of friends.

The late John Picken is survived by a widow, two daughters, Mrs. Daniel Sedgwick and Miss Nellie Picken, Concession Street, East City, and one son, George, residing on the homestead.

The funeral took place on Sunday, 18th November.

MRS. JAMES SCOLLARD.

Mary Ann Young, beloved wife of James Scollard, Ennismore, died yesterday at Ennismore Cross after an illness of several months' duration. Mrs. Scollard was born at Young's Point 73 years ago, where she resided until her marriage. During her long residence in Ennismore her faithfulness as a mother and kindliness as a neighbour and friend, won for her the respect and love of all who knew her. Only one year ago she celebrated her golden wedding on June 27th, at which all her twelve children were present. She leaves of the immediate family, besides her husband, 12 children, namely: Mrs. W. Herrington, Ennismore; Mrs. J. P. Flood, Ennismore; Mrs. W. D. Cavanagh, Ennismore; Mrs. W. Houlihan, Grand Rapids, Mich.; Mrs. M. A. Spang, Grand Rapids, Mich.; Mrs. T. J. Crough, Ennismore; Mrs. Jas. Killen, Peterborough; Mrs. Patrick O'Connor, Peterborough; Miss Mary at home; Miss Agnes, Medicine Hat; William of Peterborough, and Frank of Ennismore, and 45 grand children.

The funeral to St. Martin's church and cemetery will take place on Thursday at 10 o'clock.

Mrs. Scollard was an aunt of Rt. Rev. Bishop Scollard of North Bay.

MOTHERS ENTERTAINED

The "Whatsoever" Young Ladies' Bible Class of Trinity Church entertained their mothers in the School Room on Friday night, 23rd November. Over 70 were in attendance, including "the shepherd of the fold," Dr. Wilson, also Mr. Gates and wife, superintendent of the Sunday School. A Victrola kindly lent by the J. M. Greene Music Co. furnished splendid music throughout the evening.

A musical programme was rendered by members of the class as follows:

Vocal solo, Miss Gretta LeBarr.
Instrumental solo, Miss Alberta Rehill.
Reading, Miss Vera Knox.

The Mothers were then asked to join in a game, to which all responded, the enthusiasm displayed and the lively good time breaking all formality.

Vocal solo, Miss Gretta Giles.
Vocal solo, Miss Annie Pollard.
Instrumental solo, Miss K. Dolman

The choosing of partners and a grand march into the tea room, which was nicely decorated, and most enjoyed, for the splendid lunch the girls had prepared.

A surprise of a shower of hearts for a bride-to-be brought forth much applause.

Mrs. Wright, the teacher, in a few well chosen words, explained to the mothers what their girls are doing and aim to do in the Sunday School which was responded to by Mr. Gates and Dr. Wilson.

After the singing of the Doxology and the benediction by Dr. Wilson, all left for their homes, hoping this was only the beginning of a yearly "Mothers' Night" for this class of young ladies.

W. C. T. U. TO MEET.

The W.C.T.U. will hold their regular monthly meeting to-morrow afternoon at 3 o'clock in the Y.W.C.A. Rev. J. R. Webb will give a short address.

Military "Dead Line" Established Around Waterfront of City

Officials After Inspection Decide to Use Soldiers Only at Certain Points —Regulations to Protect Piers and Docks Will Be Enforced by Guards

"SHOOT TO KILL" ORDER WILL STAND

NEW YORK, Nov. 28.— The water front of New York city has been placed under military guard.

The "shoot to kill" order, applicable to all persons who invade piers and other water front property without proper authorization has gone into effect.

There was no conspicuous movement of troops; no heavy tramping of squads of soldiers marching to take possession all along the 771 miles of terrain constituting the city's water front.

The military authorities had concluded, after a conference at Governor's Island and a tour of inspection, to allow the police arrangements, as augmented by private provisions for the guarding of property, to continue in force for the present. Only here and there where there appeared to be greater danger of incursions from enemy spies, bomb plotters and other Teutonic conspirators was it decided to place a strong military guard.

OFFICIALS INSPECT WATERFRONT.

Brigadier General Eli D. Hoyle, commanding the Department of the East, accompanied by other officials, military and civilian, made an automobile tour of the waterfront, the purpose of which was to determine the points which are more exposed than others to visitations from enemy agents, and also to ascertain what provisions already had been made to protect piers and other important places along the water front.

At the conclusion of the tour of inspection, the following statement was made at headquarters on Governor's Island:

"The situation has been throroughly canvassed, and the indications are that most of the piers and other waterfront locations are very well guarded, and military guards may seem needed. No definite action has been taken to spread soldiers over the entire water front, and it is not the intention at this hour—seven o'clock in the evening—to do so at midnight."

With Brigadier General Hoyle on the tour of inspection were R. A. C. Smith, Dock Commissioner; United States Marshal Thomas D. McCarthy, United States Marshall James M. Powers, of Brooklyn, and United States Attorney Francis G. Caffey.

FIND PIERS WELL GUARDED.

Mr. Powers said that in the inspection of the waterfront in Brooklyn there were only two piers, of minor significance, at which the protective provisions had been found inadequate.

"In several of the shipbuilding and dry-dock plants," said Mr. Powers, "we found a strong federal military guard. In other places we found that the owners themselves have been furnishing a fully ample protection by means of private guards whom they call 'inspectors.' At two piers only did we discover 'inspectors' missing, and these will be summoned to appear before me to explain why they were absent.

"Between the protection afforded by the regular police and private 'inspectors,' all of whom have full military powers in regard to dealing with violators of the new regulations, there will be no necessity to put regular soldiers on patrol duty along the water front, except in exceptional cases. It would take ten thousand soldiers to take the places of the men already stationed at piers and other water front places."

Mr. Powers said that in every place their automobile approached except at the two piers the guards of which were missing, they were held up and compelled to identify themselves properly before they were allowed to proceed beyond a given point.

SHOOT TO KILL ORDER STANDS

The order to "shoot to kill" will be enforced, it was said, whether the guards stationed at water front property are soldiers or civilians. Any person who is not able to identify himself properly will take his life into his own hands if he enters within the two hundred yard limit from the water front. This applies not only to enemy aliens, but even to native American citizens.

An hour after the first statement at Governor's Island, the following announcement was made by United States Attorney John C. Knox, who had attended a conference there in the afternoon:

"It was decided that the military will take over some of the more important points; and the Police Department will assign a patrolman to every pier and dock. There will be a general tightening up of all docks, and it is probable that no one will be allowed to go on to the pier unless he has certain means of identification to be worked out."

Mr. Knox said he did not know how soon the military will take over the points decided on for military guards, as that is in the hands of the army.

WILL NOT WEAR BLUE UNIFORMS.

The intentions to dress soldiers acting as water front guards into blue uniforms has come to naught. The blue army uniforms were packed away in moth balls when the United States went to war with Germany, and since then all men in the army have been wearing either khaki or an olive drab.

Prominent Names Are Likely To Be Revealed By Mrs. De Saulles

Persons Widely Known Included In Her Testimony From Witness Stand —Rigid Cross-Examination of the Woman Will Be Given

"BROADWAY BEAUTIES"

NEW YORK, Nov. 28—Mrs. Blanca de Saulles has spent every minute of her time preparing for the ordeal through which she must pass when, under oath, she will tell of the years of indignities and persecutions which goaded her to kill her divorced husband, Jack Longer de Saulles. Most of that preparation was rest. She was in bed nearly all day on Sunday, not more ill than she has been, but hoping to gain strength that will carry her through as trying a day as any woman ever is called upon to face.

It is expected that Mrs. de Saulles will be the first witness called when her trial is resumed today in the Nassau County Court House at Mineola. Her attorney, Henry A. Uterhart, intends to let her tell her remarkable story in her own way. It probably will require the entire day. If she will tell the jury all that she has told her attorney he will be satisfied and confident that she will have acquitted herself. An outline of the narrative she is to tell was given by Mr. Uterhart n his openng address to the jury, but Mrs. de Saulles is expected to amplify that outline and to give colourful details in a drama that began in the quest for wealth and happiness and ended in death and a murder trial.

To Name Widely Known Persons.

Mrs. de Saulles is to bring the names of many widely known persons into the trial. She will tell of her husband's acquaintance with noted women, among them actresses and of his friendship with such men as the Duke of Manchester. She is to spare no one. She will relate how her little son told her of meeting a dancer with his father and of numerous parties in different apartments and on board yachts in which "the fairest beauties of Broadway" provided much of the amusement, to quote an expression by Mr. Uterhart in his opening address.

In expectation of the dramatic story to be told by the young Chilian heiress, there was a heavy demand for tickets to the court room, but Sheriff Seaman denied all. Only those who find seats will be admitted to the room.

The following days are expected to be just as much an ordeal for Mrs. de Saulles, as District Attorney Weeks said that he would insist upon cross-examining her fully.

Will Cross-Examine Her.

"She will have to undergo the same cross-examination that any other defendant would under similar circumstances," said Mr. Weeks. "I do not intend to be unduly harsh, but murder has been done; the people must not permit such crimes, and I propose to get all the facts."

The jury left the Garden City Hotel for a walk, but was away only an hour. The jurors were glad to get back to a big log fire at the hotel, where they are enjoying all comforts.

In his opening address Mr. Uterhart mentioned a letter Mr. de Saulles had written, in which he had said his wife "hated America and Americans," and intended, upon obtaining a divorce, to take little Jack to Chile, there to educate him and to bring him up to hate America. Mr. Uterhart said that Mrs. de Saulles had informed him that if she were acquitted she intended to remain most of the time in the United States and that she would have her boy educated exclusively in this country and rear him as an American citizen. The lawyer said that Mrs de Saulles liked America and Americans, and that many of her best friends were Americans.

The Pallor of Anaemia Calls for Reconstructive Treatment

ANAEMIA comes on so insidiously that you may not realize its presence until a look in your mirror discloses the pallor of the skin and of the gums, the lips and the eyelids.

You may be gaining in weight, but the flesh is soft and flabby, and you are laying on fat rather than muscle. You find yourself disinclined to exertion, and greatly fatigued by any effort. There is weakness, heart palpitation and a disturbance of the digestive system.

The failure of the organs of digestion to derive proper nutrition from the food you eat has reduced the number of red corpuscles in the blood. The blood has become thin and watery, and in spite of the food you eat you are literally starving to death.

As this process continues you must necessarily grow weaker and weaker, and the bodily organs become more and more incapable of performing their natural functions.

There can be no question that Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is the ideal treatment for anaemia or bloodlessness, because it supplies to the blood in condensed form the very elements from which new, rich blood is created. In this way it makes up for the deficiencies of the digestive system, and sets in motion the process of reconstructon.

As the blood improves in quality under this treatment the action of the heart is strengthened, circulation is better, appetite is sharpened, the digestive organs gradually resume their functions, and you gain in strength and vigor.

You will not use this food cure long before you realize the upbuilding influence on your system. With returning strength comes new hope and confidence. The discouraging days will disappear from your life, and you will feel again the joy of health.

The Food Cure

Miss Alice Howes, 21 Haddington Street, Galt, Ont., writes:—"I was very ill with anaemia, could not sleep at night, and my appetite seemed entirely gone. I suffered in this way for nearly three years, and had treatment from two doctors in Toronto, where I was living at the time, but did not get any relief. I became completely run down, and as I did not see any immediate hopes of getting better, I went back to live with my mother in Galt. I thought, perhaps, the change of air might do me good. My mother saw that I was in a bad state, because my nerves were affected, and everywhere I went I used to take dizzy and fainting spells. My hands and limbs would become numb, I would see black specks before my eyes, and cold perspiration would come out on me. My mother had been taking Dr. Chase's Nerve Food with excellent results, and she advised me to do the same. But it is hard for me to take pills, so I went to a doctor in Galt instead. However, his treatment did me so good, so I at last decided to follow my mother's advice. I began taking Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and gradually found myself getting better. I soon was able to sleep at night without any difficulty, my appetite came back, and I began to gain back my natural color. After taking about twelve boxes of this medicine I was able to return to my work in Toronto. My friends there all noticed the improvement in my condition, and I am now stronger and healthier than I have been for a long, long time. I shall always recommend Dr. Chase's Nerve Food wherever I go, as I really think it is the best treatment obtainable for worn-out nerves and run-down system."

FIRE DESTROYED SMITH TOWNSHIP FARMER'S HOME

House and Contents of Mr. Samuel Northey Were Totally Destroyed by Fire—Defective Stovepipe Supposed to Have Been the Cause—Loss Will Be Heavy.

Yesterday afternoon, fire destroyed the home of Mr. Samuel Northey, who resides on the fourteenth concession of Smith township, between Selwyn and Hall's Bridge. A defective stovepipe is supposed to have been the cause. The loss, which will be heavy, is partly covered by insurance. Very little of the contents were removed from the burning house, as the flames spread rapidly in spite of the efforts of a large number of neighbours who formed a bucket brigade and attempted to extinguishd the fire. A woodshed at the east side of the house was saved, also the outbuildings. Had the wind been in the opposite direction the result migh have been more disastrous. The woodshed, which was saved, was covered with a galvanized iron roof.

A number of small children who were in the house at the time, were sitting in a chair outside when Mr. J. W. Stuart of this city, arrived on the scene in an automobile. The children were hastily packed into the car and removed them to a nearby neighbour.

Fortunately for Mr. Northey, his brother, Mr. John Northey, receptly vacated a substantial brick house the second farm from the one occupied by Mr. Samuel Northey, and removed to Lakefield. This house will be occupied at once by the stricken family. The loss to the contents will be heavy as the house was filled with the furniture and equipment of more than one generation. None of the season's stock of fruit stored in the cellar was saved.

"THE FILM OF FEAR"

By ARNOLD FREDERICKS

CHAPTER VI.

Duvall's ride back to town with Mrs. Morton and Ruth was quite uneventful. The latter, as she has explained, was ill, weak, indisposed to talk. Duvall and Mrs. Morton kept up a brisk conversation upon the topics of the day, but both knew that it was of the girl they were thinking and their interest in the subjects they discussed was clearly forced. Both were glad when the car at last stopped before the apartment building, and the long ride was over.

Mrs. Morton invited Duvall to come in and dine with them, and he promptly accepted. Ruth seemed indifferent. Assisted by her maid, she left the car on reaching the apartment, and at once went to her room.

"You will excuse me, I know," she said to Duvall. "I am tired out and think I had better lie down at once. Dora will bring me some dinner," she said, turning to her mother.

Duvall and Mrs. Morton ate their dinner in silence. Some sense of oppression, of impending evil, hung over them both. Mrs. Morton left the table towards the close of the meal, and went to her daughters room. With the solicitude of the typical mother, she arranged the windows. That opening to the fire escape she raised to its full height. The one facing upon the court she left as it was, raised some six or eight inches. Then, having kissed her daughter good night, she returned to the library, where Duvall sat smoking a cigar.

"Ruth has gone to bed," she told him. "Both the windows in her room are open, the one on the fire escape wide, the other partly raised."

Duvall looked at her with an expression of doubt.

"I think it would be better for the present," he said "to close and fasten the one opening on the fire escape. We cannot tell to what danger your daughter may be exposed."

Mrs. Morton rose and left the room.

"I will do as you advise," she said. Going to Ruth's bedroom she closed and fastened the window in question, then she went back to the library.

"Have you hit upon an theory to account for the sending of these letters?" she asked.

Duvall shook his head.

"The whole thing is very mysterious," he said. "Of course it was easy enough for anyone to leave the photograph at the studio this afternoon. In fact it might readily have been done by one of the other actresses, who might be jealous of your daughter's success. But if the thing was done by anyone employed at the studio, how can you account for the message left in the bedroom at half-past nine this morning, the one we found on the floor? If the woman who is responsible for these threats, was at the studio this morning, how could she arrange to have the note left in your daughter's bedroom here at the same hour? That would seem to imply a confederate. I confess that the entire matter is for the moment beyond me."

"Were you able to find out anything concerning the telegram which came this morning?"

"Nothing, except that it was sent by a woman. I was not surprised to learn that. Naturally, I should expect that a woman was responsible for these threats. But what woman? That is the question." He sat for a long time thinking, his eyes fixed upon the floor.

Suddenly there came a ring at the door. Mrs. Morton, without waiting for the maid, sprang to the hall with Duvall at her heels. As she threw it open they saw a man standing at the doorway. Duvall was the first to recognize the caller.

"How do you do, Mr. Baker," he said, holding out his hand.

Mr. Baker came in and greeted Mrs. Morton.

"I didn't expect to find Mr. Duvall here," he said. "In fact I came to you to get his hotel address. Lucky I won't need it now."

"Anything new?" Duvall asked as they returned to the library.

"Nothing much. I got those samples of the writing of the various typewriters, as you requested," Baker replied, "and I thought that instead of waiting until to-morrow, it would be better to bring them to you to-night." He took a sheaf of papers from his pocket. "There are thirty-two in all. What are you going to do with them?" He placed the papers in Duvall's hand.

The latter sat down at the library table and placed the sheets of paper before him.

"Of course you know," he said to Baker, "that every type-writing machine has its own unmistakable peculiarities. It is almost impossible to find a machine that has been used at all that has not developed certain individual defects or qualities, found in no other machine. Now let us take for instance the letters that Miss Morton has received during the past few days. They have all been written on the same machine, and I am of the opinion that it is a fairly old one. While going down to the studio this afternoon, I worked out and wrote down in my note book the particular features which appear in all these letters." He took a small leather-covered book from his pocket.

"In the first place," he said, "the letter 'a' throughout the entire communications is always found to be out of line. The key bar is doubtless a trifle bent. Let us therefore see it in any of the samples you have brought me, there exists a similar defect."

He took the samples of writing, one by one, and after scrutinizing them carefully, passed them over to Baker, who likewise subjected them to a critical examination. When their work was completed it was found that of the thirty-two samples, the displacement of the letter "a" occurred in but three, and in one of these it was so slight as to be scarcely noticeable. Duvall laid the three pages to one side.

"A second fault shown in the type-writing of the letters," he said, "is to be found in the capital 'W.' Its lower right hand corner has been worn or broken off, so that it invariably fails to register." He handed one of the letters to Baker. "See here, and here. The corner of the 'W' instead of being clear and distinct is blunt and defective. Let us see whether a similar fault is to be found in any one of these three samples." He picked up the three sheets of paper that had been placed to one side.

As he examined them, Mr. Baker and Mrs. Morton saw a shadow of disappointment cross his face. He handed the three pages to Baker.

"The threatening letters were not written on any machine at your studio," he said.

Baker took the pages and looked them over carefully.

"No," he said at length. "You are right. None of these show the second defect you have named."

"Well," observed Duvall cheerfully, "we have accomplished something at least. We know that these letters were not written at the studio, and it seems reasonably certain that the woman we are looking for has a type-writer in her rooms, or wherever she may be. Of course she might have had the typewriting done by some public stenographer, but I consider it unlikely. A person sending threats of this character would not be apt to entrust so dangerous a secret to a third person. We must therefore make up our minds to find a woman who has a typewriting machine, and knows how to use it."

"There are probably a hundred thousand such women in New York," Mr. Baker observed, gloomily.

"No doubt. But we have more information than that about the person who sent these letters."

"What, for instance?" asked Baker and Mrs. Morton in a breath.

"Well, in the first place, this woman was able to secure possession of a photograph of Miss Morton." He took the hideously distorted picture from his pocket. "Do either of you know where this photograph was made?"

Mrs. Morton examined the picture with a shudder. Then she rose, went to a cabinet at the other end of the room and took out an album. Returning to the table, she placed the book before her, and began to turn the pages. In a few moments she found what she was looking for, a duplicate of the likeness which lay before them, with the exception, of course, of its frightful distortions.

"This picture was made by Gibson, on Fifth Avenue," she said, referring to the photograph in the book. Both Baker and Duvall saw at once that on the retouched picture, the name of the photographer had been scratched off.

"How many of them were made, and what became of them?" Duvall asked quickly.

"Ordinarily I could not answer such a question," Mrs. Morton replied, "for Ruth has had many photographs taken, and we have not of course kept a record of them, or what has become of them, but in this particular case I happen to remember that she did not like the pose particularly and ordered but half a dozen. I do not think she gave any of them away. If I am right in my supposition there should be five more here in the apartment."

Closing the book, Mrs. Morton went to the cabinet again, and took out a portfolio containing numberless photographs of her daughter in all sorts of poses.

After some searching she produced a brown paper envelope containing a number of pictures, all taken by the same photographer, at the same time. There were in the envelope four copies of the photograph, the fifth of which was contained in the album.

"Evidently one has been taken away," Duvall exclaimed. "Now, if we can only find out to whom, our search for the writer of these letters may be very quickly ended."

Mr. Baker regarded them both with a puzzled look.

"I have seen that picture before," he said, "and of course I could not have done so had I not seen the one that is missing. He sat for a while in silence, searching his recollection for a solution of the problem. Suddenly he spoke. "There was a picture like that in my office at one time," he exclaimed. "Miss Morton sent a number down for advertising purposes and I am positive that this one was among them. I remember distinctly the pose of the head, the unusual arrangement of the hair. That photograph should be on our files. The fact that it has been taken out shows that the person who has been writing these letters is a member of our own staff, or at least has access to our files."

"That does not necessarily follow, observed Duvall.

"Why not"

"Because the picture might have been obtained from the photographer."

"But they are not allowed to dispose of the portaits of others, without the sitter's permission."

"I know that, but they sometimes do so, especially in the case of anyone so well known as Miss Morton. She has become a sort of public character."

"Well," remarked Duvall, "we can readily find out in the morning. You, Mr. Baker, can go through your files, and should you find the photograph to be there, I will take the matter up with the photographer. If on the contrary, the picture is missing, it will be fairly conclusive evidence that the persons or persons we are looking for are in some way connected with the studio."

"I will make an investigation the first thing in the morning," Mr. Baker announced, rising. "Do you expect to be at the studio early, Mr. Duvall?"

"Yes; quite early."

"Then we had best leave matters until then. Good night, Mrs. Morton." He turned and started toward the door.

He had proceeded but a few steps when the three occupants of the room were startled by a series of sudden and agonizing cries. From the rear of the apartment came a succession of screams so piercing in their intensity, so filled with horror, that they found themselves for a moment unable to stir. Then Mrs. Morton gave a cry of anguish, and darted out into the hall closely followed by Duvall and Mr. Baker.

Inheritance Tax Argument

Inheritance taxes are very heavy. Unlike Fire hazard they are not merely possible, they are absolutely certain.

They deplete your estate at once, and to your heirs represent a specific and definite loss of money.

In New York a $250,000 estate would pay a combined Federal and state tax of about $12,000. If left to a friend or distant relative, about $22,000. The John Jacob Astor estate paid $3,150,000. J. P. Morgan has insured his life for $2,500,000 to cover a similar loss.

Thus the estate is provided promptly with the ready cash to pay this tax and other expenses without the need of hurriedly disposing of securities or other assets, perhaps at a loss, to meet such needs. The logic of the situation urges immediate action. Premium rates, however low, advance with age and so does the possibility of entering the physically impaired group and losing the opportunity to secure this protection.

Knowing that this loss is actually coming, it is simply a matter of ordinary business prudence to guard against it. The Sun Life Assurance Company of Canada offer you a plan to do so at very low cost.

are lightened when she turns to the right medicine. If her existence is made gloomy by the chronic weaknesses, delicate derangements, and painful disorders that afflict womankind she will find relief and emancipation from her troubles in Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. If she's overworked, nervous, or "run-down," she finds new life and strength. It's a powerful, invigorating tonic and nervine which was discovered and used by an eminent physician for many years, in his large medical practice among women. For young girls just entering womanhood; for women in middle life, the "Favorite Prescription" is the only medicine put up without alcohol, and can be had in tablet as well as liquid form. It's not a secret prescription for its ingredients are printed on wrapper. Send 10c for trial package to Dr. V. M. Pierce, Invalids' Hotel, Surgical Institute, Buffalo, N. Y., or branch in Bridgeburg, Ont.

Hamilton, Ont. — "When passing through middle life, as in most cases of this kind, I began to fail in health. I had severe pains in my head, dizzy spells, my back ached and I had pains in my side. I became very weak and nervous. I took medicine without getting relief until I took Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and this medicine built me up in health and strength and I came through this critical period in a good healthy state. Women will find Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription very helpful during this trying time."—MRS. SARAH CAPES, 106 Robins Ave.

GIRL COULD NOT WORK

How She Was Relieved from Pain by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Taunton, Mass.—"I had pains in both sides and when my periods came I had to stay at home from work and suffer a long time. One day a woman came to our house and asked my mother why I was suffering. Mother told her that I suffered every month and she said, 'Why don't you buy a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound?' My mother bought it and the next month I was so well that I worked all the month without staying at home a day. I am in good health now and have told lots of girls about it."—Miss CLARICE MORIN, 22 Russell Street, Taunton, Mass.

Thousands of girls suffer in silence every month rather than consult a physician. U. B. S. A LECTURE

An intensely interesting and timely educational and scriptural lecture was given in the I.B.S.A. Hall, 480 1-2 George street, Monday evening, to an eager and well-satisfied audience on the vital subject, 'The Desire of All Nations Coming Soon.'

The speaker, W. W. Black, V.D.M., of Halifax, set forth the subject in forceful and convincing language, accompanied by many scriptural quotations. Taking as the central scriptural testimony, "Truth shall spring out of the earth and righteousness look down from heaven. Mercy and truth have met together, righteousness and peace have kissed each other," he called attention to the fact that the terms "earth" and "heaven," as here used, could not, manifestly, be taken literally, but (as supported by other scriptures cited) they referred to new powers of spiritual control and a new social arrangement which would change earth's "night of weeping" to a "morning of joy." This he represented to be the kingdom for which we are taught to pray, "Thy kingdom come, Thy will be done on earth as it is in heaven," etc.

George Patrick Kelly, 257 Rubidge Street.

Wm. Edward Chambers, 265 Charlotte Street.

Elmer B. Liddell, 164 Aymler, St., said he had a bad knee the doctors didn't notice. He was hit by a train on July 1st, 1914, escaping with only the injury to his knee, of which, he stated, Dr. Neal had an X-ray photograph.

"Did you tell the Medical Board of your injury?" Mr. Aylmer asked.

"I told them, but they didn't examine my knee. They may have looked at it."

Liddell was sent back to the Board for re-examination, and brought back a report that left him an "A2" man. Exemption disallowed.

Another Carpet Maker.

Norman A. Shaughnessy, Haggart Street, is another of the four men the Brinton Carpet Co. have asked to be exempted as experienced workmen. His brother's claim on this ground was refused by the Tribunal yesterday. The applicant said he had six brothers, and to Mr. Moore's inquiry added that none of them were soldiers.

Mr. Turner, superintendent of the factory, said he could not make a stronger plea than he had presented yesterday. The Canadian Government is now planning to introduce textile education into Canada, and Mr. Turner will shortly attend a meeting in Montreal, at which textile educators and experts will endeavour to formulate plans in the interest of this industry in Canada. Thus on one hand the Government moves to foster and aid textile work, and by severity of the Military Service Act it will have the effect of crushing the industry in this country.

Mr. Turner added that he believed he was acting in the best interests of Canada in striving to preserve this industry, by protecting it from the serious loss the drafting of Mr. Shaughnessy would entail.

Mr. Aylmer replied that the Government had not designated the carpet industry as privileged and of national service.

Mr. Turner stated that he would certainly appeal the decisions of the Tribunal in these cases.

Exemption disallowed.

George Hynes, 21 Cricket Place, said he was a manufacturer of food, and explained that he is employed in the puffed rice mill of the Quaker Oats Company. He asked for exemption on medical grounds, but his claim was disallowed.

Ward Hiram Weaver has farmed on 40 acres south of the Exhibition Grounds this summer, and recently rented 100 acres near Harwood. His father he said, wasn't able to give him much assistance. Weaver said that he had previously worked for farmers. Exemption allowed.

Mr. Percy Hooper applied for exemption on business grounds. Decision was deferred.

Bernard Clarence Chambers, 85 Chamberlen street, appealed on the ground of the importance of his occupation as carpenter. Disallowed.

Joseph Herbert Kilgour, 207 Dublin street, was exempted until Feb. 1, 1918. He was supported by his father in a claim that he was indispensable to the family business of baking.

Edward English, 719 Bethune street, was exempted until March 1, 1918. He is employed at the Peterboro Planing Mills making shell boxes, and admitted that the work did not require an expert.

Edward Joseph Hogan assumes practically the entire management of his father's hotel in Ashburnham. His father pleaded that he needed the services of his son in the business he has conducted for years. Exemption disallowed.

Eugene McCaffery, 332 Water St., claimed exemption on domestic grounds, but a letter from his mother showed that her main assistance was received from the separation allowance from a son overseas. Disallowed.

Vincent C. Hayes, 219 Park Street accountant with the Bank of Ottawa was supported in his claim for exemption by the manager of the local branch, Mr. A. F. Knight. Exemption disallowed.

Arthur T. Edmison, teller at the Bank of Ottawa, was exempted until Class 2 is called out.

William James Kerr, accountant at the Bank of Nova Scotia, was exempted until Class 2 is called.

Walter Vass, 7 Brown street, Adolphus Leo Picard, 127 Romaine street, and Howard William Outram, 18 Stewart Street, whose appeals were heard a short time ago, were refused exemption.

Alfred John Lawrence was exempted until he ceased to be employed as an inspector of munitions.

John Davis Flann, 372 Queen St., teller at the Bank of Commerce, was exempted until Class 2 is called.

Wilbert Pringle, 372 Queen street, and Arnold C. Hewson, were granted exemption until they cease to be employed as millers.

Ray Lloyd Flegg was exempted as an inspector of munitions.

Melville J. Stewart, R. R. No. 11, was exempted as a farmer.

Wilfrid Francis McClavey, 170 Aylmer street, was informed that he did not come under the first class.

FACE NOTHING BUT RUNNING SORES FROM ECZEMA

No rest day or night for those afflicted with that terrible skin disease, eczema, or, as it is often called, salt rheum.

With its unbearable burning, itching, torturing day and night, relief is gladly welcomed.

There is no remedy like Burdock Blood Bitters for giving relief to such sufferers; no other remedy has done, or can do so much for those who are almost driven to distraction with the terrible torture. Apply it externally and it takes out the stinging, itching and burning, and promotes a healthy healing.

Take it internally and it gets at the source of the disease in the blood, and completely and permanently drives it out of the system.

Miss Mary V. Chambers, Anagance Ridge, N.B., writes: "I used Burdock Blood Bitters for eczema. I had it when an infant, but it left me. Two years ago it came back. I used doctors' medicine, but it did good only while I used it. At last my face was nothing but a running sore. I saw in the paper what B.B.B. did for people. I took it, and to-day I am free from that terrible disease."

FEW FOLKS HAVE GRAY HAIR NOW

Druggist Says Ladies Are Using Recipe of Sage Tea and Sulphur

Hair that loses its colour and lustre, or when it fades, turns gray, dull and lifeless, is caused by a lack of sulphur in the hair. Our grandmother made up a mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur to keep her locks dark and beautiful, and thousands of women and men who value that even colour that beautiful dark shade of hair, which is so attractive, use only this old time recipe.

Nowadays we get this famous mixture improved by the addition of other ingredients by asking at any drug store for a bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," which darkens the hair so naturally, so evenly, that nobody can possibly tell it has been applied. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; but what delights the ladies with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound, is that, besides beautifully darkening the hair after a few applications, it also brings back the gloss and lustre and gives it an appearance of abundance.

Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound is a delightful toilet requisite to impart colour and a youthful appearance to the hair. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

A Pre-vision From The Past

Passing some hours, a few days ago, among my humble collection of books, picked up at haphazard in all sorts of odd corners, I came across a bound volume of magazines, published in the year 1832. It was in a decidedly tatered condition, and no amount of mending would have sufficed to restore it to a state fit for public or private display on a shelf. The sight of that disreputable-looking specimen of bookcraft took me back in memory many years to the place wherein I had purchased it, a humble shanty in the very heart of Muskoka. That district is to-day, I believe, in a progressive and prosperous condition; the farmers own substantial buildings, and in spring and summer months cattle roam through rich, luscious meadows which, in the time I speak of, were existent only in the ardent aspirations of the indefatigable settlers. Indeed, at the time I write of, nothing could have been further from one's mind than the likelihood of picking up a treasure trove in such an out-of-the-way part of the world. Listlessly I turned over its pages and was just on the point of consigning it to the limbo of oblivion at the bottom of a packing case when my eyes lit on the heading of an article entitled "Aeronautics, Real and Fabulous." The writer was Leigh Hunt, erstwhile friend of Byron and one of the foremost literary men of his day. I read the article to the end, and learned many things in the reading. Conversant as many of us are, with the fact that the art of Flying has engaged the minds of mortals from the very earliest times, it may be a surprise to some to discover that even in the time of Charles the Second a man was to be found so far-seeing as to foretell the conquest of the air by human agency. In the course of his very interesting article Leigh Hunt instances Bishop Wilkins, the friend of Evelyn, and cites his opinion on the possibility of flying. "I do seriously, and upon good grounds affirm it possible," says Bishop Wilkins" to make a flying chariot, in which a man may sit, and give such a motion into it as shall convey him through the aire, and this perhaps, might be made large enough to carry divers men at the same time together with food for their viatieum, and commodities for traffique. It is not the bigness of anything in this kind that can hinder its motion, if the motive power be answerable thereunto. We see a great ship swim as well as a small cork, and an eagle flies in the aire as well as a little gnat. This engine may be contrived from the same principles by which Archytas made a wooden dove and Regiomontanus a wooden eagle. . . . The perfecting of such an invention would be of such excellent use that it were enough not only to make a man, but the age also wherein he lives. For besides the strange discoveries that it might occasion in this other world, it would be also of inconceivable advantage for travelling above any other convenience that is now in use, so that notwithstanding all these seeming impossibilities, 'tis likely enough that there may be a means invented of journeying to the moone". . . Thus far Bishop Wilkins. Leigh Hunt finishes his article in his own words by saying "Should a time arrive, however, when balloons shall be equally safe and guidable, steerable against the wind, etc. (and who in this age of science and steam engines shall say there will not?) it is very pleasant to fancy oneself keeping one's balloon, like a carriage, ordering it hither and thither, visiting one's friends over the housetops, and "looking in" not at the street door, but at the drawing-room window, etc. And he adds: "But war. What a horrible thing to be shot in a balloon. To fall gloriously that way in battle. Think of two armies or navies, rather, meeting over Salisbury Plain, and commencing their broadsides. What a tumbling forth of bodies and cocked hats; of mid-balloon men and admirals of the sky-blue. "Skyscraper" would then indeed be a proper term for the top of a vessel, and "Pegasus" and "Bellerophon" names to some purpose. But war must go out as nations advance whether they arrive at these altitudes or not. Peaceful railroads will supersede hostile inroads (as old Fuller would have said); nations will no more go to war, when they become such close neighbours and their interests are so bound up together, than Middlesex will fight with Surrey, or tradesmen with their employers."

All which goes to show that, remarkable man as he was, there was one consideration that did not enter into Leigh Hunt's philosophy, and that was the inherent brutality of man. That weakness in his moral fibre that compels him, whether he wishes it or not, to distrust his fellow man, and to endeavour to keep pace with him in the invention of weapons of destruction as well as of usefulness in the great race for superiority in the world.

WHERE THE OLD CARS GO

VALHALLA FOR WRECKS HAS PROVED PROFITABLE UNDERTAKING FOR THE WRECKERS.

"Did you ever wonder what become of all the old and worn-out automobiles?" asks a writer in the current issue of American Motorist.

"Quite recently I had occasion to look into the matter," the writer continues, "and I was surprised at some of the facts which came to light.

"The quantities of used or second-hand cars annually disposed of have brought forth the auto wrecker and built up his business. To him come the maim, the halt and the blind in the shape of cars ruined by collision, fire, joy riders and long service, but he does nothing in the way of rebuilding or selling the cars which come to him. All are demolished utterly, and their various parts are scattered to the four winds of heaven, so to speak, and put to unguessed uses.

"Of course the price paid for these autos varies considerably — from $150 for a so-called collision car to $65 up to $125 for fire ruins and worn-outs. Engines are the principal source of revenue and a six-cylinder bronze engine, when overhauled and repaired, will bring as high as $250 from ranchers and others, who use them as power plants for irrigation, pumping, etc.

"Springs, axles, bearings, windshields, lamps, radiators, tops, etc., are purchased mostly by garage repairmen and auto owners for repair parts.

"Really about the only thing in an automobile that goes to waste in one of these graveyards in the wood-work of the bodies. There seems to have been found as yet no use to which it can be put, and as its unwieldy shape makes it impracticable to work up into kindling wood for sale, it is broken up and burned in any way possible ot get rid o fit.

"I did a little figuring on this matter, and while the items listed are approximate, of course, you will note that I have not sed the highest quoted prices:

Hot Water Each Morning Puts Roses in Your Cheeks

To look one's best and feel one's best is to enjoy an inside bath each morning to flush from the system the previous day's waste, sour fermentations and poisonous toxins before it is absorbed into the blood. Just as coal, when it burns, leaves behind a certain amount of incombustible material in the form of ashes, so the food and drink taken each day leave in the alimentary organs a certain amount of indigestible material, which if not eliminated, form toxins and poisons which are then sucked into the blood through the very ducts which are intended to suck in only nourishment to sustain the body.

If you want to see the glow of healthy bloom in your cheeks, to see your skin get clearer and clearer, you are told to drink every morning upon arising, a glass of hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it, which is a harmless means of washing the waste material and toxins from the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels, thus cleansing, sweetening, and purifying the entire alimentary tract, before putting more food into the stomach.

Girls and women with sallow skins, liver spots, pimples or pallid complexion, also those who wake up with a coated tongue, bad taste, nasty breath, others who are bothered with headaches, bilious spells, acid stomach, or constipation should begin this phosphated hot water drinking, and are assured of very pronounced results in one or two weeks.

A quarter pound of limestone phosphate costs very little at the drug store but is sufficient to demonstrate that just as soap and hot water cleanses, puifies, and freshens the skin on the outside, so hot water and limestone phosphate act on the inside organs. We must always consider that internal sanitation is vastly more important than outside cleanliness, because the skin pores do not absorb imprities into the blood, while the bowel pores do.

Women who desire to enhance the beauty of their complexion should just try this for a week and notice results.

BREAD RATION DIVORCE.

The Amsterdam Workers' Gazette (Arbeiter Zeitung) reports the case of a German workman named Klaus who has asked for a divorce because he could not get enough bread rations, which are already very small and quite insufficient for any workman, especially if he must share it with his wife. The bread shortage gave rise to quarrels and blows every day. He had no other complaint against his wife, and both parties preferred a divorce to starvation. The divorce was granted.

New Railway Organization In Canada Will Make Sure That All Equipment Does A Maximum Service

EVEN the humble freight car trudging doggedly along on endless errands, carrying all manner of strange burdens at the behest of engines that never rest—is now to be made to "do his bit," his extra "bit," in helping to win the war. Along with all railroad rolling stock and other equipment the Canadian freight car is now the subject of special attention by the Canadian Railway Association for National Defence. This Association, which was recently formed at the request of the Canadian Government, is really a joint committee of all the Canadian railways, and is headed by the Presidents of the various roads. This body has undertaken to get at least a dollar's worth of service out of every dollar's worth of railway equipment in Canada. Unnecessary competition, the duplication of service, and the wasteful use of engines and cars in other ways, are all to be done away with under this Association.

One of the worst forms of waste in this country is the underloading of freight cars. Records show that only about forty-six per cent of the marked carrying capacity of the average freight car is made use of by the shipping public. The waste is even more serious when it is understood that the actual capacity of a car is at least ten per cent higher than its marked capacity. The seriousness of such waste is easily appreciated when one knows that Canada has for some time been unable to get all the freight cars needed to carry even munitions. One huge order for oats for the troops in France was held up for many weeks owing to the lack of cars. New cars not only cost more than formerly—the price is practically three times the pre-war price, but the demand for new cars is greater than the supply, and Great Britain, France, and Russia have been placing orders in addition to the usual Canadian and American orders.

Now, however, in place of trying to buy enough new cars, the railways have united, among other things to induce shippers to load their cars at least to the marked capacity. Of course shippers don't always like to do this. It is convenient sometimes to ship just one order in a car, or to pack a car only to a certain point owing to the additional cost of labor for packing more efficiently. Such practices are being made the subject of a vigorous educational campaign. The freight car must carry a full load hereafter.

Just to show how space can be saved it has been demonstrated by some of the implement makers that fitting a cheap "deck" into a box car instead of loading on the floor only a shipment of 300 wagons can be accommodated in twelve less cars than if packed in the old way. On a shipment of 3,000 riding ploughs 32 cars can be saved, and on a shipment of 1,200 binders, 2 cars. Such savings are to be effected in almost every class of shipment. The Canadian Railway Association for National Defence intends to make sure of this new economy among other things.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

CAROL'S ISLAND

Or the Mystery Solved

By CLARISSA MACKIE

Carol Atwood watched Captain Hussey as he stowed her suit case and the covered basket in the bow of the little motorboat; then she took her place, while the captain pushed away from the landing steps and grasped the wheel all in one agile motion, born of long experience on the waters of Gull lake.

"Where is the island?" asked Carol after they had fairly started on the blue water.

"Ye can't glimpse it till we turn Pine Tree p'int; kinder queer that your cousin, or—was Steve Atwood your cousin, did ye say?" asked the captain inquisitively.

"He was my father's cousin," replied Carol, with an air of reserve.

"Well, I was saying it's mighty queer that out of all his money he should leave you nothing but Pine island here. You can't do nothing but sell it, miss. I hear you're from New York city. Work there?"

"Yes."

"So I heard. It was all printed in the newspaper when Steve Atwood died—how he left Pine island to a little cousin who was a bookkeeper or something like that in the city. The paper said it was too bad that Mr. Atwood hadn't left a sum of money so his orphan cousin could do something with it, but I dunno—you can sell the island if you want to. There's summer folks would like it for a camp.

Carol made no reply. Her blue eyes were dreamily fixed on Pine Tree point, but her thoughts were far from Gull lake and the odd inheritance left by her eccentric relative, Stephen Atwood, the many times millionaire. How easy it would have been had Cousin Stephen only left her a sum of money instead of the valueless island in this Maine lake! She sighed bitterly as she remembered the clause in Stephen Atwood's will which said that the island was not to be sold within five years after his death.

If he had left her a sum of money she might have given up that office position and gone away to seek the health that was so necessary to her successful future. She was pale and delicate looking, city born and bred, and the struggle to earn her bread and butter was growing more difficult every day. She had craved her allotted vacation. She was taking her annual two weeks' vacation in the month of May instead of August, so that she might look over the property.

The breeze ruffled the placid surface of the lake, pickerel leaped now and then, and occasionally from the bushy thicket along the shore mild eyed deer peered at the speeding boat and its passengers.

"There's Pine island," pointed the captain as they rounded Pine Tree point into the upper end of the beautiful lake.

"It is beautiful!" cried Carol, breathless with delight, as she gazed at the small green island that was her very own.

It was set like an emerald in the blue of the lake, and from amid the thick growth of pines Carol could glimpse a red roof.

"You be'ant going to stop there alone!" argued Captain Hussey as he brought the boat up to a small stone landing.

"For a few days," said Carol practically. "I'm not afraid up here in this beautiful country. Why, there is more to fear in the big city where I have always lived."

"That's all very well," decided the old man, "but I guess I'll leave old Watch with you. He can have a little vacation here along with you and hunt rabbits to his heart's content. You can bring him back with you."

Watch, the big collie, who had been asleep at his master's feet, pricked his beautiful ears at the sound of his name and leaped ashore to jump around Carol, who had reached the landing without assistance.

"Now, that is kind of you, Captain Hussey!" cried the girl, taking his reluctant hands into her little white ones "I believe that you brought Watch along on purpose."

"The missus made me do it," protested the captain as he picked up the basket of provisions packed by his wife for the young stranger. "She thinks you're crazy to stay here all alone for two weeks, and I didn't tell her what I think about it. You know I love all I could to keep you away, but I ain't never found the woman yet that would listen to reason—no, ma'am. But I'll try and run over every day and see how you get along. And now I'll look into the boathouse and see if that tidy little skiff is still there. If it is you can use it to run away from the island if things get too lonesome for you. Can you row?"

"Oh, yes!" laughed Carol. "I've learned to do that on my summer vacations."

"Good! Well, if anything bothers you or you get lonesome just pack into the skiff and come over to the mainland. You'll find the latchstring always out on the Hussey house."

"Thank you a thousand times!" cried Carol gratefully.

First Captain Hussey took the punch of keys from Carol and unlocked the boathouse. Here everything was in perfect order, the cedar trimmed row boat, the oars, the fishing nets and poles all arranged with a careful hand.

Captain Hussey dropped the skiff into the water beneath the boathouse, laid the oars in it and showed Carol how in a moment of emergency she might run down the short flight of steps, get into the boat and emerge through the swinging doors into the lake.

"It's all lovely," murmured Carol as they walked through the pines toward the little log house among the trees.

"It's kind of a tidy little place," assented the captain as he unlocked the front door. "I've heard say that out of all his houses your cousin Stephen liked this best. Ain't that just the way? Millions of money, palaces to live in, and him coming way up here to live in his log cabin and cook his own meals! It does beat all!"

"I wonder why."

"I've heard that he had poor health for awhile, and he got well up here. And he always said that his riches wa'n't nothing without health. Seems like he valued health more than money. You look kinder delikit yourself," added the captain, looking with concern at the girl's face, pale in the gloom of the darkened house.

"I'll feel better after I've been here a few days," laughed Carol. "If Cousin Stephen could regain his health here, perhaps I can find mine also."

"Did you ever see your cousin, Stephen Atwood?"

"Yes, once. A year ago he sent for me to come to his office. He questioned me closely, but he made no remark upon my answers. I never heard from him afterward. Two months ago I heard of his death in California, and I was notified that he had left Pine island to me. I thought it rather a ghastly joke at first, but there is this lovely little house, and, Captain Hussey, I've a great mind to stay here all summer!" A pink color flew into her cheeks at the notion.

"Never!" gasped the captain. "How'd you live, miss?"

"Maybe I could take a woman boarder," said Carol hopefully. "I'll advertise at once."

"That ain't a bad idee," muttered the captain. "I think I know of some one right now, Miss Halpin and her nephew. They're artists, and they'd admire a green little spot like this. Want me to speak to 'em? They're stopping at the Benner House, and you know what that is!"

"If you only would, dear Captain Hussey!" cried the delighted Carol. "I'll row over to the mainland tomorrow and find out. If they want to come I'll send in my resignation to the office at once."

"I'll see about it soon's I get ashore," promised the captain as he departed.

Carol felt very much alone as she went all over the little house, with Watch trotting patiently at her heels. She found the log cabin furnished plainly, but with every comfort for snug housekeeping and lazy enjoyment. Soon every window was wide open to the pine scented breeze and a small fire was crackling on the living room hearth just for the very homeliness of its blaze.

It was fun to light the blue flame oil stove in the kitchen and to prepare her evening meal with the dainty aluminium cooking utensils. From Mrs. Hussey's generous basket there came forth homemade bread and butter, preserves, cakes and pies, besides groceries from the store.

The next morning Carol awoke feeling strangely strong and energetic. She found everything so attractive that she was quite bewildered as to what to do first. Should she satisfy her longing to go out at once or remain indoors long enough to prepare at least a semblance of a breakfast? She decided on the latter course and flew around doing her light housekeeping, singing all the while. Then she donned a white linen sailor suit and a duck hat and went over to the mainland, leaving Watch on guard.

On the village dock Carol met Captain Hussey with a middle aged woman and a sunburned young man, whom he introduced as her new boarders, Miss Halpin and her nephew, Gerald Lane.

Together they went back to Pine island, and then began the most wonderful summer in Carol Atwood's existence. The island, which she had at first deemed a white elephant on her hands, turned out to be a treasure island indeed, for during those long days of free life under the pines Carol recovered her health—nay, she found new health, for she became round and rosy and sunburned and strong as a young Indian maiden.

She found happiness as well as health. How else could it have ended with a beautiful girl like Carol and a handsome, heart free youth like Gerald Lane living there under the kindly chaperonage of Miss Eugenia Halpin?

And the queerest thing of all was that one day while Carol was rummaging among some books in the living room she found a small tin dispatch box bearing her own name on the outside, and in the box was a letter addressed to her in a crabbed handwriting which proved to be that of her eccentric cousin, Stephen Atwood.

And the letter told her that Stephen Atwood believed her to be a sensible girl, and if she fulfilled that belief she would seek Pine island to regain her health, and in the course of time she would find this letter, which declared that, while health was greater than wealth, a blending of each was desirable in this world, so Carol would find placed to her credit in a certain city bank the sum of $50,000, and the bank book was there to prove it!

Pine island is the summer home of Gerald and Carol Lane, and to them each year comes their aunt, Miss Halpin, who loves to tell visitors of the romance woven into the story of the island, while she reproduces its beauties on canvas.

VINOL MAKES CHILDREN STRONG

And Invigorates Old People

Any doctor will tell you that the ingredients of Vinol as printed below contain the elements needed to improve the health of delicate children and restore strength to old people.

Iron and Manganese Peptonates, Iron and Ammonium Citrate, Lime and Soda Glycerophosphates, Cascara.

Those who have puny, ailing or run-down children or aged parents may prove this at our expense.

Besides the good it does children and the aged there is nothing like Vinol to restore strength and vitality to weak, nervous women and overworked, run-down men.

Try it. If you are not entirely satisfied, we will return your money without question; that proves our fairness and your protection. Millions of people have been convinced this way.

Try Making Your Own Cough Remedy

You can save about $2, and have a better remedy than the ready-made kind. Easily done.

If you combined the curative properties of every known "ready-made" cough remedy, you would hardly have in them all the curative power that lies in this simple "home-made" cough syrup which takes only a few minutes to prepare.

Get from any druggist 2½ ounces of Pinex (50 cents worth), pour it into a 16-oz. bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup. The total cost is about 55 cents and gives you 16 ounces of really better cough syrup than you could buy ready-made for $2.50. Tastes pleasant and never spoils.

This Pinex and sugar syrup preparation gets right at the cause of a cough and gives almost immediate relief. It loosens the phlegm, stops the nasty throat tickle and heals the sore, irritated membranes that line the throat, chest and bronchial tubes, so gently and easily that it is really astonishing. A day's use will usually overcome the ordinary cough and for bronchitis, croup, whooping cough and bronchial asthma, it is splendid.

Pinex is a most valuable concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract and has been used for generations to break up severe coughs.

To avoid disappointment, ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with full directions, and don't accept anything else. A guarantee of absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded, goes with this preparation. The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

Stop The Pain With Hirst's

Hirst's is not a cure-all, but it WILL STOP PAIN.

In a good many troubles, like quinsy, tonsillitis, mumps, things must run their course, but Hirst's WILL STOP THE PAIN.

Sprains, bruises, burns and other accidental injuries will cure themselves, but Hirst's WILL STOP THE PAIN, and the cure will be quicker if you STOP THE PAIN with Hirst's.

For rheumatism, lumbago and pleurisy, STOP THE PAIN with Hirst's and then follow the treatment recommended in the printed circular that goes with Hirst's.

SINGING IN ENGLISH.

The Difficulty of Sounding Certain Words on High Notes.

English as is commonly sung has become so hard to understand that musical authorities are earnestly seeking a remedy. And the composer is principally to blame, says Francis Toye, writing in the London Nation.

"That there are difficulties in singing certain English syllables on certain notes may be admitted," says Mr. Toye. "English, unlike German and Italian, is not predominantly a language of broad vowel sounds. It is awkward, for instance, to sing 'fix' or 'her' or 'sun' with a loud, sustained tone on a high note. But if composers knew their business they would not, save in any exceptional circumstances, ask the singer to do anything of the kind.

"Half the imaginary difficulties of singing English arise from the incompetence of many composers in setting it to music. They seem neither to think in terms of singing nor to study the natural rhythm of the language. When they do the 'problems' of singing in English vanish like the mist before the sun."

Pugnacious Earwigs.

Earwigs are quarrelsome creatures and are always ready to use their nippered tails against each other on the slightest provocation. When the light of a lamp falls upon them congregated at the sugar some are more scared than the others and scuttle away, when each earwig which they nearly touch in flight will savagely swing back its tail and nip in the air with fury. Sometimes the blow falls upon a neighbor, which instantly retaliates, and half a dozen furious nips are rapidly interchanged. But fighting weight quickly settles the quarrel, the smaller earwig scuttling off and the larger pursuing him for several inches, running backward and reaching savagely to right and left with his nippers. Yet these same earwigs, so vindictive at meals, will be crammed, all sizes together, into any hole or crack by day.—London Globe.

TRIBUNAL No. 275

COURT HOUSE

Judge Huycke, Police Magistrate Dumble, Members
Lt.-Col. E. B. Clegg, Military Representative

The first conscientious objector to appear before a Peterborough Tribunal made his debut this morning at the Courthouse Tribunal. He responde dto th ename of William B. Rose, and his original claim for exemption was based on his occupation which is that of a toolmaker with the Munitions and Metal Products Company. It was the opinion of the Court that the applicant's work was not of national importance, and the attention of the Tribunal Board was then directed to the claim that Rose is the support of a widowed mother, an invalid brother and sister, also a wife which he took unto himself in August last. The applicant's father and older brother were drowned in Humber Bay some years ago. Rose admitted that he was going to Montreal with the Metal Products Company, and that his weekly contribution to the family treasury varied from five to eight dollars. A younger brother works at the De Laval factory and earns two dollars a day, which the applicant for exemption characterised as "small wages."

"I don't think that is so very small wages for a seventeen-year-old boy," observed Judge Huycke.

Judge Huycke had just suggested that Rose be placed in Class II., when the applicant slapped the Bible which lay on the table, a couple of times, and said: "See that Bible? When I went to school I learned the Ten Commandments, and the Fifth Commandment says 'Thou shalt not kill,' and I certainly shall not kill," added Rose.

"What church do you belong to?" inquired Judge Huycke.

"The Sacred Heart," replied Rose.

"You are a conscientious objector, and that is not one of the tenets of the Roman Catholic faith, thank God," said Judge Huycke. "So far as I am concerned, you should go to war," added the Court.

The Board deferred judgment.

Claim Disallowed.

Martin P. Roddy, a shell worker, claimed to be the sole support of his mother.

"Take the gum out of your mouth if you are going to give evidence," said Judge Huycke.

The applicant said he was going to Montreal with the Metal Products Company. Two brothers are the sole contributors to the family exchequer and both of them have applied for exemption.

In reply to a question by Mr. Dumble, the applicant said he made between four and a half and five dollars a day at the Metal Products.

"You don't expect to be home; you are going to Montreal?" said Judge Huycke.

"I am going to send my money home," replied applicant.

"You can do that wherever you go," observed Judge Huycke.

Lieut.-Col. Clegg thought one of the boys should go.

"Which is the most rugged of the two?" inquired Mr. Dumble of Mrs. Roddy, who was present.

"Neither of them are very strong," replied Mrs. Roddy.

Martin Roddy's claim was disallowed.

Farmer Exempted.

James Rice, a farmer in Otonabee, works a fifty-acre farm. Any spare time applicant has he turns in and helps his neighbours. Last season Rice had thirty acres of crops and about ten acres of hay. Another brother works on the C.P.R. telegraph line.

The claim was allowed.

Two Brothers Overseas.

H. Brotherstone has two brothers overseas. One brother has been at the Front twenty-eight months.

"That brother should come home and let one of the others go," said Judge Huycke.

"They don' do that. They get a boy over there and keep him. Some families make all the sacrifices and others do nothing," said Mr. Brotherstone, Sr.

"We are trying to equalise it," said Judge Huycke.

Brotherstone was notified to appear again when his case will be heard.

Claim Disallowed.

Hugh Stewart, 306 Mark Street, and Judge Huycke did not agree as to what constituted domestic hardships.

"You have been associated with a good bunch of boys, and they are all over there, and they feel disappointed that you are not with them," said Judge Huycke.

"I place my home first, and that is the correct sentiment," contended Stewart.

"How much do you get at the Bell Telephone Company?" inquired Judge Huycke.

"Sixty per," replied applicant.

"What, sixty per day?" inquired Judge Huycke.

"Sixty per month, although a fellow needs sixty per day to keep up with the high cost of living," jocularly remarked Stewart, as he reached over for his passport to military service.

Ex-Policeman.

Clarence Fife Dickson, 586 Harvey Street, who was listed as a farmer, was refused exemption. Dickson was formerly a member of the Peterborough Police Force, and was recently a munition worker.

L. J. Lazure, 554 Romaine Street, was also refused exemption

The exemption claims of F. J. Keating, 157 Rubidge Street, and A. N. Conlin, 587 Sherbrook Street, were disallowed.

Robert Hinton, 463 King Street, who appeared before the Tribunal with an "A2" medical certificate, had his medical category changed to "C3" on the recommendation of the Medical Board.

Sinson Lancashire, a farmer, and F. C. Paul, 571 Water Street, both "C" men, were exempted until their class is called.

Isidore Gordon, 90 Park Street; James McGuiness, 319 Park Street; T. A. McGregor, a farmer; J. Smith, 546 George Street; Cyril Devy, 285 Park Street; William Richardson, general delivery; C. W. Hogg, a farmer; Arthur Francis Jobe, George R. Munro, 352 Brock Street, and Richard Graham, 675 Stewart Street, all "E" men, were exempted until "E" category men are required.

Chalmer Nicholls, 606 George St., a window dresser, was exempted until the first of April.

MORE SUCCESS FOR THE BRITISH

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

(By William Philip Simms.)

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES IN FRANCE, Nov. 27. — An hour before sunrise to-day, Gen. Byng hit Crown Prince Rupprecht a stinging little rap at Fontaine Notre Dame. Rupprecht had to give ground. Again, later in the day between Bourlon and Cambrai, British troops hammered their way into the northern part of the village from Bourlon Wood. They drove the Prussians with their bayonets and hand grenades into the southern half of the town below the Bapaume-Cambrai road.

The fighting was sharp and bitter.

SUFFERED TERRIBLY WITH HER HEART

Would Wake Up Smothering

The terrible smothering and choking up sensations and sinking spells, the feelings of dizziness and faintness that come over those whose heart and nerves are deranged causes the greatest distress of both mind and body.

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills give prompt relief and effect a complete cure in cases of such severity.

Mrs. A. M. Powell, Norval Station, Ont., writes: "I cannot speak too highly of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills. I suffered five years with my heart and nerves, but the last two years I have suffered terribly. If I went to bed I would wake up as if I were smothering. I did not get one night's sleep out of seven. I got so very weak that the doctor was called in, and he said it was my heart, and that I must take great care of myself. I saw your advertisement in your almanac for Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, and said I would try them. I have only taken two boxes of them and I feel a new woman. I will recommend them to anyone afflicted with heart trouble."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50c a box at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

ITALIANS INFLICT SEVERE LOSSES UPON THE INVADERS

One Statement Reaching Rome States Italians Have Taken Offensive and Broke First and Second Enemy Lines ---Austro-Germans Have Withdrawn Seven Crippled Divisions From the Piave Front--.Enemy Uses Many Gas Shells in Cambrai Sector.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

(By John H. Hearley.)

ROME, November 28.—Within the last 24 hours Italian troops, assuming the offensive, have smashed the German first and second lines, inflicting tremendous losses on the invaders, the announcement was made here to-day.

Battle front despatches to-day declared that all Italian reserves had now been completely reorganibed, thus permitting the continued use of fresh troops against the enemy. Italian industry—with Allied assistance, has already resupplied more than all the guns lost in the Italian retreat.

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

(By William Philip Simms.)

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES IN THE FIELD, November 28. — The Germans uncorked a country-side full of gas in their attempts to shake the British grip back of the Hindenburg line to-day. Shells containing powerful asphyxiating vapor were distributed by the German guns over a wide area immediately back of the British positions. No damage was done and the shells gave the enemy no advantage. As this despatch is cabled the British line has apparently shifted to the west of Fontaine Notre Dame, but positions in Bourlon Wood are standing secure despite the enemy's most desperate efforts.

The enemy frenziedly shelled Bourlon Wood all of last night, and deluged the lines south of that position with gun fire, including Anneux, Graincourt and Domicourt. It was as though the enemy were enraged by his failure in a vigorous attack around Tadpole Copse, south of Inchy. This afternoon the lines on both sides were practically unchanged.

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

LONDON, November 28.—Congratulations from the Bolsheviki leaders at Petrograd to the Bolsheviki army commander-in-chief, Ensign Krylenko, for his efforts looking toward the conclusion of "a general, just and democratic peace," were announced in a wireless message picked up here to-day. The message followed reports indicating that German representatives are behind the Russian lines, and Russian peace commissioners behind the German lines, both discussing the terms of the armistice proposed by the Bolsheviki.

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

WITH THE ITALIAN ARMIES, November 28.—So appalling have been the casualties suffered by the enemy in his fruitless attacks that it was reported to-day he had withdrew seven crippled divisions (nearly 105,000 men). Prisoners declare that some battalions of several hundred men have been reduced to thirty or forty by the vigor of the Italian defense. There was no change in the deadlock along the entire front to-day.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

ROME, November 28.—One Asiago Plateau, in Primolane Basin, at the north of Col. Berretta, and on the middle Piave, says to-day's official statement, our batteries in co-operation with bombardment flights, have carried out concentrations of fire on enemy troops massed and in movement.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

NEW YORK, November 28.—To-day's afternoon papers publish a story from Rome that the Italians and their Allies have opened a new offensive against the invading Teutons and have already pierced the Austro-German front and second lines. There is no confirmation yet from the Italian War Office.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

NEW YORK, Nov. 28.—That thirty-nine German submarines were destroyed by the Allies within a fifteen-day period is the statement made here by T. B. Hopler, Second Counsellor of the British Embassy.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, November 28.—The German artillery was active last night in the region of Bourlon Wood, Cambrai area, says to-day's official communication. No further infantry fighting has taken place. On the northern front, east and northeast of Ypres, the hostile artillery activity continues.

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

LONDON November 28.—The Allies are considering the sending of a warning to Russian factions, pointing out the serious consequences of a separate peace with Germany, Lord Cecil, Minister of blockade, announced in the House of Commons to-day.

RUSSIAN AFFAIRS STEADILY GROWING WORSE THAN EVER

While Bolsheviki Leaders Negotiate With Germans For Separate Peace, Movement to Overthrow the Maximalists is Gaining Strength

DEEDS OF VIOLENCE

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

LONDON, Nov. 28.—The Russia of the plain people seemed to be coming to its senses to-day, but very slowly.

At the moment when authoritative reports declared German General Staff officers were openly in conference in Petrograd with the Lenine-Trotsky Bolsheviki "government," half a dozen despatches from other sections of Russia reported the growth of a formidable movement for the overthrow of the Maximalists and the establishment of a real coalition government, expressive of Russia's people as a whole.

DEEDS OF VIOLENCE.

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

(By Joseph Shaplen.)

STOCKHOLM, Nov. 28.— Six hundred were killed at Kieff and 150 Russian army officers slaughtered at Moscow were additions to the bloody deeds of violence by which the Bolsheviki gained control in Russia, according to word brought out of Petrograd by a creditable Russian citizen to-day. The fighting at Kieff lasted over six days. It was a veritable reign of terror. The Bolsheviki now have complete control of the city.

American Minister Morris received this report from a traveller to-day. He was told that 150 Russian officers perished in a heroic defence of Moscow's biggest hotel and that the frenzied Bolsheviki mob literally pulled the structure to pieces.

Dr. Von Wendt, food administrator for Finland, conferred to-day with Morris, imploring him to urge on President Wilson the immediate necessity that relief measures be taken by the United States in Finland. Von Wendt ascerted that unless America sent immediate aid, allied Finland would perish from starvation. Moris agreed to forward an urgent appeal to the State Department.

Diplomatic officers here to-day reported that Bolsheviki forces had turned back British and French diplomatic couriers from the Finnish frontier—refusing to recognize their diplomatic credentials and ignoring their demand that despatches be transmitted to the allied ambasadors in Petrograd.

NEGOTIATIONS OPENED.

Canadian Press Despatch:

PETROGRAD, Tuesday.— It is announced officially at Smolny Institute Headquarters of Bolsheviki that representativss of Ensign Krylenko, Bolsheviki commander in chief, have crossed to the German side and entered into negotiations with the German military authorities.

LOCAL BOY WINS D.C.M.

Sergt. J. L. Kenneally is Awarded Decoration For Bravery at the Front—Peterborough Boy Has Been Twice Wounded

PTE. HAWTHORNE KILLED

Another local boy has been honoured for bravery at the front.

A recent list from the London Gazette contains the name of Sergt. Joseph Laughlin Kenneally of the 31st Battery, C.F.A., and son of Mrs. W. Kenneally, 269 Thomas street, who has been awarded the Distinguished Conduct Medal, the third local soldier so far to win the D. C. M.

Sergt. Kenneally has been many months in France, and has recently been wounded twice, once on September 15, and again recently. His mother has received word from Ottawa that Sergt. Kenneally was admitted to No. 5 Convalescent Depot at Gayeux, France, suffering from shrapnel wounds in the finger and right hand.

His many friends will unite in wishing him a speedy recovery and in congratulating him upon his decoration for bravery.

PTE. T. O. HAWTHORNE.

Mr. Edward Hawthorne, member of the Exemption Tribunal at Warsaw and well known through the district because of his connection with the Peterborough Cheese Board, received official word from Ottawa this morning that his son, Pte. Thos. O. Hawthorne, of the 7th British Columbia Battalion, was killed in action, on November 10th. The news will bring grief to a large circle of friends.

Pte. Hawthorne, who was born and brought up in Warsaw, enlisted in British Columbia, and had been at the front for over two years.

He is survived by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Hawthorne of Warsaw; three brothers, William and James of Warsaw, and Archie of Gleichen, Alta., and three daughters, Mrs. David Rose of Warsaw, Miss Dora of Peterborough, and Miss Mary of Gleichen, Alta.

PTE. JOHN GIFFORD.

Word haa been received that Pte. John Gifford, son of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Gifford, of Apsley, was killed in action on 6th November. Pte. Gifford enlisted in Apsley in January, 1916, with C Company of the 93rd Battalion, under Lieut.-Colonel Johnston. After going overseas he gained the stripes of corporal. For some ten months he was a physical trainer and bayonet instructor. He remained for some months at Monks, Horton, England, and afterwards at Hastings, England. In June, 1917, he reverted to the ranks and went to France, where he gave his life for his country in the fighting at Paschendaele.

APPEALS FOR FAIR HEARING FOR PREMIER

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Sir,—I notice in the Daily Press that the complaint is made that Sir Robert Borden does not get a fair hearing at his meetings and that some of them are disturbed to such an extent that he can only get a very indifferent hearing.

I trust that when he comes to Peterborough he will have no cause to complain on that account.

There is no doubt that the maladministration of Sir Robert Borden during this last six years deserves the severest censure. He has tamely submitted to the grafter. He has permitted the food Barons to become millionaires at the expense of the people. He has done nothing to stimulate food production and has simply advised the working people to eat less. He has neglected the soldier's widow and the orphan. He has ground down the soldier to starvation wages and has let the returned soldier hunt for a job instead of making proper provision for him. He has outraged public sentiment.

I trust the electors will give him every opportunity to excuse himself and reserve their expressions of condemnation and disaproval for the 17th of December.

Yours truly,
R. R. HALL.

DEMONSTRATIONS FOR PEACE IN ENEMY CAPITALS

Gatherings in Budapest and Berlin Clamour For Peace and There Were Several Clashes With the Police With a Number of Casualties Reported

RESOLUTIONS PASSED

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

AMSTERDAM, Nov. 28.—Peace demonstrations have occurred in Berlin and Budapest, according to reports reaching here to-day. The police in both cities, it was declared had clashed with peace advocates.

SOCIALIST DEMONSTRATION.

Canadian Press Despatch:

AMSTERDAM, Nov. 28.—A great Socialistic demonstration at Budapest on Sunday in favour of an armistice and peace is reported by Vossische Zeitung of Berlin. Declarations were made that it is impossible to bring peace by force of arms. There was demonstrations against war and in favour of a general strike. A resolution was passed opposing the aims of Pan-Germans and the annexation of Poland and Listonia by Germany.

Canadian Press Despatch:

AMSTERDAM, Nov. 28.—Copies of the German Socialist organ, Vorwaerts arriving here describe big peace demonstrations, particularly in North Germany, on Sunday. Several arrests were made and there were some casualties in crashes with the police.

BIG HOSPITAL AT ST. HYAINTHE DESTROYED BY FIRE

$600,000 Hotel Dieu a Prey to Flames and Chief of Police Loses His Life While Assisting in Removing the Inmates of the Hospital

1000 WERE SAVED

Canadian Press Despatch:

ST. HYACINTHE, Quebec, Nov. 28.—The six hundred thousand dollar Hotel Dieu Hospital here was completely destroyed by fire this morning and Chief of Police Foisy lost his life while assisting in the task of removing the thousand inmates of the hospital.

The thermometer was down to zero and after being got out of the hospital the inmates, who included patients, orphaned children and aged folks, had a hard time until accommodation in houses throughout the town was found for them.

The institution, like similar hospitals dotted all over Quebec, was managed by the Grey Nuns. It consisted of three stone buildings.

U. S. May Cut Off Supplies To Russia Now

Will Cease Forwarding Food or Other Articles Until Separate Peace Menace is Removed

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

(By Carl D. Groat.)

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28.—The United States and her allies are united in a stand against any separate peace now and while no official statement on the subject has been made it was believed here to-day that the allies have impressed Russia with this thought in the midst of her mad efforts for an armistice. There are renewed indications that this government proposes not to ship any further supplies to Russia until there exists something more like an orderly national government than the Lenine-Trotsky regime. The United States is disposed to back any stable rule within Russia, but the belief is growing that the Bolsheviki group in Petrograd are definitely driving toward a separate peace. Hence there is a disinclination here to further the Russian cause with supplies before the separate peace menace is removed.

Crown Prince Rupprecht Feeds Thousands of His Best Men into the Reeking Maw of the British Lion in Vain Attempts to Wrest Key Position From General Byng's Forces.

TERRIFIC FIGHTING

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

(By William Philip Simms.)

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES IN THE FIELD, Nov. 28.—Crown Prince Rupprecht fed thousands of his best men into the reeking maw of the British lion to-day.

The Prussians seldom fought with such desperation as they battled last night and early to-day—vainly, bloodily, frantically striving to wrest Boulon Wood from the British.

The Wood is a mere bundle of sticks now. Its great trees have literally been splintered by high explosives, smashed down with tanks, uprooted by shells. What used to be a pleasant grove of grateful shade, is now a bare, scrawny hump three thousand by two thousand five hundred yards out of salient, shoved forward into the very vitals of the German line. Its very base must by now be soaked with the blood of the fighting battles raged over its top.

IN SIGHT OF CAMBRAI.

This despatch is written just after my return from a sight of Cambrai. The buildings of the prize city are visible even in to-day's thick weather from where the British lines sticks its steel menacingly forward. On the other side of Bourlon Ridge, toward Quant, the Hindenburg line that was looked like a prison yard from the keeper's tower, so commanding is the ridge position. It is small wonder that Rupprecht is now desperate as he sees this vital dominating point in British hands. As I stood south of the Wood the rattle of rifles came from the right. I have seldom heard such terrific bursts of noise from infantry fighting.

A SALLY ATTEMPTED.

Then the machine guns on both sides joined their staccato rattles in a feverish crescent. A sally had been tried. And over all came the crash of great explosives. The Boches are taking no chance of letting the British reinforcements come up. Minute by minute they are busy crumpling every known road, or every known track by which they think fresh British troops may enter the salient. High explosive shells are used, great monsters that dig deep craters.

The British guns do not hesitate to reply. Back on the German roads Byng's shells must be making life miserable for the Boches. As this great artillery duel roared, there was a sudden cyclone blast of rattling steel.

PLANES IN ACTION.

We peered out over No Man's Land to see six British planes swooping and swerving, it seemed almost touching the heads of the Germans just across. Their machine guns spat venemously as they raked the lines. They were far too low for the German anti-aircraft guns to touch them, and they moved too fast for the surprised Germans to twist their machine guns upward and fire at them. Down along the lines they zig-zagged like angry hornets. Then more—three together—a couple—half a dozen— one lone one. Throughout the late afternoon they kept it up until darkness erased the lines of the enemy trenches.

NO ENEMY AIRMEN.

I did not see a single Prussian airman all day. The sky was filled with British flyers.

As this is written Bourlon Village is the centre of the fighting—for the moment.

The main street is in ruins. It practically marks the division line between two sides—a division line that is constantly overrun by Prussians or British, that is swept by a hail of fire. Byng's Tommies carried their way into the village from the south, but were slowed up by desperate masses of the enemy. Machine gun nests in La Folie Wood for a time inteffered with the British going forward—but the British artillery got on the job to attend to FORGIVE AND FORGET..

When the revolutionists in Russia got the upper hand they proceeded to clear the slate; in their false view of liberty they over-did it. They pardoned all the criminals and offenders against society by opening the jails and turning loose thieves, thugs, murderers and criminals of every kind.

In a different way we are asked to do something not very much different in Canada. General Mewburn, Minister of Militia, wants us to clear the political slate; forget and forgive and overlook. Speaking at Dundas he said:

The old Government is not this Government; a new Government was formed six weeks ago. "What is the good of sitting down and criticizing the past? Let the knockers stop." (Applause.)

"Let the knockers stop." That's the very thing that the new government, as well as the old government, wants. That's the very idea of the Borden government merging its identity into a Union government—to escape being called to a recoking of for its three years of wasteful, reckless and conscienceless war administration.

It would certainly be magnanimous to forget and forgive all the Borden government has done. It did so much that was wrong, left undone so much, that it knew if it appealed to the people in propia persona, so to speak, on its record it would be annihilated.

General Mewburn said "the old government is not this government." But who shall say, that this government is not the old government in a new form. The new government has the same following. The big interests, the food profiteers, the graft getters are all with the new government. This gentry is keen of scent—it knows where lies the carcase that calls the eagles together. These people that held the old government in the hollow of its hand, have not relaxed their grip; they are behind and probably on all sides of, the Union government. The Union government, single minded, high-souled as it is, cannot make the issue for the people; that issue is not forgetfulness of the past.

We are spending millions, our soldiers are fighting for the principles of justice and triumph of the democratic principle. The democratic principle has been vastly sinned against, in the outraged interests of the people, and we are asked to open our mouths and shut our eyes—swallow everything to permit the Borden government in disguise to win or retain power in a canter on the back of a Union government.

If we cansent to forget the Borden government's past, to overlook its sins; if the Union government wins in this contest, we shall hear—"Behold our vindication! The people have forgiven us and we can go on, unpurged in fact, but purged in name.

All the Borden government's supporters in the past parliament, except those who have been rewarded with senatorships or fat offices at the people's expense, have been "endorsed" as "his" candidates by Sir Robert Borden, so that he counts upon having the same support he had when the political legerdemain of changing the Borden government to a so-called Union government was performed.

Really the new Minister of Militia is asking too much of human nature—to forgive everything. One condition of unconditional pardon is restitution. Let the Borden government—either in its old or new form—restore what it has wasted. Let it bring back to life the gallant Canadian soldiers who sacrificed their lives lives with the Ross rifle in their hand, forced upon them by an obstinate government anxious to put money in the makers' pocket. Let the Borden government disgorge and turn over to the Red Cross funds or Patriotic funds, the millions wasted in permitted graft, the millions extorted by favoured food profiteers. Let it make itself worthy of forgiveness before we cease "criticising the past," and give the "knockers" a half decent excuse to "stop."

The Globe says "the manhood of Canada at the front stood the test"—yes, in the thick of it with a rifle that wouldn't shoot.

A GRATEFUL COUNTRY.

We need not wonder that the ladies of Peterborough are coming to the rescue of the War Veterans, by helping fit up their new home fittingly. The ladies have been foremost in war work for the soldiers—helping find healing and comforts for the wounded, and it is only natural that when our soldiers come back, some of them wounded and broken, that the women should continue their efforts to provide them a home—to help continue the comradeship of the trenches in the home of the land they have fought to save.

Not only the women, but every citizen and every organized element, the municipality and the government should unite to show appreciation of the services of the soldiers. In the past the ingratitude of governments and peoples to the soldiers who have done their fighting, is proverbial. We have seen, not so much in this country as in others, the discharged soldier inhumanly neglected. We have seen the legless and armless heroes who have helped carry the flag to victory and glory, limping half legless through the streets, begging their bread, in a country he has shed his blood to save and glorify.

We don't want anything of that kind in Canada. We should show a higher recognition of the services of the soldiers, and by decent, if not generous, treatment, pay a part of the debt we owe; for the debt is so great that it cannot be fully paid.

We now can trust the people, especially the tender souls of our women. But they cannot do all. The government of the country, as representing the spirit of the country, must do its full share of what needs to be done to rightly reward the returned soldier.

Unfortunately governments do not take kindly to this work. We can't accuse the government of neglecting the soldier when it wants him to fight, and as long as he can fight. But when he has done his bit, and is a bit done up in doing it, the governments seem to lose interest.

The present Union Government is mighty keen in getting soldiers to the front, the place where all who can fight should be; but neither the present nor the past government has done, or is doing, its duty to the returned soldiers, who deserve more than we can do for him when he has spent his strength and given his limbs for our protection.

He should not be cast off like an old boot when the very discharge of his duty and his zeal for srevice have made him a legitimate object of the gratitude of his country.

One does not know why, except for lack of government interest in the returned soldier, that there are cases of hardship among returned soldiers. It is stated that there is one returned soldier in Peterborough, who, because he can't get work, is compelled to accept charity, for the time being, of an elderly man living alone, who, with hardly any more means than suffices for himself, has given this soldier a home—shares his bed and his crust with him.

The real history of this particular case is not known, but if there is substantial truth in it, it argues a sad lack of government oversight and care for the returned soldier.

Why is it that governments will spend millions to recruit, equip, and send soldiers to fight, and when they have fought gloriously and spent their strength in doing so, and drift home, welcome them with neglect?

As Mr. D. O'Connell pointed out in a recent address in Peterborough, it was not the government that provided funds to pay millions of dollars for the care of the families of soldiers in service.

It was the patriotic fund levied by the people on themselves, that did this—not the Government. Peterborough contributed a total of over 200,000 dollars for this work, and the people of the country, many millions.

If it had not been for the people, the wives and children of soldiers would have suffered; for the scant assigned half of the soldier's pay wouldn't keep the wolf from the door.

The Government should take the returned soldier more seriously, and make more systematic and effective arrangements for looking after him. He enlisted under the government, and took an oath to do his duty; he has done it, now it is the government's turn to fulfill its share of the compact.

There is a vast deal of glamour about war; its glory is blood stained, and its wreckage is the returned soldier, who sacrificed his privileges of citizenship, threw up his job and went to fight. When he comes back, maimed or broken in health, he is worthy of all the kindness, solicitude and good care, and comfortable conditions the people and the government can give him. Even these, given to excess, as far as the people can give them, can never repay one-half of what the country owes him.

The present government is combing the country for soldiers to send abroad—something that should be done. But it is not all. The government should spare a little time and thought for the soldiers who have come back, who have spent their strength in doing what we are sending soldiers abroad to do.

Good as soldieres are, good as Canadian soldiers are, they are not all. Teddy Roosevelt, speaking at Toronto, said: "Victory in this war will be only by mobilization of all our resources" — men, munitions, food, shipping.

PORT HOPE CITIZEN DEAD.

PORT HOPE, Nov. 28.—One of the town's most highly-esteemed and best-known residents died here on Sunday in the person of John Runnalls, aged 76 years. He held the agencies for several insurance companies, and had established an extensive business. He is survived by a widow and three sons, Upton of Victoria, B.C., Arthur of Welcome, and Silas of Port Hope. The deceased was a Methodist and a lifelong Conservative.

Shipping Declared To Be The Supreme Allied Issue

Before the Lloyd George Government came into office, about a year ago, only half the British shipping had been requisitioned for war purposes, and overseas trade was going on as a diminishing business concern. Cuts had been made in the luxury trades, imports being radically reduced, but the bold policy of universal requisition and State control, which Lloyd George had favoured from the beginning of the war, had not been adopted, with the result that British shipping companies amassed enormous fortunes, after paying the State over 80 per cent. of their war profits.

With the advent of the present government to power the strong arm of the State took over practically the whole of the British mercantile shipping. This policy received its greatest stimulus when the United States of America entered the war. The Lloyd George Cabinet was determined to subordinate all commercial and national interests to the overwhelming demands of the war. Thus, after three years, the policy which Lloyd George, with unerring instinct, had favoured from the beginning, was finally achieved.

MUST REBUILD SEA TRADE.

When the war is over Great Britain will have to start anew to restore its vast carrying trade throughout the world, which brought the home country an annual revenue estimated at over £150,000,000. Vested interests of the highways of the ocean which have taken over 100 years to establish have vanished in a few months.

The prime object of the shipping control is to save tonnage for national and war interests, and now only about a 10 per cent. margin in small ships remains uncontrolled. In the struggle between motor cars and wheat, motor cars have to go. That is the principle upon which the ships are operated.

The most startling transfers have been effected in the name of national emergency. Old established trading connections have been sacrificed to the superior interests of the nation. Ships have been withdrawn from the China coast to the advantage of Japan, and vessels have been taken from Scandinavian waters to the profit of neutral shipping. In the case of a great company like the Pacific & Oriental, with a total fleet of 50 vessels, all are under requisition, more than half are managed directly by the Government or by other companies, and the remaining ships are carrying goods for the account of the Government. These remarks apply also to the Clan and Holt lines.

HELPS HER ALLIES.

Great Britain is building all the ships she can, to devote them to war services and nothing else. Upon Great Britain has fallen the duty of helping the allies. The amount of shipping placed at the service of France, Italy and other allied countries is 3,00,000 tons dead weight. This tonnage represents nearly two months' consumption of wheat by England. A great deal of it is devoted to carrying coal as well as wheat. In some cases the ships are not actually handed over, but the tonnage is given to the allies under British management. The traffic between England and France in men, munitions and food involves the use of a prodigious quantity of tonnage, and the campaigns in the East mean almost as great demands, and very much greater risks.

THE SUPREME NEED.

It should be borne in mind that the great need of the allies at the present moment is ships, and still more ships. If need be, trade must further suffer, as the biggest armaments will prove of no avail if they cannot be transported.

While the State for war interests has placed a mortgage on the British mercantile marine and withdrawn, it from its sphere of commercial competition, the British people were never produer of their merchant service than they are to-day. This is because of the heroism of the men who have faced all of the dangers and atrocities of the high seas and never shirked their duty. During three and a half years of war no single shop has been delayed by reason of a crew's refusal to face danger. Skippers of old tramp steamers, gunless and unconvoyed, ambling along at eight knots an hour, have gone through the submarine - infested Mediterranean ready to meet all risks. Others, whose guns have been outranged by enemy submarines, have fought until their ships were shatered, and then died like heroes. The gallantry of the sailors of the British mercantile fleet is one of the great unwritten stories of the war.—London Chronicle.

C. P. R's TRANS-PACIFIC SERVICE HIGHLY PRAISED

For the last two years the Canadian Pacific Railway, in connection with the Pacific steamers of the Canadian Pacific Ocean Services, has carried a very large proportion of the passengers from the United States to Russia, and as these passengers have included a great many American railroad men, who have been surprised at the excellence of the service, a remarkable volume of trade is developing, greatly to the benefit of Canada itself. Among these passengers was the American Railway Advisory Commission, consisting of the leading railway experts of the United States, who travelled from Chicago to Vancouver, thence to Yokohama via the Empress of Asia. Mr. Henry Miller, vice-chairman of this highly important commission, has written Vice-President G. M. Bosworth a letter of deep appreciation, in which, after referring to many individual courtesies along the route, he remarks: "You have good reason to be proud of your organisation and service, and we take this method of thanking you heartily for your kindness and courtesy."

WAYWARD GIRL RETURNS TO PETERBOROUGH

In the Children's Court on Saturday morning last, His Worship Magistrate Bradford presided, when the case of a young girl who had been working at the Arsenal came before him. County Crown Attorney Stinson appeared for the Crown, and as the charge preferred against the girl was clearly proven, she was ordered to be sent back to the Children's Aid Society in Peterborough, from which place she had originally come to Lindsay.—Lindsay Warder.

RESIGNS POSITION OF BANDMASTER

Lieut. William Roenigk, who for the past sixteen years has been the popular and indefatigable bandmaster of the Citizens' Band, has decided owing to the pressure of business in connection with the Academy of Music management, to lay aside the baton, much to the regret of the bandsmen. He will be succeeded as temporary bandmaster by "Billy" Heffernan, recently returned from overseas.

Lieut. Roenigk is one of the best known bandmasters in the Province. In assuming the leadership of the local band sixteen years ago, he brought it up to a high state of efficiency. It did more to advertise Lindsay than probably any other local organization, being considered one of the best musical organizations in the Province.

Lieut. Roenigk's ability as a bandmaster has been recognized on more than one occasion. On the occasion of the Tercentenary at Quebec in 1908, Lieut. Roenigk and his band were honoured by a request to be present, a privilege which few bands in Canada enjoyed. On the occasion of the annual military camp at Barriefield, Bandmaster Roenigk was selected year after year as camp bandmaster and conducted the tattoos, which were always a prominent feature of the annual camp.

SAMPLE OF AN ELECTION NOTICE IN LINDSAY PAPER

Below will be found a copy of an election advertisement which appeared in The Lindsay Watchman-Warder twenty-nine years ago:

To the Electors.

Ladies and Gentlemen.—As I said before I now proceed to say behind, that I stand before you on this auspicious occasion like a bobtail rooster on a rickety hen-roost, and accept with pleasure your very kind invitation to contest the Reeveship of this town. I am proud to notice on the requisition just handed me the names of such prominent individuals as Fearless Dick, Slim Jim, Soapy Bob, Handy Andy, and Hallelujah Hannah.

I am a Liberal Union Conservative Tory Rouge Radical Grit Reformer of many decades.

I believe in John A. Macdonald, Edward Blake, Christopher Columbus, General Wolfe, General Debility, Crown Imperial, and Maud S.

I am in favour of Annexation, Emancipation, Confederation, Procrastination, Voting by Ballot, Draw Poker, Electric Light, the Magna Charta, and White Pine Balsam for Coughs and Colds.

If have the greatest respect for Anti-Scott, Anti-fat, and Anti-up, and if elected will pledge myself to pull down toll gates, abolish mad dogs and mosquitoes, and run away with the Mayor's daughter.

Respectfully yours,
A. Higinbotham.

Lindsay, Dec. 22, 1888.

Jacob Yellin, a Detroit youth, who sent a threatening letter demanding ransom to Edsel Ford, son of the automobile manufacturer, was sentenced to five years and fined $1,000.

Column

HUGHSON JOHNSTONE, painter and decorator, 418 Water street, will answer in this column each Wednesday for Examiner readers, questions relating to painting, sign-writing, paper-hanging, kalsomining, furniture polishing, decorating, etc., for the benefit of those who might like doing their own work. Questions sent to the Examiner will receive attention in due course.

Mrs. J. R. L., Peterborough: Through your Arts and Crafts answer column, will you please tell me how I can remedy the small broken places in my wall paper. There are two or three small breaks that show white. They appear like furniture scratches, probably done in the moving.

Answer.—Buy a small package of coloured chalk, pulverise a little of the colour or combination of colours to match your paper; mix the powder with a solution made by dissolving five parts of water to one part mucilage. Then with a small brush touch up the spots.

Mrs. McB., City: (1) Please publish some easy way to clean paint off windows; the painters made an awful mess of them. (2) How much black do I put in my white paint to make a pretty grey; the painter said black and white made grey.

Answer.—(1) I presume it is the glass you want cleaned. If the paint is not of long standing, try a solution of sal soda and water, allowing it to stand a little while after applying to the glass. (2) It depends on what your conception of "a pretty grey" is, and also how much white paint you have. I would suggest that you add a very small quantity of black to your white paint. Mix thoroughly, and keep on in this manner until you get your "pretty grey."

"Ignorant": I bought some "oatmeal" paper in —— the other day, and was disappointed to find that I had to pay for three rolls to get two. Mr. —— said it was a new rule now. Is this rule a combine of Peterborough dealers or not?

Answer.—Oatmeal papers 30 inches wide are now only 15 feet long to the single roll. Your dealer was right—and it is not a local combine. All American and Canadian factories sell 30-inch oatmeal the above length.

Prussians Fight Desperately

this matter and the Tommies continued onward.

Near midnight the Prussians flung themselves on the Wood—then firmly held by the British. At the precious moment of their attempt, British flares illuminated every man in their massed ranks—transfixed them momentarily by the brilliance of light.

A VOICE OF DEATH.

Then came the roar of machine guns—literally as one voice of death that sliced the massed shadows into quivering, twisting, groaning groups, while other knots ran back vainly trying to outspeed the shower of lead.

A few minutes before in an attack in front of Fontaine Notre Dame a British detachment scurried out and raided German positions south of Bourlon. They actually established a place in the German line. More British leaped to the breach, the Tommies poured through and beyond they came upon a group of a major and seven or eight other British officers with a number of British troops who had been holding out against encircling German attacks on every side since late Saturday. The little group, nearly exhausted from incessant fighting, but still strong enough to cheer their reserves, had by a daring ruse communicated with the British lines from which they were cut off. They were carried hilariously back to the British positions, hailed as heroes.

THE COLLEGIATE LITERARY SOCIETY

On Monday, 26th November, the first meeting of the Peterborough Collegiate Literary Society was held in the Assembly Hall. An excellent programme was given, and the speeches of the officers were well received. The musical numbers were generously applauded.

The following was the programme: Presidents' address: "The Aims and Objects of the Literary Society," Charles Elliott.

Piano solo: Miss Baird.

Vice-President's Address: "School Spirit," Miss C. Mason.

Vocal Solo: Miss Bates.

Address: "Public Speaking," James Pogue, Secretary.

Address: "Patriotism," Miss M. Conners, Treasurer.

Piano Duet: Misses Gardiner.

Our First Xmas Showing of Many New Style Waists

HERE is a display which every woman will be pleased to examine, for it includes most every favoured Waist creation of the season. Waists to be worn under the waistband and new types to be worn on the outside of the skirt are the notable features, choker collar effects are in vogue, and frills and jabot effects are also very pronounced. Sheer Silk Crepes, Crepe-de-Chine, Chiffon and fine Cotton Voile materials with trimmings of embroidery, stitching or beading in contrasting color or in lighter harmonizing shades are the better modes. White, flesh color and the darker tones to match the suits, as well as black, are Fashion's dictates.

A Xmas Gift

Of a fine Anglo-Persian rug would be acceptable to any one.

These well-covered Anglo - Persian Rugs we are now showing are in the finest of English Wilton. They are very close of weave, and have a very thick velvety surface.

Rev. Dr. Shields Speaks of Conditions As He Found Them in the Canadian Military Camps in England—"A Crisis in John Bull's Family Assembled the Family Overnight" —An Able Address.

"England in War-time," was the theme of an interesting address delivered last evening in the Murray Street Baptist Church, in aid of the Red Cross Society. The speaker for the occasion was the Rev. Thomas T. Shields, D.D., of Toronto, who since the outbreak of the war has crossed the submarine zone four times, and has spent many months in the old land. The Rev. J. R. Webb, pastor of the church, occupied the chair in the absence of Mr. T. F. Matthews, who was unexpectedly called away to Chicago. A number of lady ushers, attired in the conventional costume of the Red Cross Nurse, were present to emphasize the object of the occasion, and to take up the silver collection, which will ultimately find its way into the treasury of the Red Cross Society.

JOHN BULL.

England is a good place to go anytime, said the Rev. Mr. Shields. It is a place for thoughtful people. Today we see old John Bull with his fists clenched defending his own castle and incidentally playing big brother to the rest of the world. John Bull's wife is the spirit of England, and John Bull's sons are the dominions overseas. A crisis in the family assembled the family over night. People complain of the British way of muddling through. Only a short time ago a political crisis arose in England, and it was said that Lloyd George would not weather the storm. Some people began to look around for another Premier. It is not hard to find a new Premier or somebody who could conduct the affairs of the nation better than they are conducted to-day. You will find lots of them in the smoking compartment of every train. The man who has served in the village council and has given his vote for a few cement sidewalks could do it.

BRITAIN'S SONS.

Britain's sons went home to settle a row that was started by the Kaiser. It has been stated that those boys have suffered morally as a result of their visit to the home land. Let me tell you that it is not so. I had the privilege of looking into the records of the various military camps in England, and if you compare those records with the records here in Canada, even in prohibition times, you would beg in to think that all the topers had remained at home. The Committee of One Hundred did not bring about prohibition, neither did the W.C.T.U., or any other temperance organization. It was the work of generations of education along temperance lines and the Committee of One Hundred fired the train. I only wish that such a thing were possible in England. The chief obstacle is the great masses, who regard their beer as we do our tea. England of to-day is not the England of two years ago. She has been transformed.

General Turner of the Canadian forces told me personally that the liquor traffic was well in hand.

"If thousands of men were transported to Canada, as they have been to England, we could not have handled them any better," said Mr. Shields.

VICTORY BONDS.

Continuing, the speaker said: "Somebody has said they will fight when Canada is invaded. Let me tell you Canada is invaded by the same enemy that brought about the disintegration of Russia and sowed the seeds of discord on the Italian front. We must show Germany that the resources of the Dominion are at the disposal of the allies. Think of the moral effect it will have on Germany when the word goes forth that Canada has subscribed three or four hundred millions of dollars to the Victory Loan.

"What do you think of the disgraceful affair in Kitchener, a few nights ago?" asked Dr. Shields.

In conclusion, the speaker recalled a number of stirring incidents relative to his last visit to England. On one occasion the speaker was crossing the submarine zone on a British vessel flying the British flag. On board that vessel was an American military unit. During the afternoon, Dr. Shields was sitting on deck in company with an American officer, when the steward came around with tea and cake. An American destroyer that was convoying the vessel, suddenly sighted an object and the destroyer's guns belched forth. "Was it not significant," said the speaker that we should be travelling on a ship flying the British flag, with an American military unit on board, convoyed by an American destroyer, and drinking tea, all in spite of the Kaiser."

At the close of Dr. Shields' address, His Honour Judge Huycke, who was in the audience, expressed his appreciation of the speaker's eloquent address. "The message given to us by Dr. Shields to-night should be heard in every hamlet and town in Canada," said Judge Huycke. Reference was also made to the speaker's conclusive and satisfying repudiation of the charges of intemperance recently levied at the Canadian troops abroad.

Editor, Examiner:

Dear Sir,—Mr. Arthur Hawkes, who ran an election against the Borden government, was in town on Monday, trying to find out what the political situation was for Mr. Burnham, the Borden supporter. Mr. Hawkes has been employed by the Government to do journalistic work for the Borden government and its supporters. This is the way the war profiteers help by furnishing money for campaign funds to employ journalistic experts.

Yours truly,
North End.

Editor of The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—The women of Peterborough should remember that Mrs. L. A. Hamilton was the lady who was consulted by the Borden government as to whom votes should be given, and her opinion was that the votes should be given, not to all the women generally, but a few favoured ones. This lady is a politician first, and a womens' rights advocate last. Soldiers' wives were not important enough for the Borden government to consider and discuss the situation with, but Mrs. Hamilton, a faithful follower of the Borden government was, and this is her reward now.

Yours faithfully,
Soldiers' Wife.

The Editor of the Examiner:

Dear Sir,—Last nigth at the 'Prince O' Patters,' presented by the Peter Robinson Chapter of the Daughters of the Empire, Mr. W. R. Morris came before the curtain and addressed the ladies of the audience asking them to come to a meeting for the purpose of creating a political organization under Mrs. W. R. Morris' leadership. Of all places to work in a piece of political jobbery a patriotic concert of this kind should be the last. Mrs. Morris is trying to organize a Tory sideshow for Mr. J. H. Burnham's circus, and the whole game is a political dodge to try to get the women to elect J. H. Burnham. Another officer of this organization is the wife of a man holding down a government job, and a remaining officer is a sister of a man holding down another government job. In the anxiety to get government jobs it seems that government office holders are about the only ones who want to start a political organization. I believe that the ladies can be much better engaged helping the Soldiers' wives and in doing Red Cross work, than starting a hot air meeting, because hot air will not win this war.

Yours truly,
Anti-Burnham.

GALT MAN SAYS HE GAINED 25 POUNDS

Had Rheumatism So Bad He Couldn't Close Fingers—Tanlac Ends Troubles

"I have actually gained twenty-five pounds and firmly believe if I had gotten Tanlac six months ago I would have been saved the awful suffering I had to endure, besides the hundreds of dollars I paid out for other medicines that did me no good." This remarkable statement was made by Nelson Sloat, a stationary fireman employed by Goldie & McCulloch, and living at 75 State street, Galt, Ontario, recently.

"When I began taking Tanlac," continued Mr. Sloat, "I was suffering with rheumatism and stomach trouble, which had just about put me out of commission. My stomach went back on me something less than a year ago. I would bloat up with gas after eating and suffer for hours. I also had a terrible hurting in the pit of my stomach. Then rheumatism set in on me and I got in an awful fix. I ached all over, and the pain in my hands was so intense I couldn't close my fingers. Part of the time I was flat on my back, was so nervous and miserable I couldn't sleep or rest, and fell off until I weighed only one hundred and thirty-five pounds. The time I lost from my work and the money I spent trying to get relief would amount to hundreds of dollars, but I kept getting worse.

"The day I started on Tanlac, I hadn't been able to hit a lick of work in fourteen weeks, but Tanlac should changed things around for me. I now weigh one hundred and sixty pounds—have picked up twenty-five pounds and have gone back to work. My appetite is better than in months, and my nerves are perfectly calm. I sleep good and get up in the mornings thoroughly rested. My rheumatic trouble has left me entirely and my fingers are as nimble as they ever were. In fact, my aches and pains are all gone and I'm feeling about as well as if I hadn't been sick a day. I simply feel like a different man, and can truthfully say Tanlac is what brought me out."

Tanlac is sold in Peterborough by Warne Drug Co. Ltd., in Havelock by A. C. Denike.

Harry Wheeler, R. R. No. 4, Peterborough.

Frederick Thomas Mann, R. R. No. 4, Peterborough.

Mr. "Sandy" Matchet, of Otonabee, urged the exemption of his two sons on the ground that they were both needed to work his farm of 235 acres. Mr. Matchett said he was forbidden by his physician to undertake the regular work of the farm as the result of a protracted illness last winter. His enumeration of the agricultural activities on the Matchett farm last year indicated that the family had materially assisted the greater production campaign, and Mr. Moore roughly estimated the profits $5,000 or more.

Mr. Matchett was asked if he could not dispense with the service of one of his boys for a time, but replied that it would practically put an end to his farm work. The tribunal disallowed the exemption of James Hutchinson Matchett, aged 22, and granted exemption to John Dougall Matchett, aged 26, and instructed their father in the manner of appealing to the Deputy Registrar.

Appealed For Assistant Manager.

Mr. John Duignan, manager of the McDonald Estate Lumber Co., applied for the exemption of John Raymond McDonald, salesman and assistant manager during the past four years.

Mr. Duignan declared that Mr. McDonald was indispensable, a statement that paved the lead to a little discussion with Mr. Aylmer on the question of indispensibility which he stated the manufacturers were emphasizing. The company was engaged on war contracts and asked for the exemption of only one man out of fifty employed at the fatcory. There are two other boys in the family, one of them Mr. Duignan knew to be of military age. Decision deferred.

James Stephen Guirey, 171 Perry street, came from Kingston to make munitions for the Metal Products Company and now intends to follow them to Montreal. He has two brothers in the military service, his father is a locomotive engineer in Kingston. Guirey's appeal on domestic grounds was disallowed.

Exemption was granted Roland Bruce Bradfield, R. R. No. 10, Peterborough, while he continues to be employed as a farmer. He has one brother overseas.

William Leslie Hardwicke, 489 Cross street, employed by the Peterborough Hardware Co. as storeman. Two brothers enlisted and both have been wounded. Exemption applied for on the ground that he is the only boy left at home. Allowed until Class 2 is called up.

Sent Back to Medical Board.

Archie Rose, Apartment 9, Lundy Block, appealed on physical gorunds. He didn't inform the doctors of certain disabilities because he understood that he should only answer the questions asked of him. He was sent up for re-examination.

John Roland Knox, son of Mr. John Knox, R. R. No. 7, Peterborough, has been too ill with pleurisy to appear before the medical examiners or to report for service. Dr. Moir wrote that young Knox might never be fit for military service. Exemption allowed until his physical fitness has been finally determined and his services are required.

Mr. Harry Cook of the Peterborough Lock Co., was allowed exemption until March 1st, 1918 because of business obligations. His claim was supported by Mr. E. H. Howson, representing the company.

George Murray Goodfellow, 583 Park street, was granted exemption until he ceases to be employed as an inspector of shells.

Special Notice to the Women Voters Of Peterborough City and County

There will be not less than 6,000 of you entitled to vote at the coming election in Peterborough.

Many of you are hardly aware that you have a vote; many more uncertain whether you have or not; or, if you think you have one, do not know WHAT has to be done in order to avail yourself of your rights.

You have the right to vote if you

(a) are a British subject;

(b) Are twenty-one years old;

(c) have been resident in Ontario for one year, and in the electoral district for thirty days;

(d) are the Wife, Widow, Mother, Sister or Daughter of any person, male or female, living or dead, who is serving, or has served outside of Canada in the army, or in the navy, in the present war. "Persons who have served" includes those who have died in the service or have been honourably discharged.

NOTE PARTICULARLY the provision that entitles you to vote (if otherwise qualified) in ANY district in which you have been living for THIRTY days.

To entitle you to vote it will be necessary to have your name placed on the list of voters. This must be done by the 30th instant. The time is very short. Every effort will be made to assist you, but each one of you can help enormously by looking after yourself.

Each of you can tell for yourselves if you are entitled to a vote because of some father, husband, son or brother who has gone overseas or served in the navy.

The persons who can put your name on the lists are called "enumerators." There is one for every polling district.

All you have to do is to go before the "enumerator" for the district in which you live, make a declaration as to who you are and why you are entitled to be put on the list and your name will be put on.

DO IT FOR YOURSELF. If you know another woman eneitled to a vote see that she looks after herself also.

If you do not know what section you live in, phone Sheriff Hall, 312.

BIG RECEPTION TO SIR WILFRID LAURIER

Thousands Turned Away at Ottawa and Hearing Accorded the Liberal Chieftain Was a Most Flattering One—Peroration Was Greeted With Wild and Prolonged Cheering

OTTAWA, Nov. 27.—From five to six thousand people were turned away from the doors of the Russell Theatre, where Sir Wilfrid Laurier and his running mate in Ottawa, Hal. B. McGiverin, delivered their campaign declarations to the electorate to-night. The theatre was packed to capacity, most of the boxes having been reserved for returned soldiers, who were also scattered in large numbers throughout the rest of the house.

The hearing accorded the Liberal Chiefain during the course of his hour and a half speech was a flattering one, and the frequent bursts of applause with which the speech, delivered in his best form, was punctuated, bore evidence of the friendly character of the gathering. There was no heckling and there were no interruptions. His peroration was greeted with wild and prolonged cheering, which continued for some time after he had taken his seat. As an after-thought he came back and addressed his audience briefly in French. The applause which he then received testified to the considerable number of his own fellow-countrymen in the audience.

Others who spoke included H. B. McGiverin, Hartley Dewart, M.P.P. and Hon. Chas. Murphy. It was late when the gathering broke up, but the greater part of the big audience waited till the end and the seats of those who left were speedily filled by others.

Sorry for Kitchener Affair.

Voluntaryism as opposed to compulsion was the text of Sir Wilfrid's address. He took the first opportunity to refer to the affair at Kitchener, where the Prime Minister was refused a hearing, and at St. Anselme, where Hon. Albert Sevigny could not speak. 'Mr. Fripp," he said, "has put the question: 'What does Sir Wilfrid Laurier say to such affairs?' I am glad to be able to reply. Mr. Fripp knows my sentiments well. He knows I am in favour of free speech. Mr. Fripp believes in free speech so far as his friends are concerned, but not so far as his opponents are concerned, for Mr. Fripp was one of those who imposed the gag on Parliament last session. I am sorry that the Prime Minister was not allowed to speak at Kitchener. A respectful hearing was due to his rank, to his standing, and to his efforts in support of a bad cause. The gag is the gag, whether applied by a mob at a public meeting or in Parliament by a cold-blooded Government."

Defended His Own Record.

The Liberal Chief occupied considerable time in defending his own record since the war commenced. No man in his position in any belligerent country, he claimed, had done so much to help his country to win the war as he had done. He expressed surprise that at Sydney the Premier had attempted to belittle his efforts in regard to recruiting. "When," he asked, "did Sir Robert Borden apply to me to help him in recruiting? I am not conscious that he did." (Applause.) With regard to the Hamilton institution referred to by the Premier, he declared that it was his policy "no to endorse anything unless he knew the parties who made the application."

Sir Wilfrid reiterated, amid considerable applause, in which few returned soldiers joined, his faith in the voluntary system of recruiting. To back his argument he cited Australia, where Conscritpion had been defeated in spite of the fact that there was "no Quebec" in Australia, and where, therefore, "racialism" could not be advanced as a cause.

On the Government and the Nationalists' campaign of 1911 he placed the responsibility for the failure of recruiting in Quebec.

Religious Census Will Be Discussed At Meeting Dec. 9th

The Ministerial Association yesterday again discussed the proposal to take a religious census of the city. Mr. Halpenny, field secretary of the Sunday School Association of Ontario, was present and outlined the details of the work, but definite action was deferred until a meeting to be held on December 8th, at which it is hoped all the denominations in the city will be represented. Rev. Dougald Brown presided.

Great Care Taken Of Wounded Horses By Veterinary Corps

Dr. Hotchkis, a former veterinary student with Dr. Thos. Johnston, has arrived home from England after two and a half years serving in France with the Imperial Veterinary Corps. His experiences have been innumerable, and included narrow escapes. One day the Huns located 5,000 horses in a ravine between two ridges. They quickly found the range, and within a short time the shells were bursting among the helpless animals. The scene was indescribable. The horses stampeded in every direction, many of them were blown to pieces, the veterinary attendants were killed and wounded.

Capt. Hotchkis stated that the losses among the horses have been heavy, but the Corps has the most complete and efficient hospitals for the wounded animals, which receive as much attention as the wounded soldiers, but in a different form.

Dr. Hotchkis was eight months in an English hospital, and has received his discharge as unfit for further service. He has been appointed an inspector by the Government over territory that includes Peterborough.

NEW YORK REPORTS EGG SUPPLY IS BETTER THAN EVER NOW

NEW YORK, Nov. 27.—One of the curiosities of the food conservation campaign is that prohibition has aided the egg supply. There were in warehouses of the country, on 1st November, 4,457,691 cases, thirty dozen to the case, as compared with 3,650,270 cases a year ago. In New York City alone nearly 800,000 cases are stored.

These storage eggs, good all of them, are to be had retail at from 40c to 43c a dozen, prices which range from two to three cents cheaper than during the winter of 1916. Unbiassed observers say these figures are reasonable, and that householders who want to help the food saving movement should eat eggs—cold storage eggs—and now.

How prohibition increased the nation's egg supply is explained by P. Q. Foy, an authority on the subject. As he sees the situation, brewers in states gone dry converted their plants into storage warehouses. Last spring they entered into competition with the storage men of the east. To build up their new business they offered advances to egg men as high as $9.50 a case. Advances previously had ranged around $6. They got the eggs. But storage men in the East soon met this figure, and there followed a stage of cut-throat competition which drew the spring lay to the storage plants, and, because of high prices, kept it from the consumer. The result was storage plants piled ceiling high with eggs, with consumption of eggs at its lowest summer time ebb.

The vast stored supply is now being turned over to retailers as fast as the public will absorb it, but there is deep-rooted prejudice against the storage egg, and while New York City alone consumes 95,000 cases weekly, many insist on getting the fresh-laid egg, which fetches anywhere from 80c to $1 a dozen. Could this prejudice be removed, thousands of dollars would be saved to the consumer.

There is no egg famine in sight; the spring lay will be normal, if not greater than last year's, and prices are going to rule lower.

SOLDIER INSURANCE OPEN UNTIL FEB. 12

WASHINGTON, Nov. 27.—All officers and enlisted men and nurses in the army and navy ew reurged in an address issued by Secretary McAdoo to apply for Government life insurance before Feb. 12. Failure to apply by that date, he explained, would bar them. Dependents of any man killed before that time, however, will receive insurance payments, regardless of when their applications were made, inasmuch as the Government considers all of them insured automatically until then.

"To care for the wife and children of the enlisted man during his service," said Secretary McAdoo, "the war insurance law compels him to contribute up to one-half of his pay for their support. The Government, on application, will add to this an allowance of from $5 to $50 a month, according to the size of the family. Moreover, if the enlisted man will make some further provision himself for a dependent parent ,brother, sister, or grandchild, they may be included in the Government allowance.

"If, as a result of injuries incurred or disease contracted in the line of duty, an officer or enlisted man or an army or navy nurse should be disabled, provision is made for compensation of from $30 to $100 a month to him, and, should he die, compensation of from $20 to $75 a month will be paid to his wife, his child, or his widowed mother.

"Every soldier and sailor and nurse, commissioned and enlisted, and of any age, has the right, between now and Feb. 12, 1918, to take out life and total disability insurance up to $10,000 at very low cost, with the Government without medical examination. This right is purely optional. The soldiers and sailors are not compelled to take insurance, but if they desire to exercise the right, they must do so before Feb. 12. The cost ranges from 65 cents monthly, at the age of 21, to $1.20 monthly at the age of 51, for each $1,000 of insurance. This is a small charge on a man's pay—small in proportion to the benefits it may bringg. The premiums will he deducted from his pay, if he desires, thus eliminating trouble on his part.

"To provide adequate protection until Feb. 12, during the period when the soldiers and sailors are learning the details of this law, the Government automatically insures each man and woman, commissioned or enlisted in the military service of the United States. It pays the man $25 a month during total permanent disability; if he dies within 20 years, it pays the rest of 240 monthly in installments of $25 each to his wife, child, or widowed mother."

ARMY OF WOMEN OF ENGLAND AT WORK IN FRANCE

LONDON.—Britain will soon have an army of women in France comparing favourably in numbers with "the contemptibles" who consituted the first male contingent sent to France. This same epithet, which the Kaiser applied to Britain's first army, has been frequently used in referring to the first female contingent, but that has been changed now to the highest words of praise from the army commanders.

The first steps have been taken to recruit women of all classes for service overseas, the War Office asking for between 8,000 and 10,000 monthly. A giant scheme of substitution is progressing behind the lines, women being placed in men's positions in freight stations, warehouses, clerical offices, even in the Royal Flying Corps.

Minister of Labour Roberts declared in an address to women that he marvelled at women's adaptability, which not only exceeded all expectations, but had reached a point where they were invaluable.

As many as possible would be utilised near their homes, but the greater proportion would be sent into districts where the man power was being largely diluted. For the last six months women had been cooking for the officers' and men's messes in France. Every report shows that where they have taken up this work the food has been better prepared, the cook houses are in better sanitary condition, and the men are better satisfied. Furthermore, it has been discovered that three women occupy less space in the hut than two men. Despite all forecasts and expectations, the use of women with the army has proved a big economy as well as increasing military efficiency.

TRIBUNAL No. 275

COURT HOUSE

Eugene Fitzgerald, an A2 man, residing on Park Street, presented a detailed report, signed by his parents and physician, in which it was claimed that Fitzgerald in his early youth suffered a severe injury to his head, as the result ot a fall, from which he has not recovered. The applicant was asked to again appear before the Medical Board for further examination.

Judgment Reserved.

Joseph Coughlin, aged 32, and an A2 man, who with a brother, father and two sisters farm 225 acres in Douro. One hundred and seventy-five acres of this is under cultivation. The brother has been exempted, and it was claimed that the father was unable to do active farm work.

Judgment was reserved until a report is obtained from Dr. McGrath, the family physician, as to the condition of Mr. Coughlin, Sr.

Whole Family Represented.

Alfred H. Fielder, an electrician at the Canadian General Electric Company's plant, has two married brothers in the Old Country, both of whom are in military service.

"Wouldn't you like to go over there and get into the war?" inquired Judge Huycke.

"I am willing to go if they bring my brother back," replied applicant.

Applicant is also the main support of a widowed mother in England.

Fielder did not think it was fair that he should go when his two remaining brothers were in the war. He was willing to go providing his older married brother was returned to civil life.

Lieut.-Col. Clegg was of the opinion that Fielder should go.

"I don't think it is fair that the whole family should go," said Fielder.

"I only wish I could bring your brother home," said Judge Huycke.

Applicant produced a clipping from a Toronto paper relating to exemptions for certain classse of labour.

Fielder is an expert electrician, but both the Canadian General Electric Company and the Quaker Oats Company have refrained from seeking exemptions for their skilled employees. Judge Huycke commented on this fact in very high terms.

The claim was disallowed.

Placed in Class II.

Frederick William Hartshorn, a munitions inspector, resides with his widowed mother, and his two brothers are in the trenches, having sacrificed their stripes in order to get to the Front. The two brothers were members of the 93rd Battalion.

Hartshorn was placed in Class II. Applicant tried to enlist, but was turned down.

Victor Grady, a C.P.R. telegraph operator, will appear before the C.P.R. Tribunal with his claim for exemption.

Herbert Frost, 701 George Street, a patternmaker at the William Hamilton Company's plant, was exempted until the 1st of February.

Discharged Soldier.

Earl Lister, a former member of the First Contingent, showed a satisfactory certificate of discharge, with eighteen months' service to his credit. Lister, who is employed in the test department of the C.G.E., comes from Amherst, Nova Scotia.

Lister is an exception under the Act owing to his service as a soldier, and will have a chance to complete his education in his chosen profession.

Claim Refused.

John Patrick Sloan, who resides at the American House, was represented before the Tribunal by his employer, Mr. Ellis.

"Do you honestly think that the manufacture of mattresses is of national importance?" asked Judge Huycke.

"The C.G.E. and the Quaker Oats are not applying for one single man," added the Court.

Willing to Go.

Fred Sutcliffe, 502 Cedar Street, a barber and tobacconist on Charlotte Street, claimed exemption on the grounds of business responsibilities.

"I am also secretary-treasurer of the Woodmen of the World," said Sutcliffe.

Applicant said he was compelled to wear arch suports due to a defective ankle. Sutcliffe was not unwilling to go, providing he was reasonably sure that he could withstand military service.

Applicant was sent to the Medical Board for further medical examination. In event of having his medical history sheet affirmed, applicant desired to have a couple of months' extension in order to enable him to wind up the year's business as secretary of the order named.

THINK WELL OF BOB PARKER.

Hamilton Spectator: Eight men have been nominated for the O.H.A. executive, and Bob Parker, the Hamilton candidate, will have to do some tall hustling this week if he expects to be elected. Bob is pretty well known in hockey circles throughout the Province, and is leaving no stone unturned in his effort to be among the lucky four at the meeting next Saturday. He has been assured the suptpor of all the clubs in this district, and down at his former home, Peterborough, they are pulling strong for him. Men of Parker's calibre are needed on the governing body, and it would be a grand thing for the game here if he was elected.

To the Electors of East Peterboro

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN:—

I believe no greater disaster could, at the present time, befall our country than the defeat of the Borden Union Administration at the polls on December 17th.

The Policy of this Administration is the speedy and continuous reinforcements of our Canadian troops on the battle-front; and the putting forth of all our National strength for the cause of civilization and freedom.

To carry out this Policy, a number of Canada's ablest Public men of vision—sinking for the present—all political differences now stand together—strong to battle for the right—united to WIN the WAR.

For over three years thousands of Loyal Canadians of many creeds and of different Nationalities, have stood shoulder to shoulder on the Battlefields of Europe, gallantly fighting a common foe, and sometimes standing; sometimes falling, have won for the name of Canada undying fame. Shall we, with all possible speed, send help to these, our heroic defenders now holding the battle-line or shall we, break faith with them as well as "with those who die"—delay—vote—while the enemy advances?

As a Union Candidate in this Riding, I am putting forth every effort to win East Peterborough to the support of the Borden Union Administration and if elected shall to the utmost of my ability support the same.

To this end I now earnestly solicit the co-operation and influence of every loyal, patriotic man and woman in East Peterborough.

I have the honor to be, faithfully yours,

J. A. SEXSMITH

Miss Marion Clancy, nurse-in-training at Hotel Dieu, Kingston, has returned after spending a few weeks' holiday with her parents on Roger Street.

The many friends of Mrs. McCabe, 613 Union Street, will regret to learn that she met with a painful accident on Sunday while on driving, and that she will be confined to the house for some time.

A Talent Tea is being held this afternoon and evening, under the auspices of the Soldiers' Wives' and Mothers' Club at the home of Mrs. Brady, 122 Park Street. Everybody welcome. Come and bring your friends. There will also be an opportunity to welcome Pte. I. Brady, who has been invalided home from the front.

A successful Talent Tea was held at the home of Mrs. Browning, 771 Water street, yesterday afternoon and evening. Mrs. Adams, who poured tea, was assisted by the Misses Junkin and Hannamaker, of Lakefield. The tea table was tastefully decorated in patriotic effect, with flags and bunting. During the afternoon and evening an enjoyable musical programme was given, solos being given by Miss A. Morris, Miss Calder, Miss Greene and Mrs. Whitehouse. Miss Calder was accompanist. The proceeds of the tea will be given to St. Luke's Church.

Mrs. Herbert Symonds, who has been visiting Miss Belcher, returned to-day to her home in Montreal.

Miss Mary Traill returned yesterday to Brantford after a two weeks' vacation spent in the city and in Lakefield.

Mrs. H. Decks Robertson returns to-day from a two-weeks' visit in Halifax. Lieut. H. D. Robertson sailed recently for France.

Mrs. James McGhee has returned from Madoc after attending the funeral of her brother-in-law, Mr. James Hayon.

The regular weekly tea of the 57th Chapter, I.O.D.E., will be held tomorrow (Thursday) afternoon in the Masonic Dining Hall. The Misses Rubidge will be in charge.

Misses Muriel and Dorothy Hartshorn arrived in the city yesterday, and will be at home until Saturday, when they will leave for a three weeks' evangelistic campaign in Norwood.

U.S. Troops Going Steadily To Front

LANDING IN FRANCE AS FAST AS WAS EXPECTED, SAYS MR. BAKER.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 27.—Arrival of American troops in France has kept pace with the expectation of the War Department, the Secretary of War, Mr. Baker, said last night in the first statement he has ever authorized in connection with the progress being made in increasing General Pershing's forces.

Mr. Baker declined, however, to state the number of troops forwarded or to indicate whether he anticipated delay from this time on. Movement of the forces, he said, depended on the elements, the training and equipment of the men, and the availability of ships.

"As fast as they are ready, ships and men will be combined," the Secretary said. "As many American troops are now overseas as we expected in the beginning to have overseas at this time."

Mr. Baker indicated that an official statement of the number of American troops in France was not to be expected at any time during the war. He caused an inquiry to be made of the military censor, Major-General McIntyre, however, which may result in more liberal regulations as to publication of the designations of regiments, brigades or companies which are engaged in action on the front from time to time. If there is no sound military reason for suppressing that information, Mr. Baker said, he desired to give it out.

OBITUARY

Mr. H. S. MACDONALD.

At Nicholls Hospital yesterday evening (27th inst.) there passed away one of Peterborough's best known citizens in the person of Mr. H. S. MacDonald. The illness, which terminated in his death, was of about six weeks' duration.

Mr. MacDonald came to the city thirty-seven years ago and for over twenty-five years he was engaged in the drug business on the corner of Hunter and George streets, now Kent's drug store.

He is survived by his wife, three daughters, Mrs. N. P. Reynolds, Lethbridge, Margaret and Helen at home; also three sons, W. D. and H. F. of Detroit. Sapper I. Douglas, who is at present in the Military Convalescent Hospital in Woolwich, England, where he is recovering from severe wounds sustained whilst on active service at the front. One sister, Miss E. F. MacDonald, resides in Montreal.

The funeral will be held from the family residence, 338 Rubidge street, on Thursday afternoon at 3 o'clock. The service will be conducted by Rev. Robert Pogue, pastor of St. Paul's church, of which church Mr. MacDonald has for many years been a valued and honoured member.

CANADA'S FREE WHEAT POURS INTO THE U.S.

SINCE TARIFF WAS CHANGED IN APRIL, 14,000,000 TONS CROSS BORDER.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 27.—Canadian wheat is pouring into the United States duty free through every customs district on the northern border in largely increasing volume, the Department of Commerce announced today.

For the nine months ended with last September, the United States imported from Canada 21,490,269 bushels, over 14,00,000 of which came in free after April 16. This was the date on which Canada removed its import duty. During these nine months wheat flour imports totalled 403,270 barrels of which 297,000 came in free, against a total of 157,289 barrels in the same period of 1916 and hardly more than ninety thousand in 1915.

The heaviest of this traffic was through Buffalo. Movement of Canadian flour to the West coast is noticeable.

"'YOU CAN'T HAVE HIM,' THOSE WORDS STUNNED ME," WIFE'S STORY OF DE SAULLES TRAGEDY

Defendant, Always Mistress of Her Emotions, Recounts Her Blighted Hopes, Forebodings of Losing Only Child and Scene When Husband Was Killed.

OFTEN SMILES, BUT LEAVES STAND DAZED; PROMINENT WOMEN IT THE COURT ROOM

NEW YORK, Nov. 29.—Blanca de Saulles for four tense hours successfully withstood the ordeal of telling on the witness stand the story of her shooting of her husband and the blighted hopes, the forebodings of losing her child that had led up to the tragedy.

From beginning to end she was mistress of her emotions. She seldom had to be prompted by counsel, and at the climax of her grim narrative, when she depicted the scene just before the killing, Justice Manning directed her to tell it all in her own language, suggesting that her counsel, Henry A. Uterhart, desist from eliciting the evidence by questions.

She acquiesced readily Her attorney resumed his seat, and the little Chilian thus recorded the story of the act for which she is now on trial for her life:

"The maid and I started from Crossways, and we took the dog. I wanted to take my baby right away with me, and I didn't want Jack to know, so I ordered the taxi to stop at a little distance from the Box, on the roadway. As the maid and I got out I saw De Saulles' car standing outside. I was surprised to see it there, as I had not supposed he would yet have returned from the Meadow Brook Club, where they told me over the 'phone he had gone to dinner.

Stunned by Husband's Words.

"As I went into the house I saw my baby coming down stairs with Mrs. Degener, De Saulles' sister. I wanted then to take the baby and run. But then Mr. De Saulles came forward. I think I asked him why he had kept the baby past his time. I think I said I thought it a very mean thing to keep the baby from me. I don't know what he said then—something about it being his time to have the boy But I said: 'I want him and I've come to take him.'

"Then he looked at me and said: 'You can't have him; you can't ever have him.' I saw a look come over his face. I think I was stunned then. I felt a frightful pain in my head. I still seem to hear those words."

At this point the witness paused painfully. There was perfect silence in the room. Everybody waited. At length she murmured: "That's all."

"Is that all you know?" asked the Justice, in kindly tones.

"Yes," came the reply, almost inaudible.

Justice Manning waited a moment. Then he asked: "And when did your memory return?"

"I think it was when I found Dr. White speaking to me."

"Do you know now when that was—whether it was on the same night or the next day?" pursued the Justice.

Blanca de Saulles nodded her head in the negative, as though she had completely lost her reckoning from that point. She only answered: "I remember only that my head hurt terribly."

Excused, But Asks If She May Go.

It was clear that the defendant had reached the limit of her strength to endure. The Justice looked at her and said: "You may go now." It was still fifteen minutes short of the usual time for adjournment, but he preferred to close the day with Blanca's direct testimony. She looked gravely at him, as though not quite comprehending. Then, she asked, "May I go?"

"Yes, you may go," the kindly-

OWNS SIX SALOONS.

But Germnn is Not Naturalized and Must Go.

NEW YORK, Nov. 29.—Many prosperous German business and professional men in New York will be forced into retirement as a result of President Wilson's proclamation forbidding enemy aliens to approach within 100 yards of water fronts. One German, who owns six saloons within a barred zone, appealed to United States Marshal McCarthy to modify the order, but he was told that any man who had been long enough in this country to own six saloons and failed to become a citizen of the United States deserved to lose all he had. He will have to turn over or sell out.

WHITE BOOK REFUTES THE GERMAN CHARGES REGARDING ALLEGED MISUSE

No Munitions or Troops Ever Carried on Hospital Ships, British Assert—And Innocent Hospital Ships Ruthlessly Attacked by U-Boats in Violation of Hague Treaty.

FLIMSY RUMOURS ACCEPTED

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29.—Copies of the British White Book, containing the correspondence of that Government with the German Government regarding the alleged misuse of British hospital ships, have been received in Washington. The document contains evidence furnished by the German authorities and the British Government's comments on it. A memorandum by the London Foreign Office accompanies the correspondence, and, as received at an Entente Embassy today, follows:

"In replying to the accusations brought forward by the German Government, his Majesty's Government desire, before all, to call attention to the remarkable fact that German submarines and other warships have never once exercised the right of inspecting British hospital ships, which is given to them by Article 4 of The Hague Convention for the application of the principles of the Geneva Convention to maritime warfare. So far as can be ascertained, they have only once stopped a British hospital ship long enough to examine her papers. This occurred on the 23rd of February, 1917, when the hospital-ship Dunluce Castle was stopped by a German submarine in the Eastern Mediterranean; her papers were found to be in order, and the vessel was allowed to proceed.

"It might have been expected that the German Government, seeing that they had reports in their possession, which they profess to regard as reliable, pointing to the misuse of British hospital ships, would not have completely neglected the obvious and well recognized method of inspection for the purpose of verifying their suspicions. Instead they have preferred to appeal for support of their charges to conjectural statements of persons who never had an opportunity of ascertaining whether there was any real foundation for their assumptions, and, on this flimsy basis, without making any attempt to discover the value of the hearsay evidence which they had collected or giving his Majesty's Government any opportunity of rebutting their allegations, they proceeded to the extreme step of ruthlessly attacking innocent hospital ships engaged in their humane task of serving the sick and wounded.

Germany's Charges Grouped.

"His Majesty's Government have now made inquiry into the allegations contained in the German memoranda so far as they concern British hospital ships and so far as the charges made are not in such vague terms as to preclude any possibility of investigating their foundation. Generally, the charges group themselves under four heads, viz.:

(1) Alleged excessive number of hospital ships in relation to the Gallipoli campaign.

(2) Changes in the list of hospital ships, with supposed intention to deceive.

(3) Alleged transport of munitions.

(4) Alleged transport of troops.

"As to (1), the number of hospital ships employed was not excessive, having regard to the number of invalids to be evacuated from Gallipoli. On the contrary, the accommodations on hospital ships proved to be inadequate to meet requirements, and it was necessary to employ ordinary transports in addition for the conveyance of sick and wounded. These transports were, of course, not protected by The Hague Convention, did not fly the Red Cross flag, and were not fitted out as hospital ships.

"As to (2), no rule exists under which a hospital ship, once notified, must remain in hospital service for the duration of the war. It is perfectly true that certain ships were notified as hospital ships and later on were removed from the list. This was due to alterations in the requirements for the various classes of tonnage caused by the sinkings of ships by submarines and to changes in the military situation.

"There is no ground for the somewhat nebulous suggestion of the German Government that the aim of the changes was to produce uncertainty and confusion in regard to the character of the ships, and no evidence is adduced to show what military advantages could be gained by such confusion, which, in fact, would probably be disadvantageous rather than otherwise, since it would be injurious to the safety of the hospital ships themselves.

Carried No Munitions or Troops.

"As to (3) and (4), alleged conveyance of munitions and troops, to which nearly all the evidence relates, a detailed examination of the particular instances alleged is given below. It may, however, be stated at once that British hospital ships have never been used for the carriage of munitions of war or of combatant troops. Red Cross stores and personnel of the Royal Army Medical Corps, (who are protected by the Geneva Convention), have been embarked, and it appears probable that the German Government have been misled by fallacious deductions of their witnesses, who apparently were unable to verify their assumption that cases of Red Cross stores were really munitions of war and bodies of the Royal Army Medical Corps in khaki uniform were detachments of combatant troops.

"The statement in the second German memorandum to the effect that, while His Majesty's Government had denied that British hospital ships had carried either troops or munitions, the British Admiralty had merely declared that no troops had been conveyed in such ships, without denying the carriage of munitions, is curiously devoid of point. Both in the statement issued by His Majesty's Government on the 1st February, 1917, and in a note addressed to the United States Ambassador in London on the 31st January, the allegations of the German Government were contradicted in respect both of troops and of munitions.

"The discrepancy which the German Government pretends to have discovered between the declarations of His Majesty's Government, as a whole, and those of the Admiralty in particular, appear to rest on a statement issued by the Admiralty and published on the 2nd February, in which particular notice is given to the allegation of Albert Messany, circulated in a German Wireless Press message, to the effect that 2,500 soldiers, who were not invalids, had been carried by the hospital ship Britannia.

"With reference to this allegation, the Admiralty stated that no British hospital ship had ever embarked any persons but invalids and hospital staff. There was no occasion in that particular connection to refer to munitions. The play which the German Government make with this imaginary discrepancy is an illustration of their practice of trying to make capital out of infinitesimal points, a practice which has the appearance of being adopted in order to cover up the weakness of their main position."

"THE FILM OF FEAR"

By ARNOLD FREDERICKS

The screams continued, filling the entire apartment with their clamor. That the voice which uttered them was that of Ruth Morton none of the three doubted for a moment. With sinking hearts they went on, prepared for the worst. Duvall found himself dreading the moment when they should reach the bedroom door, and face the girl, her beauty, perhaps, disfigured beyond all recognition.

There was a sharp turn at the end of the hall into a shorter cross hall, at the end of which was the door of Ruth's bedroom. It was closed, but as though in response to Mrs. Morton's agonized appeals, it sudd nly opened as they reached it, and Ruth Morton, pale as death, appeared.

With wide open eyes staring straight ahead, she half stepped, half fell, through the doorway, her slender figure clothed only in her night dress.

"Ruth!" Mrs. Morton screamed as she caught sight of her daughter.

The girl tried to say something but her tongue failed her. Then with a faint moan, she lurched forward, and fell limply into her mother's arms.

PART II.

CHAPTER VII.

When Duvall, Mr. Baker of the motion picture company, and Mrs. Morton rushed down the hallway of the latter's apartment in response to the screams from Ruth's bedroom, they were one and all convinced that the girl had suffered some terrible injury that the mysterious threats to destroy her beauty which had been made during the past few days had been converted into some frightful reality.

One glance at the girl's white face as she fell fainting into her mother's arms told the detective that their fears had been, to that extent at least, groundless. The girl's lovely features, although drawn and contorted by fear, showed no signs of the disfigurement they feared.

Leaving the girl to her mother's care, Duvall, closely followed by Mr. Baker, dashed into the bedroom, and at once switched on the lights.

The place to the intense surprise of both, presented a picture of perfect quiet and order. The bed clothing was slightly disarranged, but this of course but but natural, since Ruth had sprung up under the influence of some terrible fear, and rushed from the room. Everything else seemed in its place.

Duvall's first act was to examine the window. The one fronting on the fire escape was closed and tightly fastened. It was perfectly clear that no one had entered the room in that way.

The other window facing on the court, was raised a few inches, just as Mrs. Morton had left it half an hour before. Duvall turned to his companion with a puzzled frown.

"I had supposed, Mr. Baker," he said, "that someone had entered this room, and frightened Miss Morton, while she was asleep, but that is impossible. The windows have not been disturbed."

Baker glanced at the one which faced the court.

"That one may have been," he said, indicating it with a nod. "Someone may have come in that way, raising the window to effect an entrance, and lowering it again after leaving."

"I admit that what you say would be possible, were there any way in which the window might be reached from outside," Duvall replied, "but if you will look out, and tell me how anyone could make an entrance from the court, I will agree to the possibility you suggest."

Baker raised the window, and glanced out.

"The apartment above," Duvall went on, "is unoccupied and the window above is closed and fastened. The little attic in the adjoining house is unused, although that is not important, since no one could reach this window from it, in any event. Can you suggest any other way?"

Mr. Baker shook his head.

"She must have been frightened by some terrible nightmare," he said. "I do not wonder at it. She has gone through enough to upset anybody's nerves. Suppose we go back, and question her."

"Just a moment," exclaimed Duvall. Then he dropped upon his knees beside the disordered bed, and began to examine the surface of the counterpane with minute care.

"What is it?" Baker asked, joining him.

"I don t know—yet," returned Duvall, as he took a magnifying glass from his pocket and proceeded to scrutinize with the greatest interest some marks upon the counterpane's surface. Presently he rose, replaced the glass in his pocket, and turned to his companion.

"There is something very astonishing about this whole affair," he exclaimed. "What do you make of those?" He indicated a series of dark scudges upon the bedspread, arranged in little groups.

Baker bent over and examined the marks with an exclamation of surprise.

"Why—they look like finger prints," he cried. "Large finger prints."

"It is impossible to say whether they are finger prints or not," Duvall replied. "As you see, there are a great many of them, very confusingly arranged. But there is something else that you have not noticed. What do you suppose could have made a mark like this?" He pointed to a long, straight dark line, which extended half way across the counterpane and pointed directly toward the window, which faced upon the court. The line was very faint but clearly defined, as though someone had laid a dusty stick across the bed.

"I can't make anything of it," Baker exclaimed, gazing toward the window.

"Nor can I," said Duvall. "At one time, because of certain indentations on the letters found in this room, I had thought that they might have been introduced through the partly opened window by means of a long pole, a fishing pole, perhaps. This mark on the counterpane appears to bear out that theory. The smudges which look like finger prints, may have been merely the points at which the end of the pole, or whatever was attached to the end of the pole, came in contact with the bed. All that is perfectly supposable. But you can see for yourself that if a long pole were thrust through the window, raised as the latter was but a trifle above the level of the bed, the other end of such a pole must of necessity have been held at approximately the same level, and the only point outside the window from which it could have been so held is in the air, forty feet above the bottom of the court! The thing is absurd."

"There is of course, the window of the apartment below," Baker suggested. "Might not it have been used?"

"I thought of that," Duvall replied—"you can see for yourself that even a tall man standing on the window sill below, would find not only his hands, but even h s h l, far below the sill of this window, nor could anyone so support themselves, without something to hold on to. But all that is beside the question. The people in the apartment below are friends of Mrs. Morton's, a middle aged man and his wife, with two small children. They are eminently respectable people, and quite above suspicion."

"Then I give the thing up," exclaimed Baker. "Suppose that we have a talk with Miss Morton."

They found the girl lying on a couch in the library, with her mother sitting beside her. She seemed very weak and quiet, but in full possession of her faculties. Duvall drew up a chair and asked her if she felt able to tell them what had happened.

"Yes," she replied in a faint voice, her face still showing evidences of her fright. "I will try to tell you exactly what happened."

"I had taken some medicine to make me sleep, before I got to bed, because I was very nervous and upset. When mother came back to fix the windows I was already drowsy and just remember that she turned out the lights, and then I must have dozed.

"All of a sudden I heard a strange rasping noise, and I woke up, with the feeling that there was someone in the room. I don't know why I felt so sure of that, whether it was merely a sense of someone's presence, or the sound of someone moving about near my bed. I think, however, that it was the latter.

"The room was dark, of course, but enough light came through the windows to make a moving object distinguishable. I looked about terribly frightened, but for a moment I saw nothing. The noise I had heard at first continued. Then without the least warning a hand seemed to clutch at the bedclothes, and I saw above me, bending over me, a terrible dark face, exactly like the grinning death's head on those letters I've been getting."

"I lay perfectly still, frozen with horror, and in a moment the face had disappeared, and then I began to scream. Right after that I sprang from the bed and threw open the door and found mother and Mr. Baker and yourself standing in the hall. That is all I know."

Duvall looked at her for a moment, puzzled.

Croup

"I don't think there is a more anxious time for parents than when their children have croup. Without they are prepared with Chamberlain's Cough Remedy they must wait for the doctor and listen to the choking, metallic cough and watch their little one gasping for breath.

You know the great danger of croup is the formation of a false membrane in the larynx, and until this is expelled relief cannot be obtained, and the spasmodic choking continues. Give Chamberlain's Cough Remedy in frequent doses. It will loosen this membrane and cause the child to expel it by vomiting.

Chamberlain's Cough Remedy

is an absolutely safe and certain remedy for croup, and if given as soon as the child becomes hoarse, or even after the croupy cough appears, it will prevent the attack."

Had Bronchitis FOR THREE YEARS COULD GET NO RELIEF

Bronchitis is generally the result of a cold caused by exposure to wet and inclement weather. It begins with a tightness across the chest, difficulty in breathing, and a wheezing sound comes from the lungs. There is also a raising of phlegm from the lungs, especially in the morning. This is at first white, but later becomes of a greenish or yellowish color, and is occasionally streaked with blood.

On the first sign of bronchitis you should check it immediately by using Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, and thereby prevent it becoming chronic and perhaps turning into some more serious lung trouble.

Mr. Theodore P. Beers, Upper Main River, N.B., writes: "I was troubled with bronchitis for three years, and could get no relief. I was always worse when I got wet. I tried lots of different medicines, but none did me any good until a friend told me to try Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup. I got three bottles and before I had them half used I was better.

"My mother is now using it for asthma. It is a great medicine and we never want to be without it.

Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup is put up in a yellow wrapper; three pine trees the trade mark; price 25c and 50c; manufactured only by the T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

"DEVICES OF THE DEVIL"

So Citizens of Lancaster, O., Decided About Railways in 1828.

In 1828 some of the public-spirited citizens of the town of Lancaster, O., requested the use of the school to discuss the question, "Are Railroads Practical or Not?"

The board entered these remarks upon its minutes: "You are welcome to use the schoolhouse to debate all proper questions in but such things as railroads and telegraphs are impossible and rank infidelity. There is nothing in the word of God about them. If God had designed that his intelligent creatures should travel at the frightful speed of 15 miles an hour, He would have clearly foretold it through His holy prophets. It is a device of Satan to lead immortal souls down to hell."

The school board refused to be a party to any such enterprise.

TAKE SALTS TO FLUSH KIDNEYS

Eat less meat if you feel Backachy or have Bladder trouble

Meat forms uric acid which excites and overworks the kidneys in their efforts to filter it from the system. Regular eaters of meat must flush the kidneys occasionally. You must relieve them like you relieve your bowels; removing all the acids, waste and poison, else you feel a dull misery in the kidney region, sharp pains in the back or sick headache, dizziness, your stomach sours, tongue is coated and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine is cloudy, full of sediment; the channels often get irritated, obliging you to get up two or three times during the night.

To neutralize these irritating acids and flush off the body's urinous waste get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a gla of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine and bladder disorders disappear. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate sluggish kidneys and stop bladder irritation. Jad Salts is inexpensive, harmless, and makes a delightful effervescent lithiawater drink which millions of men and women take now and then, thus avoiding serious kidney and bladder diseases.

NEW WINNIPEG TRAIN

SALOONS IN CHICAGO FEWER.

1,100 Quit Business, War and Sunday Closing Being Factors.

CHICAGO, Nov. 27. — Compulsory Sunday closing and conditions brought about by the war have driveen 1,100 Chicago saloons out of business with a resultant loss to the city of $1,100,000 a year in revenue. The number of saloons on Nov. 1, 1915, was 7,152. On May 1 of this year it was 6,653. The number of licenses in effect last night was 5,916, but probably 50 or 100 more licenses will be granted.

The five principal causes given by saloon keepers for quitting are: The new Federal tax, the drive of the drys, the failure of the wets to clean up the business, the extensive sale of beers from waggons, the mobilization of the national army. Of these the one most frequently given is the last. The taking of 25,000 young men out of Chicago for the national army has decreased the trade of the small saloon keepers, especially in the outlying districts, according to the views expressed by those who visit the license counter in the County Collector's office.

Some of the liquor men said that the dry sentiment was growing, but they were inclined to put the blame on the leaders of the wet organizations. They assented that the heads of the liquor associations would not allow enough regulation, and that lack of it was injuring the business and aiding the drys.

WINS THE MILITARY CROSS

In the fourth Supplement to the "London Gazette," issued on September 18, it is stated that the M.C. was awarded to Lieut. Edward Frederick Ellis, R.F.A., for the act of bravery thus described:

"Whilst constructing observation posts in two separate occasions he showed the utmost [illegible] his own personal [illegible] when the parties he was [illegible] of bad weather and [illegible] above fire he with[illegible] a chain of sand-[illegible] and returned [illegible] collect the [illegible] and get them away, remaining for half an hour in the shelled area until all were clear. By his splendid coolness and personal example he so influenced his men that the work of evacuating the wounded was promptly and successfully achieved."

Lieut. Edward Frederick Ellis is on the staff of the Canadian Pacific Railway, Registrar's Department, London, and joined the colours in October, 1914.

The Canadian Pacific Railway has made a big contribution to the man power of the British Army. Figures up to October 1st are interesting. Out of the 65,000 permanent employees of the company 7,000 have joined the Canadian Expeditionary Force, and there are 100 C. P. R. men in the navy. This shows that about 11 per cent. of the total employees have enlisted. 515 have been killed, and 1,111 have been wounded, showing that 23 per cent. of those who have gone figured in the casualty list. The C. P. R. has been represented almost everywhere there was a fight against the Central Powers on land and sea, and the former railwaymen have proved themselves as efficient in the sphere of battle as they were wont to be in the sphere of the pen, the mechanical tool or the giant engine. Many of them have been awarded titles of distinction. Reservists of the various allied armies who flocked from the service of the C. P. R. to answer the call of their respective countries are not included in the figures above given.

The death in action of Capt. W. H. D. Bennett, who went overseas with the Montreal Highland unit recruited by Lt.-Col. (now Brigadier general) Loomis, is reported. Capt. Bennett was formerly a car checker in the services of the C. P. R. at Montreal, but was granted a commission and promoted for distinguished ability while on active service. Writing of the action in which he met his death, Col. McCuaig says in part:

"He had just taken Major Macfarlane's company over the top, when he was hit, but still carried on, and had reached the first objective when he perceived that a machine gun in the final trench was doing damage to his men. Gathering together three men, this party made a dash for the gun, which they captured, but unfortunately as they started, Capt. Bennett was shot through the body near the heart. His only remaining subaltern went to him to lend aid, but Capt. Bennett refused to be dressed, and ordered the subaltern to go forward, at the same time directing him to move his men to the right to cover their proper front. He died a few minutes after. We hope that his name will be added to those who have won the most coveted war honor. He was a gallant officer, and his work was second to none in the battalion."

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

The Social Ladder

There Is Money as Well as Position on the Top Round

By ETHEL HOLMES

Billy Saxton and Eunice Mainwaring were married at an unfortunate time. They had been both brought up in luxury and had met, loved and become engaged in the social whirl. But they were the last of a long line of rich people, and neither possessed anything whereon to live except their clothes, though this in Eunice's case was considerable.

Love spurred Billy to make an effort and he secured a position giving him $25 a week. The two figured out how they would make it do, and, Cupid holding the pencil, brought their requirements within it. So they were married. But unfortunately the pan European war came on about this time and prices began to soar. Billy's salary remained where it was. Article that they required rose from 50 to 100 per cent. Therefore their income was really not more than from $15 to $20 a week. Cupid, after he has got a couple off his hands by marrying them, does not further trouble himself about their affairs. The Saxtons made new figures, but the little god was not wagging the pencil, and this time the result spelled ruin.

After a long conference it was agreed between them that Billy should go to Mr. Goldwin, the head of the firm by which he was employed, call his attention to the raise in prices of necessities and ask if something could not be done to enable him to earn a better income. The next day after business hours when Mr. Goldwin was about to leave his private office Billy opened the door, and walked in. Billy had on a suit he had worn at the time of his marriage, a beautiful polkadot necktie and yellow spats. Most of his attire was somewhat worn, but it was in good style, and its owner looked more like a deposed prince of the blood inquiring for a rich American wife than a mere clerk.

Billy stammered forth his case while his employer listened, rather noting the young man's aristocratic appearance than the burden of his argument. But when the request came Mr. Goldwin told his employee that, while he saw the justice of his demand, he could not grant it. The profits in his business, while prices had been rising, had fallen proportionately. True, the firm had been doing a larger business than before, but everything required in it had so risen in price that the more business done the more money lost.

Billy knew that this was not so, and the knowledge only made him feel the more bitter at the refusal. He went out sorrowful. As he made his exit the wife of the head of the firm entered. She was richly dressed and bespangled with jewels. She had come to drive her husband home in his auto.

"Who is that young man?" she asked.

"His name is Saxton. Why do you ask?"

"He's the most aristocratic looking person I have seen in a long while. Is he in your employ?"

"Yes; he has a minor clerkship."

"A minor clerkship! A young man of his age and to the manner born occupying a minor clerkship!"

"Our clerks are not appointed because they are aristocratic looking and wear fine clothes."

"Nevertheless I think I see in this young man something more valuable and ornamental than one perched on a high stool turning over the leaves of a ledger."

"Well, my dear, if you will tell me how to make him thus valuable I will see what I can do about it."

"Ask him to dinner."

Mr. Goldwin, having just refused Billy a raise in salary, was not minded to invite him to dinner. Such an invitation would suggest that the employer had reconsidered the request of the employee and would show a favoritism to one of the office force that would have a bad effect. Mr. Goldwin said that he would see about it, and the subject was dropped for the time. When Mrs. Goldwin brought it up again her husband told her that Billy had a wife and it would be out of the question to give him an invitation without including his consort. Mrs. Goldwin, not being sure that Mrs. Saxton was up to Billy's aristocratic standard, dropped the matter—at least for the time.

One Sunday Mr. and Mrs. Goldwin were reading the morning papers, he the financial articles, his wife the society columns. Mrs. Goldwin's eye alighted upon an announcement of the first appearance in the social world for some time of Mr. and Mrs. William Saxton at a function given by Mrs. Saxton's aunt, Mrs. DeVersey Mainwaring. Mrs. Goldwin at once called her husband's attention to the announcement and berated him soundly for not having given the invitation she had suggested. Mr. Goldwin, who knew something of social customs, suggested that Mrs. Saxton must be considered in the matter and raised a lot of objections, which for the time being carried his point.

But his wife, whose sole ambition in the world was to force an entrance into society, was not satisfied. After this she scrutinized the society news and saw on several occasions the names of Mr. and Mrs. William Saxton at different functions. The reason for this was that an uncle of Billy, wishing to sell a piece of property, told his nephew that he would give him a commission if he would make a sale. Billy sold the property and received $500 commission.

This uncle of Billy's was a practical matter of fact man, and Billy asked him how he could best invest the money paid him.

"Billy," said his uncle, "every man should use what he has on which to build. The only thing you have is the entree into society. There are persons who would give you a fortune for an introduction to the gilded world. But you couldn't deliver the goods. Still, in society lies your field. My advice is for you to spend your $500 in suitable clothes for yourself and wife and other necessities in keeping in with the swells. Meanwhile keep your eye skinned for a chance to make a profitable deal. Some financial magnate may take a fancy to you and give you a tip."

Billy saw the drift of the advice, and Billy's wife advocated following it with all her heart. Billy's investment in clothes was confined principally to a dress suit, and the rest of the funds devoted to apparel went to his wife. After this the names of Mr. and Mrs. William Saxton were to be found quite often in the society columns of the newspapers.

One day James Edgerton, a business acquaintance of Billy's, called upon him and told him that he was about to place a very large order for goods dealt in by the John Goldwin company. He intimated that if Billy could get him satisfactory figures he would give him the order. Billy figured that the commission involved would amount to a small fortune. He called on Mr. Goldwin and submitted the matter. Goldwin was eager to secure the order. When the bids were all in Edgerton said to Billy:

"By the bye, Saxton, is Mrs. Montgomery Saxton a relative of yours?"

"She is my aunt."

"I see by the papers that there is to be a wedding in that family in June, and all the swells will be there. Are you going?"

"Certainly."

Then the conversation turned again upon the bids. When Billy went home that evening he told Eunice about this mention of the wedding.

"Did you tell him you would get him an invitation?" asked Eunice.

"Why, no; I didn't think to do that. He is only a business acquaintance."

"Stupid! Go ask your aunt for an invitation for him and his wife, if he has a wife, and tell her that this order you are expecting from him is dependent upon her sending him one."

Billy hurried off to his aunt and upon making known his reasons for asking for the invitation received it and the next day when he called on Edgerton to talk business tossed it on the desk before which he sat. Edgerton put it in his pocket, and before Billy left him he had the order he coveted. But there was a condition attached to it—he must place it with Sampson, Bliss & Co., a firm Edgerton wished to favor.

Billy reported to Mr. Goldwin the result of the negotiations, much to that gentleman's disappointment. Goldwin had mentioned the matter to his wife, and when she asked him if he had received the order he was obliged to make known why he had not received it. He told the story Billy had told him, including the exchange of the wedding invitation for the order. There followed a storm in the Goldwin family, during which Mrs. Goldwin said she did not believe that Billy had been forced to give the order to Sampson, Bliss & Co. and if her husband had followed her suggestion to invite the Saxtons to dinner his firm would have received the order.

This put a suspicion into Mr. Goldwin's head that Billy had favored another concern in preference to his employer's, and it rankled in his heart. Billy's services were easy to replace, and when he went to his office the next day his employer showed his spleen by discharging his clerk. Billy was told the reason for his dismissal and was very much hurt thereat. He told Edgerton about it, and Edgerton went to Sampson, Bliss & Co. and secured him a position at double the salary he had been receiving.

Billy's commission on the order was some $12,000 and a new salary at $50 a week. But this was only the beginning of a successful career. It was known that he had controlled an order amounting to several hundred thousand dollars, and a number of concerns offered him a better salary than that given him by his new employer. But by the advice of Edgerton he declined them all. The truth is that Edgerton's wife was a woman well calculated for a social shiner, but had needed a start, a first appearance, to enable her to get her tentacles on those she would utilize for climbing. The invitation that came through Billy Saxton was all she required, and the next season found Mr. and Mrs. Edgerton fully recognized as members of the golden circle.

As for Mr. and Mrs. Saxton, they, too, had made a start. It was not up the social ladder, for they had been born on the top round. It was in making their social position pay financially. Mrs. Saxton has taken up the matter and with hints from her husband has already received certain tips that have enabled him to get in on the ground floor of enterprises that promise large results. The couple's ancestors would have scorned to make capital out of their social position, but the present social circle is a very different one from that of the olden time. The social circle of those days was based largely on refinement, and, although the possession of wealth has always been conducive to refinement, it was then possible for refined persons to maintain a position in society without wealth. Today that is impossible except when the position is inherited, and then only for a short period.

SMOKING IN CHURCH.

Smoking in church is a Dutch custom. Dutchmen are such inveterate smokers that rarely is one of them seen without a pipe. He finds himself unable to deprive himself of the indulgence, even for the short period of church service. A similar practice exists in several churches in South America.

The practice is said to have been prevalent in Great Britain at the beginning of the seventeenth century. At one time smoking was carried to such an excess in Seville Cathedral that the chapter applied to the Pope for power to repress the abuse.

In Wales smoking in church was indulged in as late as 1805. In one church the communion table stood in the aisle, and the farmers were in the habit of putting their hats upon it, and when the service began they lighted their pipes and smoked without any thought of irreverence in the act.

To Prevent Chapped Skin

LIVER TROUBLE and HEARTBURN CURED BY
MILLBURN'S LAXA-LIVER PILLS

When the liver is torpid and inflamed it cannot furnish bile to the bowels, causing them to become bound and costive. The symptoms are a feeling of fullness or weight in the right side, and shooting pains in the same region, pains between the shoulders, yellowness of the skin and eyes, floating specks before the eyes, coated tongue, bad taste in the morning, heartburn, water brash, etc.

Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills gently unlock the secretions, clear away all effete and waste matter from the system, and give tone and vitality to the whole intestinal track, and are by far the safest and quickest remedy for all diseases or disorders of the liver.

Mrs. A. Cummings, Manchester, Ont., writes: "I have used Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills some time, and can faithfully recommend them to anyone suffering from heartburn and liver trouble. I tried a great many other remedies but they only relieved me for a time. I believe Laxa-Liver Pills to be a valuable remedy for all sufferers from liver troubles."

Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills are 25c a vial at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

RAISING SHEEP NETS PROFIT OF 60 PER CENT. TO BREEDERS

HARRISBURG.— According to the statedepartment of agriculture bulletin sheep growers claim that it is possible to establish a flock and realize as high as 60 per cent. on the investment with in a year at the present prices. Instances have been reported where as high as 70 per cent. of the cost has been received in profit.

Eczema Cured Five Years Ago

Jordan, Ont., Nov. 28.—The old notion that eczema is a disease of the blood is refuted time and time again by the cures that are daily being effected by Dr. Chase's Ointment.

It matters not what the cause may have been if you apply Dr. Chase's Ointment regularly you will obtain relief and cure of eczema. Here is the proof.

Mrs. Stephen G. Thwaites, Box 205, Jordan, Ont., writes: "My brother had a bad case of eczema on his leg. He was troubled nearly all one fall and winter with it, and could not work for days at a time. He tried different salves and ointments, but none cured him. One day he tried Dr. Chase's Ointment, and it gave almost instant relief. He continued its use, but had not quite finished the second box when he was cured. It is now about five years since then, and it has never returned. We certainly can recommend Dr. Chase's Ointment, and are very grateful for my brother's cure."

(Rev. S. E. Coffman, Vineland, Ont. states: "This is to certify that I know Mrs. Thwaites and the party to whom she refers, and her statements are correct.")

Mr. J. E. Jones, 228 University avenue Kingston, Ont., writes: "I had eczema in my hand for about five years. I tried a great many remedies, but found that while some of them checked it, none cured it permanently. Finally I tried Dr. Chase's Ointment, and in six weeks my hand was completely better. I would not do without a box of Dr. Chase's Ointment in the house if it cost $2 a box. I am giving my name to this firm so that it will get to those who suffer as I did."

Dr. Chase's Ointment, 60 cents a box, at all dealers or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto. Substitutes will only disappoint you. Insist on getting what you ask for.

The Farmers' Institute is being held at the Town Hall, Keene, on Wednesday afternoon and evening of this week.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Garbut of Lakefield spent the week end at the home of Miss Agnes Lumsden.

A number of our young people from Keene and vicinity attended the young men's ball at Lang on Friday night of last week and all report a most enjoyable time.

Mr. Alfred Fletcher was in Peterborough on Friday last on business.

Miss Gertrude Roche of Haileybury, is visiting at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Patrick Roche.

Mr. J. Stan Weir, of the Bank of Toronto staff, Hastings, was calling on friends in the village last Wednesday night.

On Thursday afternoon and evening of last week the new Keene Public school was opened to the public. Great credit is due to Miss McCann, the teacher, and the trustees. An elegant tea was served from 5 to 7.30 o'clock in the old school, followed by a splendid programme in the town hall, which was beautifully decorated for the occasion. The following is the programme:

God Save the King.
Chorus, O Canada, by the school.
Address of welcome—Rev. McEachern.
Violin solo—Miss Logan.
Song, 'I Want My Daddy'— Five girls.
Address—Dr. Harrison.
Recitation—Colin Comrie.
Instrumental solo—Isabell McCarthey.
Address—Colonel Johnston.
Chorus, 'The Sea is England's Glory'—The school.
Address—Dr. Waugh.
Duet, 'The Quarrel'—Olive McNevan, Dave McNevan.
Recitation, 'In a Belgian Garden'—Annie Burley.
Song, 'Cheer Up Little Darling'—Five girls.
Address—Professor Lees.
Dialogue—Mother Goose's party.
Address—Rev. Father McGuire.
Violin solo—Miss Logan.
Address—Rev. L. S. Wight.
Song, 'Good-bye Broadway'— School boys.
Chorus, 'We Are Part of Britain'—School.

A pleasing feature of the programme was when Mr. James McNeil, donor of $2,000 towards the building of the new school, was called to the platform, where he was met by James McCarthey and an address was read from the school as their appreciation for his gift, which was followed by little Firance Wedlock, who presented Mr. McNeil with a large bunch of roses.

Mr. McNeil responded in a very pleasing manner. The opening of the new school will long be remembered in this vicinity as a most pleasant event by both young and old.

Corporal Stanley Gamy of the 23rd Howitzer Battery, France, is home on furlough. Corp. Gamy is the son of Mr. John Gamy at Mathers Corners.

The anniversary services at the Methodist church on Sunday last were well attended. The collection for the day amounted to $105.

To the Electors of East Peterboro

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN:—

I believe no greater disaster could, at the present time, befall our country than the defeat of the Borden Union Administration at the polls on December 17th.

The Policy of this Administration is the speedy and continuous reinforcements of our Canadian troops on the battle-front; and the putting forth of all our National strength for the cause of civilization and freedom.

To carry out this Policy, a number of Canada's ablest Public men of vision—sinking for the present—all political differences now stand together—strong to battle for the right—united to WIN the WAR.

For over three years thousands of Loyal Canadians of many creeds and of different Nationalities, have stood shoulder to shoulder on the Battlefields of Europe, gallantly fighting a common foe, and sometimes standing; sometimes falling, have won for the name of Canada undying fame. Shall we, with all possible speed, send help to these, our heroic defenders now holding the battle-line or shall we, break faith with them as well as "with those who die"—delay—vote—while the enemy advances?

As a Union Candidate in this Riding, I am putting forth every effort to win East Peterborough to the support of the Borden Union Administration and if elected shall to the utmost of my ability support the same.

To this end I now earnestly solicit the co-operation and influence of every loyal, patriotic man and woman in East Peterborough.

I have the honor to be, faithfully yours,

J. A. SEXSMITH

Tells of Her Sorrows.

Before he brought his client down to this dramatic conclusion, Mr. Uterhart, with patient skill, had led her to recite to the jury many of the sorrows of her unhappy married life. She had brought out the fact that the young woman who was named as co-respondent in her successful divorce suit was Joan Sawyer, a well-known Broadway dancer, and that Miss Sawyer was the young woman whom little Jack had spoken of as "Miss Jo." I appeared for the first time that the man who first informed Blanca of the meritorious relations between her husband and the dancer was John Milholland, a brother of the late Mrs. Bossevian, who was Miss Mildred Milholland.

Before the defendant had begun proceedings for divorce, Mr. Milholland, according to her testimony, had informed her that everybody knew about his affair.

THE INVASION OF ITALY IS DEFINITELY HALTED

Hindenburg's Plans Frustrated by Determined Resistance of the Italians and Austro-Germans Are Reported To Be Digging Themselves In Along the Tagliamento River---French Forces Repulse German Raids.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

WASHINGTON, November 29.—Hindenburg's invasion of Italy has been definitely halted, and the Teuton troops are now digging in for the winter along the Tagliamento River, Rome cables to-day stated.

Italian civilians without distinction of age or sex, are being forced to work on entrenchments by the Austro-Germans.

As severe cold and heavy snow falls are impeding the enemy's communications there, the Italians have launched an offensive. The Italians are steadily improving their positions, stated the cables.

That Hindenburg is the guiding genius of the Austro-German drive into Italy, was learned from German prisoners. Having failed to sweep over the Venetian Plains, he is establishing another impregnable Hindenburg line along the Tagliamento, according to Rome reports.

Hindenburg's plans for breaking Italy's resistance as learned from prisoners, was frustrated by the Italians standing before Meletta and Gallio. His orders were for General Conrad's army to roll across Sette Comuni Plateau like an avalanche, while the armies of Krobatin and Von Bulow pouring over Brenta Valley surmounted the mountainous barriers and descended into the fertile Venetian Plains.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

ROME, November 29.—Heavy artillery fighting is in progress all along the front. But no further infantry actions of importance are reported by the War Office to-day. In the lower Piave River Italian batteries directed a destructive fire at enemy boats.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS (Official), November 29.—The Germans, after heavy bombardment, undertook extensive raids into French territory, but were repulsed with heavy losses. Our troops made raids bringing back prisoners.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, November 29.—No change in British positions on the Cambral front is reported in to-day's official communication. The Belgians repulsed a German attack.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, November 29.—Three French steamships of more than 1,600 tons and one of less than that tonnage, were sunk by submarines or mines during the week ending November 25. One fishing vessel was lost. Three steamers were attacked unsuccessfully.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, November 29.—Maximalist troops have occupied the Petrograd State Bank according to the Petrograd correspondent of the Daily Mail. He adds: "The people are going about their business in the most ordinary manner. Nobody is hurrying, and one would never imagine that another revolution is in progress. Scenes of political turmoils have now become epidemic here."

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

WITH THE ITALIAN ARMIES, November 29.—Fresh Austrian reinforcements hurried from the Riga front were vainly thrown into the battle to-day in an effort to break the Italian stonewall defense. The enemy has failed to gain a single yard during the past sixty hours. Repeated attacks have been thrown back with heavy losses. Fighting on the lower Piave has slowed up, the enemy apparently realizing his utter inability to effect a crossing there.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, November 29.—"The Italian Government will not hesitate energetically and fully to investigate the Italian disaster and fix the responsibility therefore," declared the Minister the the Treasury Nitti, to-day on his arrival for the inter-allied conference.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

BERLIN, via London, November 29.—British artillery yesterday was shelling the town of Cambrai, the objective of the latest British offensive on the Somme front in France, the German General Staff announced to-day.

CANADA MUST BE ECONOMICAL IN USE OF COAL

(Canadian Press Despatch).

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29.—The necessity of the practice of the strictest economy in the use of coal in Canada is emphasized in a communication forwarded to the Dominion Fuel Controller by the fuel administration here to-day, calling attention to the fact that the most intensive kind of a coal conservation movement is under way in this country. The fuel administration asked Eastern Canada to adopt a similar method to safeguard its supply, which is derived chiefly from the United States.

THANKSGIVING DAY CELEBRATED IN UNITED STATES

(Canadian Press Despatch).

NEW YORK, Nov. 29.—Thanksgiving Day was observed with the customary ceremonies, services and festivities to-day throughout the United States.

PRINCE ALBERT OPERATED ON

(Specail to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

LONDON, Nov. 29.—Prince Albert, second son of King George, suffered a relapse and has been operated on with satisfatcory results, an official court bulletin announced to-day. His condition was described as "satisfactory."

Prince Albert is an officer in the British navy. He has been ailing ever since early in the war. On August 28 he was removed ashore suffering from appendicitis, and on September 9 was operated upon at Aberdeen for that ailment. He has been on duty intermittently since then. The prince is nearly 23 years old.

Veterans To Furnish A Guard Of Honour

The members of the Great War Veterans Association will furnish a guard of honour for Premier Borden to-morrow night. All Veterans are asked to parade at the Barrie Building at 7.15 o'clock to-morrow night in uniform. A full attendance is requested. There will be seats on the paltform for the Veterans.

HEAVY SENTENCE FOR DEFAULTER GIVEN AT OTTAWA

Harold Morris, Civil Service Employee Who Refused to Register is Sentenced to Thirty Months in the Penitentiary

WAS GIVEN A CHANCE

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

OTTAWA, Nov. 29.—Harold Morris, a Civil Service employee, was sentenced to two and a half years in the penitentiary this morning for refusing to register under the Military Service Act. Two weeks ago he defied the law and was given two weeks to think it over. This morning he was again defiant with the above results.

This is believed to be the first severe sentence under the Military Service Act for disobedience of the terms of this legislation.

ENTERTAINED AT RECEPTION

The executors and hostesses of the representatives who are in the city to attend the meeting of the executive of the National Council of Women, were the guests last night of the sub-executive of the Council at an informal reception held in the Y.W.C.A. green room after the day's meetings, which are closed alike to the public and press.

Interesting Speeches.

Interesting speeches were made by Professor Carrie Dereck of Montreal, and Mrs. L. A. Hamilton, Toronto.

Mrs. Hamilton spoke of the empty argument of politicians to the effect that conscription robs the farm. She explained women who have already risen to the occasions they have, could also release the farmer. In this branch of industry women have been tried and found not wanting. That to say a woman could not pitch hay is an argument which will not hold water, as instead of one load two could be made, making the work take perhaps longer, but accomplishing the same end. She also spoke of the vast number of men employed in such positions as post office work, who could be released. Professor Dereck explained the constitution of the National Council of Women. She also spoke of the splendid manner in which women have developed during the last century in taking an active interest in national life building up and strong and intelligent auxiliaries to men's work.

Musical Programme.

A musical programme, at which Miss Florence Scott rendered a much appreciated solo and Miss Agnes Logan piano solos, was given.

93RD MEN ARE KILLED

Pte. Sherwood Althouse, of Havelock and J. E. Warner, of Hastings, Have Met Death in Action

TO-DAY'S MILITARY NEWS

KILLED IN ACTION.

Pte. Sherwood Althouse, formerly of the 93rd Battalion, Havelock.

Pte. J. E. Warner, formerly of the 93rd Battalion, Hastings.

WOUNDED.

Pte. Wellington Trew, formerly of the 93rd Battalion, Bridgenorth.

Pte. A. R. Jackson, Services, Peterborough.

PTE. S. ALTHOUSE.

Pte. Sherwood Althouse, who enlisted in the Havelock platoon of the 93rd Peterborough County Battalion in March, 1916, is officially reported killed in action. Pte. Althouse went overseas as a member of D Company, under Capt. Neilson, and was transferred to a Canadian infantry battalion in France. He was well known in Havelock district, and the news of his death will bring grief to a large circle of friends.

PTE. J. E. WARNER.

Another former member of the 93rd Battalion has made the supreme sacrifice in France in the person of Pte. James Edgar Warner, of Hastings, who is officially reported killed in action. Pte. Warner enlisted here in December, 1915, with the 93rd, and after going overseas with Lieut.-Col. Johnston's battalion, went to France in a draft to another Canadian infantry unit.

PTE. WELLINGTON TREW.

Pte. Wellington Trew, a Bridgenorth member of the 93rd Battalion, is officially reported wounded, his name appearing in to-day's official list from Ottawa. Pte. Trew enlisted in the Peterborough County Battalion early in 1916.

PTE. A. R. JACKSON.

Pte. A. R. Jackson, of Peterborough, is officially reported wounded to-day. He was with the Army Service Corps.

ADMITTED TO HOSPITAL.

Mrs. Mabel Wilford, 59 Olive Ave., has received notice that her husband, Sergt.-Major Harry Wilford, is officially reported admitted to the Royal Victoria Hospital, Netley, on 19th November.

A LETTER FROM THE FRONT.

Mrs. I. Darrah has received the following interesting letter from her son Pte. Dave Darrah, of the Canadian Mounted Rifles:

B.E.F., FRANCE, 3-11-'17.

My Dear Mother,—Just a few lines once again to let you know that I am still alive and well, and trust that these few lines will find you all enjoying the same good health.

There's no doubt you will think that something has happened to me, but so far I am O.K. You will likely see by this time where the Canadians had another cutting up, and it is true mother, and it was the worst they ever got since the first contingent landed in France. You will see by the papers that I am right. I was in the battle, myself, and believe me I never witnessed anything like it before. The Second Day of June battle, the Somme battle and Vimy Ridge had nothing on it at all. I was into it for seven days and nights with very little sleep, and there were more shells flying in that length of time than I ever saw before, and believe me I have seen a good many. I was expecting at every minute to meet my doom, but it did not come, thank God; but many a poor man died. I had two men on my right and two on my left killed with a shell and it never hit me at all. There were two men on my gun who were hit standing beside me. The trench was blown in and buried two others; it missed me but gave me a good shaking up. How my nerves stand the noise I don't know, but it is certainly a God-send that I stand it.

Archie Laplante was killed that time and several other boys from home. Jack Copperthwaite is all right; I saw him the night before the attack, and I saw him to-day, so he is all O. K. I was talking to Harry Clare the night before the attack, but I have not seen him since, but will ask to-morrow. Roy and Bill Ga-

Germans Consent To Parley For Armistice With Russians

Plenipotentiaries From Both Sides Will Confer at a Meeting on Sunday—Bolsheviki Movement is Rapidly Gaining Ground in Russia

LENINE MAKES THREAT

(Special to the Toronto Star and the Peterborough Examiner).

PETROGRAD, Nov. 28 (Via London, Nov. 29).—Nikolai Lenine, partner with Leon Trotsky, in the leadership of the Bolsheviki Government, to-day openly threatened to declare Russia's obligations and debts to other nations invalid unless those nations accepted the Bolsheviki proposals for a general armistice of all belligerents. The very last vestige of support of former Premier Kerensky in the capital vanished when the doubtful elements in the garrison decided to support the Military Revolutionary Committee. The Bolsheviki leaders to-day issued a formal proclamation to the armies, urging them to send delegates to the December 2 Food Conference. From Moscow to-day it was reported that soldiers are returning home from the fronts in vast numbers. Of 11,000 formerly stationed at Khodynka barracks, it was asserted that only 550 remain, and at Khamovniki barracks seven hundred out of 18,000. The entire Fifth Russian Army has decided to parley with the Germans on peace, it was reported to-day, but other forces are as yet undecided.

GERMANY CONSENTS.

Germany's commissioners in chief have consented to negotiate an armistice with Russia over the entire front, according to an announcement by the Bolsheviki Commander-in-Chief, Ensign Krylenko, to-day. Krylenko announced that his envoys "had returned from the German lines bearing the German Commander-in-Chief's official consent to negotiate an armistice over all the Russian front." At a meeting on Sunday, plenipotentiaries from both sides will confer. The Germans, it was stated, will be represented by the north army commander. Krylenko's envoys, he said, entered the German lines on the front of the Russian Fifth Army. Immediately upon the start of negotiations, Krylenko ordered an immediate cessation of all fighting.

COMPROMISE EFFORT FAILS.

LONDON, Nov. 29.—The failure of Russian moderate Socialist plans for a compromise Government seemed apparent from the Russian despatches to-day. It was apparently established that the Moderates had determined to throw in their lot with the Maximalists. From various sources to-day it appeared that the Bolsheviki movement was rapidly gaining ground. Yesterday despatches gave every indication that the Moderate plan for a coalition of all Russian parties in a firm Government was well under way. Apparently, however, the Cadets found sentiment too overwhelmingly pro-Bolsheviki at the front for them to succeed.

General Kaledine, Hettman of the Cossacks, alone seems to be heading any formidable party of opposition to the Bolsheviki. He is reported to control in south-east Russia. Negotiations for the Bolsheviki armistice are progressing between emissaries

SHORTAGE OF FOOD THE GREAT DANGER CONFRONTING THE ALLIES

"Highest and Most Patriotic Duty That the Farmers of South Monaghan Can Perform is to Strain Every Nerve to Produce the Greatest Quantity of Food Stuffs That They Possibly Can" Mr. Hall Tells Big Audience at Centreville.

Mr. R. R. Hall addressed a large meeting of the electors of South Monaghan at Centreville Sunday school hall last evening over which Mr. McRoberts presided at chairman.

During the course of his address Mr. Hall pointed out that the great danger which confronted the Allies was the shortage of food to feed the men at the front and to feed the civil population of Great Britain, France and Italy.

The British Government sent representatives to both Canada and the United States to urge upon both Governments the absolute necessity of producing at least ten million tons of food stuffs consisting of wheat, meats and fats, upon the receipt of which the whole success of the Allies depended and the non-receipt of which would certainly result in victory "slipping from their united grasp."

The Highest Duty.

"The highest and most patriotic duty," said Mr. Hall, "that the farmers of South Monaghan can perform in the best interests of Canada and her allies is to strain every nerve to produce during this coming year the greatest quantity of foodstuffs that they possibly can and thereby help fill the orders for cereals and meats which the British statesmen fervently pray that we may send to them.

"I would strongly advise every one present to go to Millbrook and hear Sir Robert Borden and the Hon. Wesley Rowell for themselves, or if they cannot go to Millbrook then come to Peterborough and hear them speak in Peterborough and you will find that neither Sir Robert Borden nor the Hon. Wesley Rowell will propound any policy that will look forward to the production of grain and meat stuffs during the coming year on a large and extensive scale. Neither one of these men will point out to you as practical farmers what steps they are actually taking to produce in this country 200,000,000 bushels more wheat than we did last year and to produce 300,000,000 bushels of oats more than Canada did last year, nor will they show what steps they propose to take to produce double the quantity of meat stuffs during the coming year than Canada did last year.

And yet the British statesmen have appealed to Sir Robert Borden for food to feed the British people, but he neglects to take any steps whatever to increase production.

Borden's Neglect.

The neglect of Sir Robert Borden to lend Government aid on an extensive scale is a double curse. It will be a curse to the British people to be deprived of the food they require to keep them from starvation and it will be a curse to our people who live in our cities and towns to go hungry through Borden's neglect.

There is no one in the Dominion of Canada more anxious to win this war than I am. To win this war I believe that we should co-operate with the British Government and ask them for their advice how Canada can best serve. If Great Britain says she must have men, for God's sake let us send the men at once without waiting for a year to meet her demands. If Great Britain says she wants food, then for God's sake let us take immediate steps to produce the food which Great Britain demands.

I pray you to assist in saving the Government of this country from the grafters, parasites and profiteers who are hanging round Sir Robert Borden and in whose hands he has been held during this last five years. These grafters, parasites and profiteers have for three years climbed over his Government, possessing it, robbed the people and, like the greedy Comorant, are feeding on the decay of our national resources.

Separation Allowance Increased

Reform Urged By Great War Veterans Has Been Adopted

(Special to the Toronto Star and Peterborough Examiner)

OTTAWA, Nov. 29.—The Government has passed an Order-in-Council adding an increase of $5 a month to the separation allowance which is given to the wives and other dependents of soldiers on service. The separation allowance will hereafter be $25 a month, which will be paid to wives, to widowed mothers, and mothers where the husband is totally incapacitated from giving support and where the soldier was the only support and to the children of widowed soldiers. This increase is a recognition of the higher cost of living, and has been urged by the Great War Veterans' Association.

FREE SPEECH.

No decent democratic Canadian will excuse the denial of free speech —the boast of British freedom. A few roughs and rowdies howling down Premier Borden at Kitchener, does not commit Canada to the denial of free speech. Premier Borden said the disturbance was caused by "roughs," and such persons are not particular in their ways of resenting what is regarded as unfair treatment.

Reprisal is a human instinct. Interruption of speakers, either in Ontario or Quebec, cannot be defended as an act; it is contrary to the British ideals, but the provocation to the unthinking must be taken into account. Sir Wilfrid Laurier, speaking at Ottawa, on Tuesday night, said:

"I disapprove of any interference with free speech, and I am sorry that the Prime Minister was not allowed to speak at Kitchener the other day. I want to have given to him every privilege that is due to his rank, due to the position he occupies, and due also to the efforts he is making in support of a bad cause. I do not approve of any interference with free speech anywhere. The gag is the gag whether it is applied by a turbulent crowd in public meeting or whether it is approved in parliament by the obedient majority of a cold-blooded government."

There we have the excuse, if not the justification, the incitement to denial of free speech. The parliamentary majority supporting Sir Robert Borden, or their friends, should not complain if the unthinking rabble should apply to Sir Robert Borden a variant of the official denial of free speech which he imposed upon the elected representatives of the people in Parliament. The present Franchise Act, enacted before a Union government was formed, and designed to give the Borden government an unfair advantage in appeal to the people, was forced through Parliament by the application of the gag—the closure—that prevented full discussion, denied freed speech to the people's representatives.

We cannot expect the fountain to risch igher than its source, and we can't expect Sir Robert Borden's "roughs and toughs" element of the electorate to show more respect for free speech than the government of the country, which the electors collectively create. As Sir Wilfrid Laurier says, "the gag is the gag, whether it is applied by a turbulent crowd at a public meeting or whether it is approved in parliament by the obedient majority of a cold-blooded government."

Even in war time and election time you should do your Christmas shopping early, including a Victory Bond.

PATRONIZING AND PROMISING.

Mr. Burnham, the Borden Union Government candidate, has not been seriously indicted as a statesman, but he has the characteristics of the politician that kow-tows to a certain vote —at election time particularly. He has sent a letter to the papers patronisingly offering to allow Labour to raise its humble voice at the Borden meeting.

Mr. Burnham properly says—(at election time)—that "the tremendous part played by Labour in the present war both at home and abroad would suggest that any observations addressed by Labour to the people or the government would receive the attention which they call for."

Would they? If Labour should be respectfully heard and heeded at the Borden meeting it would constitute a startling precedent. In consideration of the fact that Labour, organised and otherwise, has provided the bulk of the soldiers so splendidly fighting at the front, so splendidly sacrificing; so splendidly suffering wounds and death; that Labour at home has kept the big and little guns fed with munitions; that Labour has kept the vast machinery of Canada's war work going; and has in all ways showed that it is the indispensable, the king-pin element, in all our national war activities, it should receive, what it has not received, adequate government recognition.

One would have thought that with facts existing, Labour would be the prime favourite with the government. Yet Labour occupies only a secondary place in the Cabinet—a moribund department, presided over by a lawyer. The "Big Interests" had the Finance Department administered to their liking; the food profiteers were tenderly sheltered; a group of big interests had a "rush" act of parliament enacted to help them realize the money they had pledged to Bill and Dan—about fifty times over.

When the so-called Union government was formed, Labour was to be represented in its membership. That promise has not been kept. But Sir Robert Borden, speaking at London, said:

"We (the government) have not completed our arrangements for the representation of organized Labour in the government. We hope when it is completed organized Labour will have good representation."

If the Borden government had ever given Labour a fair chance, such a promise would be vague and misty enough. But when it has ignored the interests of Labour, or given it the most perfunctory attention, such a promise is little short of insulting in its condescending air of patronage.

And was even this a promise in good faith? In his election address, Hon. Mr. Crothers, who was made Minister of Labour in the Union government, makes a statement directly at variance with the Premer's promise. He said ,speaking as Minister of Labour:

"I have decided to stand at my post; if the electors of West Elgin so desire."

How will Labour have a "good representation in the Cabinet," with Mr. Crothers, who has "determined to stand at his post" in the way?

Let Labour and the other electors, support Mr. Borden, and help him to power, and the fulfilment of his fine promises will, like the repentance of Felix, be deferred to "a more convenient season."

Yet we have a politician patronizingly informing Peterborough Labour that if t is good and comes to the Borden meeting it will be allowed its little say.

Labour does things, but it doesn't like to be "done."

SHIPPING HEADS THE LINE.

On this page is found an article from the Globe effectively emphasizing the opportunity the war and its accompaniments present to Canada to develop the important interest of shipping. It is founded upon an article in the London Chronicle, which shows that shipping is the "supreme allied issue"

The Union Government does not seem to think that this is the great issue. It insists that men for fighting is the only thing that is vitally important; but it does not overshadow everything else. The Minister of Militia declares that no matter what government is elected, Canada will not withdraw from the war even if we do not send another man. Even at this, to keep Canada in the war, in the most effective way, she must supply food by increased production, and do her part to furnish ships to carry supplies to the points needed.

The Globe properly calls upon the government to implement its vague promises of action to encourage shipbuilding by action — "preparation should be made at once"—"shipbuilding should have a first place in the national programme."

It hasn't that place now for very good reason. The Borden government in its new form cannot be expected to forget in a moment its hostility to shipbuilding in Canada. In 1910, the now much berated Laurier, put on the statute books one of the most important and potentially productive measures ever enacted in Canada—an act to provide for the building of a Canadian navy—to be built in Canada, "of," as Mr. Borden said, "our own material, by our own skill, by our own workmen."

But the Nationalists, headed by Mr. Bourassa, opposed the Laurier Naval Act tooth and nail. They said it meant conscription of Quebecers to be "disembowelled on British ships," and the Nationalists set out to "kill Laurier" on the head of it. Mr. Borden, being also politically anxious to "kill Laurier," joined hands with the truculent Nationalists and in addition to helping the Nationalist killers with Conservative election funds, found grace in their sight by denouncing the Canadian navy idea, which involved men as well as ships, and substituted his dreadnoughts, which only involved the expenditure of good Canadian money, by workmen outside of Canada. But it pleased the Nationalists because it didn't demand Canadian manhood, and was a knife between Laurier's ribs.

So Mr. Borden junked the idea and act of a Canadian navy, pigeonholed the plans and tenders that came into his possession when he got power, and

Shipbuilding Spells Duty And Opportunity For Canada

"When the war is over Great Britain will have to start anew to restore its vast trade throughout the world," is the statement of Mr. Robert Donald, Editor of The London Daily Chronicle, in his cable to the Globe, yesterday. He emphasizes the point that "the great need of the Allies at the present moment is ships, and still more ships." Coincident with Mr. Donald's message the cables carried the story of a conference between British employers and workmen engaged in shipbuilding and Premier Lloyd George—a conference to devise the best means of securing the greatest possible output of new ships.

The cables spell Opportunity for Canada. This Dominion, with its great coast lines and natural resources, has exceptional facilities for establishment on a large and permanent scale the industry of shipbuilding. Its huge timber belts, its rich mining fields, its big steel plants, all lend themselves to successful development of the enterprise of helping to restore the merchant marine of the Empire. Here is a call to industrial initiative and practical patriotism.

The Union Government is pledged in its first message to the Canadian people to "the encouragement and development of the shipbuilding industry and the establishment of steam ship lines upon both oceans and upon the Great Lakes." During the past two years Hon. Frank B. Carvell, Mr. Fred F. Pardee, Hon. William Pugsley, and other public men in Parliament have persistently but unsuccessfully urged this course on the late Conservative Administration. They have more influence with the new Union Government, and should maintain their efforts to see to it that the pledge given is carried out in its entirety.

There should not be delay. Modern ocean-going shipbuilding is really a new industry for Canada, but it is one which the country is well equipped to undertake. Preparation should be made at once. The Government should give the leadership promised. The reconstruction period which must follow the conclusion of the war, and the return of thousands of citizen soldiery from the fighting fields, will necessarily witness many industrial readjustments. There will be special opportunity for the development of new lines of enterprise and activity, and an army of sturdy young manhood will be seeking openings for constructive endeavour. So far as possible Canada should be ready for them.

Shipbuilding should have a first place in the national programme. —The Globe.

shipbuilding in Canada, as far as government responsibility was concerned, was killed as dead as a door nail.

If Sir Wilfrid Laurier's plans for a navy had been carried out, we should have had the bulk of a Canadian navy now on the seas, and should have had the ship yards and the impetus to ocean-going shipbuilding that would have saved the Globe the necessity of telling the government that "preparations should at once be made." Canada would have been equipped for helping supply what the London Chronicle calls the "supreme allied need"—shipping.

Read the Globe's article and parallel it with its present enthusiastic attitude towards the Borden (Union) Government's destructive policy, that killed the shipbuilding spirit in Canada, and made it necessary seven years after the killing—to eloquently appeal to the same government to "boost" shipbuilding—"to make preparations at once," and eloquently indicate Canada's opportunity and equipment, as thus:

"This Dominion with its great coast lines and national resources * * * its huge timber belts, its rich mining fields, its big steel plants, all lend themselves to the successful development of the enterprise of helping restore the merchant marine of the Empire. Here is a call to industrial (and government) initiative and practical patriotism."

What precious time—seven years—has been lost by the Borden axing of shipbuilding, by his craven surrender to the Nationalists to get power and keep power! It will take time, cost money—more money—to repair the damage of this deplorable blunder, which in its outcome of results, becomes very like a crime.

A western Board of Trade threatens Kitchener with an organized boycott of its manufacturers, unless it elects a Union candidate. The Kaiser could not beat that.

Coal Obtainable It Is Stated But At Higher Price

From information that has been obtained it looks as if the coal situation in Peterborough was not just as serene as appears on the surface, and by those who know the state of affairs, it is stated unless it is relieved, the first severe drop in the thermometer during the next two or three weeks, will find a great many people without coal and without any reserve or emergency stock in the city to protect them. The city is in the coal business this year, and it has distributed quite a good deal of coal, but is it now in a position to assist the householder who is right up against it. Every coal dealer in the city owes it to the public to do his best to provide for their wants, and if coal can be had, it is up to him to get it.

Canada has a fuel controller and the profits of the coal dealer are controlled. It is stated on good authority that coal can be had on application to the controller at a purchase price approved of by him, and it is felt in the city that the dealers should put themselves in the position of being able to take care of their customers. If coal is obtained now it is quite natural to expect that it will be up, but it must be sold at a price passed on by the fuel controller.

The situation seems to be this. All the coal dealers in the city should put in their normal supply. This apparently has not been done by all of them. Coal can be obtained if application is made to the fuel controller, but it is evident it cannot be sold at $10.00 and let the dealer out, and the dealer is naturally afraid of the public criticism that would come to him on selling coal at an advance over present prices. But coal will have to be bought by some one, and sold at the approved prices by the fuel controller, or those who need it do without and suffer.

The coal dealers owe a service to the public of the city, and the city should have on hand a supply of coal for an emergency.

AMERICA MUST UNITE ALLIES TO PREVENT SPREAD OF REVOLUTION

Winston Churchill, Home From Europe, Says United States Must Supply Material. Leadership and Democratic Co-ordination For Real Victory

NEW YORK, Nov. 28.—Winston Churchill, the American author, returned yesterday from a two months' visit to the British and French fronts at the invitation of the Allies, with the firm conviction that the war could only be won by the aid of the United States, which must supply material, leadership, and democratic co-ordination among the Allies.

Unless this was accomplished, Mr. Churchill asserted, the war would end in chaos, and the revolution which began in Russia would spread to France, Italy and Great Britain, through the evolution of syndicalism, which had been going on in those countries gradually for some time. Germany, too, would have a revolution, he said, but in her case it would be a bloody one, as the Junkers would die hard and fight for their privileges to the last ditch.

"The situation is a critical one," Mr. Churchill said in an interview at the Ritz-Carlton, "and the question for Washington is the taking up and supplying of the whole thing which must be done if a sane democratic solution of the war is to be arrived at. Germany is beaten on the Western front now, and if that was all there was to the war the victory would be won; but there is far more than that to be done before peace can be secured.

"After studying conditions carefully, I have arrived at the conclusion that the German submarine is still the chief factor in the war, because the Allies will depend on American troops and stores, ammunition and equipment which must be carried safely across 3,000 miles or more of water.

CAMPAIGN AGAINST U-BOATS

"Lloyd George spoke optimistically of the methods and results of the attacks made by the Allies on the U-boats. At that time the aeroplanes, which are a big factor in fighting the submarines, had all been withdrawn from Flamborough Head on the east coast to protect London from the raiders, so the enemy took advantage of the fact to sink ships in the North Sea.

"The destroyers co-operate with the aeroplanes in attacking the underseas ing-craft, and the depth bombs have proved to be of great aid in destruction, or driving them to the surface. In this respect the United States destroyers have won the esteem and admiration of both British and French naval officers by the initiative of their commanders and their dash in time of emergency. We are very fortunate in having such an able naval officer as Rear Admiral Sims, who has the confidence of the allied Governments in whatever he does.

"America stands for disinterestedness with the Allies, and it is in her power to establish democratic co-ordination, and it must be done immediately if Germany is to be beaten. The Allies in Europe have had too many internal adjustments to make, and could not give the time they ought to have given to establish a combined offensive. The revolution in Russia is the keynote of an advance of labour in Europe, which, if not guided, will be a very serious thing. Great Britain and France can hold the lines until the United States is ready to go into the front line of trenches in divisions.

"The German junkers are so grim in their determination not to let labour have the lead in Germany that they sacrifice their lives to impress this on the people. Recently the officers in charge of 400 German soldiers in one of the trenches near Cambrai stopped their men from surrendering at the point of the pistol, which resulted in them all being burned to death. The officers are willing to die for this. All they care for is that their class shall remain on top.

PERSHING'S MEN OF RIGHT KIND.

"We have got the right kind of troops in France. They have the dogged determination of the British and the flexibility of the American, which makes them more valuable still. Now comes the question of training the right kind of officers to lead these men properly. Then men have had to suffer in France through uncomfortable billets and also on account of their equipment not arriving with them. They were wet and cold in the heavy rains, but there was no squall-

HERE'S ANOTHER SALE

Of Great Interest to the Ladies —Astonishing Bargains at the Toronto Ladies' Tailoring Coy's Fire Sale

The people of Peterborough have several striking opportunities just now to secure in certain stores, merchandise at prices which recall the days before the war. Sales of special significance are being held which ought to help reduce present personal living expenses. Now comes the news of the Toronto Ladies' Tailoring Company, the well known firm on the east corner of Brock and George streets, whose stock and premises was visited by fire about a week ago.

The advertised prices of this sale, which starts to-morrow morning at 9.30 are calculated to startle the ladies, who are specially interested in it. Having secured a very satisfactory settlement of their claims by the fire, this firm are putting on an unreserved sale of their entire stock, damaged and undamaged, in order to make a complete clearance.

Read the announcement on another page and see for yourself to-morrow morning at 9.30.

MUSIC IN THE HOME

WHEN IS A TOWN MUSICAL?

If in a town there are six or eight persons capable of playing the organ at church; if there are a couple of resident music teachers each with a class of ten or so pupils studying music because fond parents are giving them the advantage of "a few quarters;" if there is a periodical concert that analyzes fifty per cent. comedian, thirty per cent. acting, and twenty per cent. music; if a subscription list goes around every third year to reorganize the band—is that a musical town?

Be your answer what it may there is room for improvement in every town, and all that is needed is for the right persons to bestir themselves and set the ball a-rolling. An idea of what is possible may be gathered from the musical activities of a little town in Kansas with 2,000 inhabitants.

Each year there is given in this town a performance of Handel's Messiah with eminent soloists and a chorus, native to the town of six hundred voices. In addition they keep up a band, a symphony orchestra of 60, a male chorus and a children's chorus. Each year a week's festival of music is given to which go music lovers from a distance. At the last festival no less than sixteen separate programmes were given during the week including performances of the Messiah; and Ysaye the violinst appeared with Galli-Curci, and other soloists.

Aim high is a good motto. Is this town's accomplishment too high an aim for others?

ONE CHURCH AND ITS MUSIC.

In the course of a recent address a speaker whose name carries weight, made this statement: "We have simply gone on the rocks with our individualism." While this was not spoken in connection with any phase of music it has a bearing on music.

Take the case of church music. In a certain congregation the minister was almost invariably guided by his own favorite music. The music committee took no interest at all in the activities of the choir. The old members wanted to keep to the old ways, the old tunes and the old anthems. The newer members who recently came from other districts thought the music in this church should be like it was in their former church home.

In the choir itself the soprano viewed everything from the soprano's standpoint. The bass soloist judged all music by the bass part and so on. The organist and conductor stood alone. His ideals soared above the mere satisfying of the management that their annual grant of $100 for music was well expended. He saw that music in itself has no power to change the heart and the life. Its part in the church service is to induce a frame of mind that will be open to the highest influences.

Now this individualism ought to go by the board. There should be a uniting to work to one ideal, all led by one chief principle. John Adcock puts it very nicely in the opening chapters of his little book called "The Choirmaster." He says: "Although music may be and often is the handmaid of religion, it is just as ready to be and often is the handmaid of irreligion. It is absolutely indifferent, a mere tool equally serviceable for good or evil. It follows then that the performance and enjoyment of music dissociated from ennobling thoughts and sentiments, cannot be called worship. At best the music of the Church is only a means to an end, and that end is, or ought to be the worship of God and the promotion of personal and practical religion. Everything that subserves this purpose is right; everything that subverts it is wrong. Now music — good music—associated with beautiful and sacred words, well and devoutly rendered, is almost universally accepted as a means of grace and one of the chief delights of public worship. What we want then, is the music of worship, not the worship of music."

DOES A MUSICIAN "PLAY" OR "WORK?"

A French Canadian critic points out the curious fact that in all civilized languages an instrumentalist works by "playing." The word is the same as that which is used to designate the activities of a child. Here is an eloquent testimony to the contempt in which music was held for many generations. Even to-day, says this critic, in the minds of the ignorant, an instrumentalist never works; he plays, he amuses himself like a ten-year-old child. For the hearer music may be a pastime but it is also a pastime to visit a picture gallery or go to a theatre. But it will never occur to those interested in painting or the drama that the painter, the sculptor or the actor follows his profession only for the amusement he gets out of it. No one would ever think of asking a painter to give away a collection of works for the profit of some good cause, however meritorious, particularly if all others concerned in it were being paid. But the musician is expected to give away his talent, because it is understood, by fault of the language, of all languages, that his business is to amuse himself and to give his services free.

Continuing, the writer says: "No. The musician works. What is for others an amusement is for him a profession like any other profession. No more than a lawyer, a doctor, an engineer, should he be called upon to give for nothing what has cost him a lifetime of work, and of the kind of work that makes heavy demands upon brain, nerve and muscle. Like all who work, the musician has a right to a just compensation. If I insist upon this point it is because the thought of seeing in the musician only an entertainer is firmly anchored in the minds of people who in other respects think with sanity and vigor."

"The argument is well timed and sound. At the same time it must not be understood that professional musicians in any part of Canada look upon their art as a mere money-getter. If they did so they would not be artists. All work is play to the man who has the spirit of a good workman, but for all that the laborer is worthy of his hire.

WILL WOMEN ORGANISTS COME HERE?

Word comes from England and is loudly echoed on this continent that there is a great demand for women organists. What this means can only be appreciated when one takes into consideration the fact that for years it has almost amounted to the strength of tradition that the woman's place was at the piano, the violin, the harp and any and all of the other instruments, but never, never, at the organ; that is, the organ of any note. The excuse given in the majority of cases where this opposition was shown was that a woman was not strong enough, that her wrists were too feeble to efficiently master the workings of the king of musical instruments—the pipe organ. The war has proven, however, that the old song of men working and women weeping is false and that the latter can take her place in the industrial and art fields at the side of the best of men.

At any rate the churches of England and France are now eagerly holding out their hands to those women who in spite of all opposition have mastered the intricacies of the organ. The remuneration given them is on a par with that previously given to the men similarly engaged and in many cases where the need is great and the choice limited, even greater.

According to prominent church dignitaries in New York the time is not very far distant when the United States, too, will show a dearth of men organists. Already some of the best known of them have either been drafted into or have voluntarily joined the army and will be allowed to prove their strength and nimbleness of wrist in the handling of a gun and the throwing of a hand grenade. Be that as it may the fat remains that the world at large will soon be in a position to judge whether the weaker, feebler woman can show as keen an appreciation of the music of Bach, Handel or Haydn, and whether her interpretation of the great masters is any less beautiful or powerful than a man's. That there will be a difference is to be expected but it is this difference which will make the innovation an interesting one.

of both sides, and all fighting has ceased on all fronts.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29.—Out of the maze of Russian complications there emerged to-day word of renewed trouble at Petrograd with the hint of another revolution. What proportions the movement assumed was a matter of conjecture, although there are early reports telling of firing, the wounding of several persons, and an epidemic of political turmoil. No official message has come on the outbreak. Like other Entente Allies, the United States Government is reserving a formal expression of its attitude toward the Bolsheviki regime, pending further developments, and its concern is focussed largely on the conference set for next Sunday between the Bolsheviki leaders and the Germans regarding an armistice and peace.

A HEAVY LOSS.

(Special to the Toronto Star and the Peterborough Examiner).

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29. — The cancellation of Russian war debts to the United States would mean sweeping aside a bill of nearly $160,000,000. This amount, already paid out of an authorization of $325,000,000, has been expended in the United States, chiefly in paying munition debts which otherwise might have gone by board. American Government officials have held that it was wise to give Russia support in recent months, because of her sore straits, particularly because some American industries would have suffered severely had their Russian bills not been paid. Congressmen have manifested a desposition recently to inquire into Russian loans and to oppose further disposition of funds until Russia appears stable.

TRIBUNAL No. 275

COURT HOUSE

Judge Huycke, Police Magistrate Dumble, Members Lt.-Col. E. B. Clegg, Military Representative

Joseph Detcher, 689 Harvey Street an A2 man, was sent up for further medical examination. The doctors confirmed their original finding, and Detcher's claim was disallowed.

Temporary Exemption.

John J. Kylie, 580 Downie Street, boot and shoe merchant, was exempted until 1st of March next. The applicant was advised to get a capable girl or a man ineligible for military service to look after the clerical work of the business.

Frederick Goselin, 51 Crescent St., was exempted until 1st March next.

Joseph Coughlin, R.R. No. 9, was exempted as a farmer. Norman B. Ballantyne was also exempted as a farmer; and the claim of Frank Ballantyne, a brother, was disallowed.

Frank Kylie, 580 Downie Street, James L. Goselin, 51 Crescent Street Reginald Hanes, 39 Lafayette Ave. Alban C. Wolff, 452 Donegal Street Vincent Sullivan, 83 Robinson Street Henry Lush, an inspector, residing at the American Hotel, and George H. Goodfellow, a farmer, all E men were exempted until Class E is called.

David Ahern, 423 Downie Street Joseph W. Deyell, farmer, and Albert G. Cooke, 282 Aylmer Street, all B men, were exempted until B Class men are required.

Frederick W. Hartshorn, 485 Patterson Street, was placed in Class II.

Louis Barrett, 75 Park Street, Emmet Faux, 531 Roger Street, George Faux, 531 Roger Street, Alexander Graham, R. R. No. 7, Thomas Hamilton, 2 Concession Street, William and A. Armstrong, 281 Prince Street, all E men, were exempted until E category men are required.

Claim Disallowed.

Exemption was refused William Bernard Rose, a toolmaker, residing at 229 Princess Street, who on Tuesday appeared before the Tribunal in the role of a conscientious objector..

Albert E. Lumley, 188 Reid Street a chauffeur, was exempted until the 1st of May next.

John O. Kenneally, 466 Patterson Street, an A2 man, was placed in Class II.

John J. Leahy and Bartholomew Leahy, both farmers, were exempted until they cease to be employed as farmers.

Percy McFadden, a farmer, was exempted until he ceases to be employed as a farmer.

Robert K. Harstone, 565 Water Street, and Bert Crofts, 309 Burnham Street, both C men, were exempted until C category men are required.

Allan McIlmoyle, 296 King Street, and Herbert Peoples, 342 Water Street, both B men, were exempted until B men are required.

Henry Braun Rogers, 271 William Street, was placed in E category by the Medical Board, and will be exempted until E Class is called.

Eugene Fitzgerald, who yesterday appeared before the tribunal with an "A2" medical history sheet, had his medical rating changed to "E." Fitzgerald was exempted until "E" class men are required.

"Not Worth Fighting For."

Timothy P. Bowler, who is employed with Arthur Blodgett, a Smith township farmer, claimed exemption on the grounds that his work was of national importance.

"Where were you born?" asked Judge Huycke.

"In England," replied applicant.

"Don't you want to go back and fight for the old land?" continued the Judge.

"No, I do not. I have seen enough of it," said Bowler.

"Is it not worth fighting for?" added His Honour.

"No," replied Bowler.

Judge Huycke— "Is Canada worth fighting for?"

Bowler—"In some ways it is and in other ways it is not."

Bowler's employer made a strong plea for the applicant's exemption. "If I was in a postion to go I would go quick," said Mr. Blodgett. "If you could exempt him for the time being," suggested Blodgett.

"What do you mean by the time being?" asked Judge Huycke.

"Well, for a year."

"That's not the time being it's the time future. We might all be beaten in another year," said His Honour.

Blodgett said that the has paid as high as three dollars and a half a day and then found it difficult to secure help.

Judge Huycke took exception to the disloyal statements made by Bowler and promised to send the applicant to penitentiary should he make any more utterances of a similar nature.

"You are not fit to live in this country, and if you don't keep your tongue quiet you will be put where you will be made to," scathingly remarked Judge Huycke.

Judgment was deferred.

Exemption Refused.

William Robert Tiernan, 708 Concession street, is a north of Ireland man. The applicant has two brothers at the front. A third brother tried to enlist, but was turned down.

Magistrate Dumble and Lieut.-Col. Clegg though Tiernan should go. The claim was disallowed.

Judgment Reserved.

Timothy Collins, 223 Perry street, local representative for the Crown Life Insurance Company, asked to be exempted for one year until his sister completed her Normal school course. Collins helps to support the family. He said he was willing to go, but he would like a little time to assist the family. Judgment was reserved.

Now a "C" Man.

The medical category of Frederick Sutcliffe, barber and tobacconist, Charlotte street, was changed from "A2" to "C." The applicant was exempted until "C" men are required.

"The Realfellows."

Cloy Taylor, a machinist, applied for exemption on the ground of ill health. The applicant produced a medical certificate signed by Dr. Harvey. The Board ignored this and sent Taylor up for further examination before the Medical Board.

"I was turned down by Dr. Eastwood," volunteered Taylor.

"What unit were you trying to get into?" inquired Judge Huycke.

"The Oddfellows," replied Taylor.

"Then you didn't try to get into the "realfellows," said Judge Huycke.

Taylor was sent up for further medical examiantion.

Claim Disallowed.

Francis Grover Halpin claimed exemption on domestic grounds.

"I though you were in khaki?" asked Judge Huycke.

"I bought myself out," replied Halpin.

Halpin is now a chauffeur for L. Green the horse buyer. The applicant is the only son at home with a widowed mother. The other two brothers are married and away from home. One sister is teaching school in Bobcaygeon and another sister is in Toronto where she is employed as a stenographer.

"Don't you think if your mother had money to buy you out that she could get along without your assistance?" inquired Judge Huycke.

The Board contended that the mother was financially independent.

The claim was disallowed.

Sherman E. Graham, 709 Bethune street, and Robert P. Armstrong, 85 Hunter street, were refused exemption.

James Henry Whatley and Harold Laplante, both "E" men, were exempted until their class is called.

William E. and Roger P. Moloney, R.R. No. 9, both farmers, were exempted until they cease to be employed as farmers.

Theft Charge Against J. S. Knapman Dismissed

Other Charges Will Be Dealt With on Thursday Next—The Evidence

At a special session of the Police Court held last evening, with Police Magistrate Dumble presiding, Mr. J. S. Knapman, 604 George Street, was charged with the theft on 20th December, 1916, from the Lytle Cartage Company, of $9.74. The accused was represented by Mr. G. N. Gordon, while Crown Attorney Hatton appeared for the prosecution.

William Lytle, sole proprietor of the William Lytle Cartage Company, was the first witness called. Lytle said that the accused, J. S. Knapman, occupied the position of general office man. In this capacity he was charged with keeping the books, sending out accounts, and banking. Witness signed all cheques, and had an understanding with Knapman to the effect that Knapman was to deposit all surplus money in the bank and pay all accounts by cheque. The amount referred to in the charge was shown on Knapman's receipt of money brought to him by James Robinson, a collector. The collection book was produced in Court. The nine dollars and seventy-four cents referred to in the information represented two payments collected from the Turnbull Company. Witness said that this item was not entered in the cash book.

Documents Missing.

"The money should have been put in the bank," said Magistrate Dumble.

"Knapman took the money, and I couldn't put it in the bank," replied Mr. Lytle.

"This man kept books in an extraordinary way," observed Magistrate Dumble as he glanced over the cash book.

The case halted when it was discovered that the bank book, cheques deposit slips, etc., were missing.

Both Mr. G. N. Gordon, counsel for the defence, and Magistrate Dumble contended that the documents in question should be produced in Court.

A hurry call was sent out for them and in the meantime Mr. Hatton called James Robinson, collector for the Lytle Cartage Company. Witness identified the collector's cash book, also the two Turnbull accounts collected on 20th December, 1916. Robinson said he always had his collections receipted by Knapman.

To Mr. Gordon, witness said he worked between times for D. McCabe, the tobacconist, whose place of business adjoined that of Lytle.

Upon the production in Court of the deposit slips, bank book, etc., Mr. Lytle was recalled, and to Mr. Gordon said that he was not familiar with bookkeeping. "That is what I paid Knapman for," asserted witness.

Witness said that sometimes the money used each week to pay the employees was drawn from the bank by cheque and sometimes it was drawn from cash taken in.

The books at the bank also failed to account for the money.

Gave I. O. U.

In his cross-examination by Mr. Gordon, Lytle said that 90 per cent. of all payments were made by cheque. Cash was sometimes drawn from the bank. The employees were paid partly by cheque and partly by cash. Witness got money from his bookkeeper on different occasions and gave an I.O.U.

David Fleming, bookkeeper for the company, said there were no credit entries in the cash book.

"Would you say it was good bookkeeping or outrageously bad bookkeeping?" asked His Worship.

"I'd say the latter," replied witness, who added that after taking over the books, he had been unable to strike a correct balance. He found more money taken in than was paid out."

"To draw the inference from these books that the money was converted to his own use would be bad law," remarked His Worship. "This case if sent up for trial, would only be kicked out."

Mr. Gordon, counsel for the accused, tried to account for the missing $9.74 by pointing out that Lytle had in December last given Knapman a number of I.O.U.'s, amounting to $33, and Magistrate Dumble said, "The only conclusion you could come to is that the bookkeeping was so infernally bad, you couldn't make anything out of the books."

This particular charge was dismissed.

Lieut. Arthur Huycke Ordered To Report

The Fourth Member of Judge Huycke's Family to Join the Colours

Lieut. Arthur Huycke, the youngest son of His Honour Judge Huycke, has been ordered to report for duty with the Royal Naval Air Service. This is the fourth and last son of Judge Huycke to enlist for service. Two of them have been wounded and invalided home, and a third is still on duty on the Western Front. The two boys who have been wounded are Lieut. Meredith Huycke and Lieut. Douglas Huycke. The latter has returned to duty in Canada and the former is home on sick leave. The third brother is Lieut. Wilfrid Huycke, now in France. Lieut. Arthur Huycke has been a member of the 74th Battery.

COLLECTED $22 FOR WHISKEY ORDERS FROM THIRTY CITIZENS

Detective Newhall last night squelched a little get-rich-quick game a Toronto man was working at the expense of a few guileless but thirsty citizens. He posed as a representative of a Montreal whisky house, and from two hopeful customers collected $22, but dodged delivery, and was apparently about to dodge the police until Detective Newhall learned that the stranger was planning to leave on the midnight train. Just as he was about to board it, he saw the detective approaching, and began to run up the railway toward Aylmer Street, where he was overtaken.

In Police Court this morning he was remanded for a week.

Three Norwood Men Surrender To Police

James Curtis, James Logan, and Alfred Gratton, three Norwood young men, surrendered themselves to the local authorities his morning as defaulers under the Military Service Act. They reported to the Armouries, but were sent to the Police Sation, where they were formally received, and returned to the military depot.

PROBLEM FOR BANKS IS NOW ONEROUS ONE

OTTAWA, Nov. 28.—The enormous purchases of Canadian dairy products and grain for export to Great Britain have created a peculiar problem for the Canadian banks which have financed these transactions. In fact, the way is being opened for the raising of future national loans in the United States.

Throughout the summer of 1917 the banks were required to provide very large credites in connection with the Canadian exports of dairy products, which attained record-breaking values. Early in the fall two special credits, only surpassed in magnitude by the munition credits, were arranged.

One of them, amounting to $75,000,000, was designed to facilitate purchases of Canadian packing house products by the British Government; and the others, amounting to $80,000,000, provided for the British purchase of Canada's 1917 grain crops.

Those, like the munition credits that preceded them, necessarily impose a heavy strain on the banks. In both cases the amounts to be advanced are much in excess of the peace-time requirements. The operations of the leading packers have expanded beyond the ante-bellum limits, and they require larger "lines" to enable them to buy their animals and carry the products. To enable them to compete with the United States for British orders, Canada is obliged to do what the United States are doing—take payment in part in British securities.

The British securities taken in case of the munition credits may run for an indefinite period, and if the securities acquired through the packers' credit are similarly subject to renewal, there will be a substantial addition to the dead load which our banks are required to carry. As the British authorities are to take up and pay cash for all grain bought under the special grain credit, on its arrival at the seaboard, this will be a more desirable transaction than the munition credits—as the advances will liquefy themselves promptly when the stuff is exported. Later in the season it may be necessary to extend long-dated credit to Britain in connection with the grain sales.

Because of this burden placed upon Canadian banks, grave fear is expressed by leading bank executives that with our foreign trade running as it now is, the call loans and bank balances due Canada in New York cannot be upheld in their present strong position unless we secure advances from the United States.

doua are still kicking. Roy went to Blighty to-day for fourteen days' leave.

I was talking to Scotty McKinlay to-day and he is still kicking around.

I received your parcel all O.K. and also one from Francis and Amanela. Thank you for all the contents of the parcels. I also received your twelve dollar cheque you sent me and also the two dollars, and I thank you very much. I received a letter from Francis the other day and also one from Tom and yourself. I had a letter from Anna since she went to the States and was very glad to know she is getting along all right. How are Duggal and Thelma and also Burnie and the little baby getting along? Real well, I hope.

I was talking to Henry Peal the other day. He is looking fine and getting along all right.

Well, dear mother, I will close for this time as my bed mate has some cocoa, bread and jam, cake and a cigar ready for me before I go to bed. You can thank the Lord that I am able to write you this letter. I am enjoying the best of health at present, with the exception of a little cold that I got a while ago up the line. I trust this will find you all enjoying the same good health, and remember me to all my brothers and sisters, and all my friends, not fogetting yourself and father, and with kind regards and hoping to be with you some time in the near future, I remain.

As ever your loving son,
DAVE.

FUNERAL OF MR. H. S. MACDONALD

The last mortal remains of the late Hugh S. MacDonald, who died on Tuesday, were laid at rest in the Little Lake Cemetery this afternoon, at 4 o'clock. The pall-bearers were Messrs. J. C. Smith, John Crane, T. H. G. Denne, E. B. Fowler, Dr. T. P. McCullough, and Dr. Malcolm McCulloch. An unusually large number of floral tributes testified to the deep regard and keen regret felt by Mr. MacDonald's friends.

Music & Drama

THE BRAT.

It is a long time since Peterborough has seen a better acted or more smoothly staged comedy than "The Brat," Maude Fulton's dainty play, which was seen at the Grand Opera House last night. Built along the same lines as "Peg O' My Heart," with which it has often been compared, "The Brat" is a most appealing production, full of clever lines and effective situations. The brat is a chorus girl late of the "Hyppydrome" as she calls it, a diamond in the rough who is pitched into the midst of a wealthy family and whose experiences there form the story of the play. She is pure gold inside and although she lacks the veneer and polish of those with whom she is associated, her innate good qualities eventually expose the flaws of the others.

Miss Rea Martin was irresistible in the title role. As the slangy chorus girl she was delightfully naive and appealing and held her audience from her first appearance to her last "I gotcha Steve" speech. Associated with her was a most adequate cast. Arthur LaRue gave a finished presentation of the part of Stephen Forrester, the wayward son, while Burt Robinson was equally effective as his novelist brother. Miss Dorothy Beldwin was a delightful debutante and Miss Edna M. Holland was effectively cast as Jane Depew, an artist. Miss Leonore Gnito made a typical society matron, and A. Pacie Ripple contributed a splendid bit as Timson, the butler.

The comedy was beautifully staged.

A RELIGIOUS CENSUS OF CITY

The Ministerial Association, as already announced, have decided upon a religious census of the city under the direction of the Sabbath School Association of Ontario. A preliminary meeting was held on Monday and another meeting will be held on Monday, December 10th, when Rev. Mr. Halpenny will again address the members. On account of the election it is not considered advisable to conduct the census until about the second week in January.

Lakefield Personals

Miss M. Traill was in Peterborough on Saturday.

Mrs. D. Sloane, of Peterborough, was the guest of Mrs. F. J. Tate on Saturday last.

Miss A. Davidson of Peterborough, was the guest of Miss Sherin for a few days last week.

Pte. Stanley Kidd, a returned soldier of the A.Y.P.A. was entertained by the members of the society on Thursday last in the Sunday school room. A very pleasant evening was spent in games and different amusements and was closed by three hearty cheers for the returned soldier and the National Anthem.

Mr. R. C. Strickland of Burleigh, spent the week end in the village on his return from spending a few days in Toronto.

Miss Josephine Gibson of Campbellford, is visiting her brother, Dr. S. J. Gibson, Miss Gibson has just graduated as nurse from St. Michael's Hospital, Toronto.

Captain W. M. Traill, who went overseas with the 243rd Battalion last spring from the west, arrived in Canada last week and was the guest of Mrs. Atwood at "Ashelworth" for a few days, on his return to Regina. Captain Traill was unfortunate in contracting a very severe attack of typhoid shortly afte, his arrival in England and was in a hospital for three months. It is sixteen years since Captain Traill last visited the village and he sees many changes during that interval.

Mr. Russell Little left on Wednesday last for Havelock, where he will undergo an operation for appendicitis.

Mrs. W. Webdale of Peterborough, spent the week end in the village visiting her mother, Mrs. Isaac Watson.

Mr. G. H. Raymas, who has been relieving operator at the G.T.R. station during the absence of Mr. Chant has returned to Port Perry.

Archibald James Watson, Braidwood Avenue.

Frank J. Grady, son of Mr. James Grady, butcher, applied for exemption on business grounds. He has two brothers, aged 16 and 18, respectively.

"My father will have to close the store if I go," Mr. Grady said.

"That's not a matter of national importance," Mr. Aylmer replied. "What about that 18-year-old boy?"

"He knows nothing about the business," Mr. Grady stated.

"He can learn," Mr. Aylmer suggested.

"But that will take some time," said the applicant.

Mr. Aylmer pointed out the difference between private and national affairs. Mr. Grady's butcher shop is a private business, he explained, but the Tribunal was appointed in the interests of the nation.

"You see we have no option," Mr. Aylmer concluded.

Mr. Moore added a brief instruction in the procedure of appeal.

Archibald Wilbert Achison, Smith Township, was granted exemption while he remains employed as a farmer. He rented his farm from his father, who lives in the city, and has no brother of military age.

Michael Coughlin, 349 Euclid Ave., listed as an "A2" man, sought exemption on business and physical grounds. He had told the Medical Board of the disabilities he feared, but they had discounted his misapprehensions.

A letter from the Peterborough Canoe Company supported his claim.

Disallowed.

FEARED EFFECTS OF OPERATION.

The possible effects of an operation performed ten years ago were presented by James W. Crowe, 45 Sophia St., whom the Medical Board marked "A2." He has three married brothers, and lives at home with his parents. His employment is that of clerk with the Bell Telephone Co. Exemption disallowed.

Mike Germak was formally exempted as an alien.

Thomas P. Martin, 368 Downie Street, produced a birth certificate showing that he is an American subject, and is beyond the U.S. draft age.

"You're a lucky fellow," Mr. Aylmer remarked.

EXEMPTION REFUSED.

John Buller, 381 Aylmer Street, tinsmith with Adamson and Dobbin, applied on domestic grounds. He has a younger brother working. His exemption was disallowed, with the assurance that a separation allowance would be of more help to his mother than his tinsmithing.

DECISION RESERVED.

William J. Collins, 38 Hunter Street, has a brother, 22 years old, whose claim will be heard to-morrow at the Court-House. He stated that his mother was growing old, and asked for exemption on domestic grounds. His mother receives the rent from two houses and a grocery store.

"Have you and your brother tossed up to see which should go?" Mr. Moore asked.

Mr. Collins, who is twenty years old, said he was not particularly prepared to go. He has been engaged for three months as a telephone inspector, and previously worked with his married brother in the grocery store. He has one brother overseas. Decision reserved.

WAS RE-EXAMINED.

John S. Holmes, 133 Aylmer Street, was discharged from the 23rd Battery in 1915. He was listed "A2" by the Medical Board, and this morning secured re-examination, returning with the statement that the doctors had not changed his rating. Exemption disallowed.

William James MacFarlane, 261 Lake Street, applied on domestic grounds. He is employed as a tinsmith at the De Laval factory. His father, he said, had been ill practically all summer.

Decision reserved.

Walter V. McIlmoyle, 217 Charlotte St., a driver with the Dominion Express Co., applied on domestic grounds.

Decision reserved.

Dr. Margaret Gordon Is Attending The Executive Meeting

Aunt of Mr. G. N. Gordon is in the City—An Advocate of Universal Franchise

Dr. Margaret Gordon, who is attending the executive meeting of the National Council of Women, is the President of the Dominion Suffrage Association, and is an aunt of Mr. G. N. Gordon, of this city.

Dr. Gordon has been known for twenty years as the woman who put up a tremendous fight against child labour in factories, and who has gone before the Legislature on many occasions to obtain laws preventing the long hours of labour for women and girls. She and Miss Laura Hughes, the well-known Labour leader, have appeared many times together, and are strong advocates of limited hours of labour for women and girls, and of universal franchise for women.

DEATH OF MR. EDWARD HOWSON

Mr. George H. Howson received a wire from Calgary to-day informing him of the death in that city of his brother, Mr. Edward C. Howson, formerly of Peterborough.

The body will be brought home via the C.P.R. on Sunday night, and interment will take place at Keene on Monday.

Further particulars will be given later.

Expect To Get Quota From The Single Men

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

MONTREAL, Addressing an audience at Verdun, near here, last night, Hon. C. J. Doherty, Minister of Justice, said that the Government expected to get the one hundred thousand men required from the unmarried men, the class now being called, but he did not think the people of Canada would suggest that Canada should drop her military effort because one hundred thousand was not forthcoming from the unmarried men.

No Chance Of A Furlough For 1st Division

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

OTTAWA, Nov. 29. — Until sufficient reinforcements are available through the operations of the Military Service Act or otherwise, it will be impossible to get the First Contingent men now at the front home on a furlough. This was the final and positive declaration of Hon. Sidney Mewburn, Minister of Militia, when asked about the matter this morning.

RECORD MEAT ORDER OUTDOES PRECEDENT

PURCHASE FOR ALLIED NATIONS MADE IN CHICAGO BY FOOD ADMINISTRATOR.

CHICAGO, Nov. 28.—The greatest meat order in the history of the Chicago stockyards and of the world was placed here to-day. Joseph P. Cotton, chief of the meat division of the Food Administrator was the buyer and the purchase was for the allied nations, the Red Cross and the Belgian Relief Commission.

The tonnage, the kinds of meats involved and the time for deliveries will remain secret as will the names of the fifteen packers who divided the orders.

The order for the United States army failed to arrive in time, it was said, and will be divided later. It also was said the greater part of the order will be delivered after the first of the year and that cured meats and lard will go to make up a considerable portion of the whole.

The order was placed under the new prices and board on Saturday by the Food Administrator, allowing the packers not more than two and one-half per cent. profit on meat sales. The order was unusual in that there was no competition, the whole thing being shared out at the Government's own prices, practically at the dictation of Mr. Cotton.

Editor, Examiner:

Dear Sir,— Would you kindly let those interested know through the columns of your valuable paper, if our young men of Canada twenty years old, and having complied with the provisions of the Military Service Act., i.e., having put in their claim for exemption or put in their application for service before the 10th day of November just passed, which terms them soldiers on leave without pay, I would think this should put them on an equal footing, as far as voting is concerned, with the boys overseas.

An Enquirer.

Young men of twenty years of age, even although they have complied with the Military Service Act, are not entitled to vote. They must be twenty-one years of age to exercise the franchise.—Editor of the Examiner.

To The Editor of The Examiner.

Dear Sir,—In reply to "Anti-Burnham" I would like to draw his or her attention to the Editor's editorial under the heading of "A Grateful Country," in the same issue as the "Anti-Burnham's" letter. Now the same lady who is accused of organizing a side show, etc., is the foremost leader of those who have the G. W. V. A. at heart, and who the Editor rightly praises. I am not personally acquainted with the said lady, but if "Anti-Burnham" looked for facts he would find that Mrs. Morris has done, and is doing, all that lies in her power for soldiers and their wives, and anything she undertakes has that end in view.

Thanking you, Mr. Editor,

"THE WIFE OF A G.W.V.A."

To the Editor:

Dear Sir,— As one of the common people I wish to call your attention to the fact that if those in authority in this country are going to continue much longer to ignore the interests of the toiler and the wage-earner then we have grave reasons to be alarmed and let me assure you that if there is no action, it may denote the calm before the storm. Many are held back only by a spirit of patriotism.

We should try and remember that in the past they have always fought for a negative, but the working class are looking forward to a time in the near future when they will be in a position to start a constructive policy more in the interest of the masses than the classes rule that we have at the present time. If this change has to be brought about by force then who have we to blame? We should learn a lesson from Russia, for Hamilton Fife has told us that the Russian common people are the best people that he has ever met in all his travels. He also claims that their state of mind has been brought about by means similar to those adopted by the government and big interests in this country, for he says: In 1915 the Russian army went into the trenches with one gun to three men. They had no protection from the rear, the ammunition was bad and the people at home believed that their soldiers were murdered by those in charge of affairs. And owing to the grafters, profiteers and unprincipled politicians, conditions became unbearable; flag-waving patriotism or jingoism could not hold them. We know that many a brave boy will fill a lonely grave on the battle field, he will never return to his Canadian home on account of the hidden power of dividends in politics.

Under democracy the producer refuses to be taught lessons in political economy from officials like Hanna, who tell us that a gang of sharks and leeches known as the middle men, cannot be controlled.

As long as we continue to send to Ottawa weather cock politicians and representatives who have no more constructive ability than a parrot, what can we expect?

Some have got their sufficiency of this kind of "rot" and know how to use their franchise conscientiously, while other says they will not vote at all. Some of this class are cowards, they know how they should act, but for selfish reasons will not help to right a wrong.

How much more gumming for small game will there be by the Borden government before they decide to bring down the great beasts of prey. Mr. Bourassa and his kind with all their faults never entered into a combination to rob mothers while their sons died in war 3,000 miles away—

They prosecute the man or woman
Who steals the goose from off the common;
But leave the larger felon loose
Who steals the common from the goose.

One of the Common People.

Peterborough, Nov. 29th.

tEdior of the Examiner.

Sir,—In Tuesday's issue of the Examiner Mr. Burnham invites Labour to either interview Premier Borden or speak for a few minutes at the meeting to be held on Friday, 30th November. I hope organised Labour will not miss this opportunity.

As a supporter of Mr. Burnham and the Borden Government in the past, I would like to ask: When and how did Mr. Burnham help to forward the interests of Labour in the Federal Parliament along the undermentioned lines?

Canada is optimistic for a greater industrial development. The Press and Government are asking the people to be prepared. The Government has helped the capitalists in the past and at present. What is it going to do for Labour that it may take part in the benefits that might accrue for mutual benefit, protection and improvement, to make the life of the worker more tolerable, such as shorter hours, higher wages, better working conditions?

A code of Labour laws must be made to meet this industrial revolution. We have the Labour experience of the older countries to base our claims upon.

Under the Federal Government of our cousins across the border, it is unlawful for any officer of the Government or any contractor for public works to allow labourers or mechanics to work more than eight hours a day.

The health of the employee is jeopardised by long hours of labour; fatigue from long hours endangers the life of the employee, therefore the public; especially in smelting, refining works, bakeries, cotton and woollen mills, and most factory work, shorter hours would help to relieve the unemployed situation.

The labouring class is fast acquiring a consciousness of their existence, and that the commodity of the labourer is not protected like the commodity he has produced for his employer.

We must fight for protective tariffs for labour, as we are falling into a state of pauper labour in normal times, prohibition of wage deduction on account of fines for breakages, discount for payment, medical attendance, relief funds, and suppress the existing form of premium work as used in numerous manufacturing establishments throughout the Dominion.

This is no impossibility. Already a number of states across the border have enacted laws, tending to give special protection to and encouraging trade unionism, making it unlawful for employers to discharge a man for joining Trades Councils and unions; hence the labels and insignia as recognised, the misuse of which is fraudulent.

Labour has a religion of universal wellbeing — improvement of social conditions, development of personal from social and moral bondage; work for a better distribution of labour; regulation of labour by formal legislation on general industrial health, safety, and freedom for the worker; combination for regulating the relations between master and men, and for imposing restrictions on the conduct of any industry or business; should be a labour congress yearly to gather statstical evidence to connect the course of labour; the study of profitable employment for the aged, less capable, etc.

Combination by men begets combination by master, which tends towards settlement by treaties or laws, providing means of arbitration in disputes by regular state boards in which both employer and employed would be represented, with an agreement of status quo pending settlement, and failing to carry out decision or verdict, to be treated as a contempt of court.

A judicial enforcement of labour laws, to my mind, in the industrial revolution conditions, will be so materially altered that trade unions in their present form must undergo profound alteration, or decay.

This is a new country with great natural resources, and therefore can have natural monopolies, which allow for all bolstered difficulties in the way of the practical working of conditions above mentioned.

Canada is warned through the press from European authorities that there is likely to be a great rush for the colonies after the war. If Mr. Burnham is returned, I hope he will show his interest in labour by protecting Canadian labour against cheap foreign labour, and stop an immigrant glut of the labour market.

—Yours, T. Tooms.

Peterborough, 28th Nov., 1917.

Editor, Examiner:

Sir,—The Examiner has again given publication to an anonymous letter, a dastardly attack in the dark worthy of the methods of a sandbagger.

About two years ago the Examiner published the statement that it would not insert any letters attacking and mentioning by name citizens if not signed by the name of the writer.

Why has the Examiner, during this election campaign, deviated from this splendid rule?

I saw no greater fault in Mrs. Morris while at the Opera House announcing a public meeting than I did in the management issuing leaflets announcing the show for the following evening.

Mrs. Morris has excited the citizens' highest admiration for the great work she has accomplished in the public welfare while suffering under a great private sorrow.

She did not let the loss of her only son at the front retard any work she was able to do on behalf of the Empire.

I don't see why any lady should desist from working on behalf of the Win-the-War Union Government because some relative happens to be a Government employee. Women, I believe, are allowed to vote according to their own inclination, and do not have to, and in many cases will not, follow the lead of their men relatives.

In conclusion, let me beg the Examiner not to open its columns to such villanous knifing in the dark. Yours truly,

J. W. WORTH.

The Examiner thanks Mr. Worth for calling attention to the matter dealt with in his letter. The correspondence criticized should not have been used. It was put into publication inadvertently, and the Examiner regrets that it should have been made the medium of giving publicity to reprehensible comment.

A NECESSITY IN THE HOUSE.

Most of the common ills of life arise from a torpid, sluggish condition of the Liver, Kidneys or Bowels, and because they act on each of these organs in a direct and specific way Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills overcome serious and painful diseases over which ordinary medicines have no control.

NOTE DROPPED BY SOLDIER BRINGS SPEEDY WEDDING

HINTON, W. Va.—When on a Sunday Miss Ledotia S. Hyatt, a pretty milliner, saw a piece of paper fluttering from the window of a passing train, she curiously picked it up. As a result she is the bride of J. Dale Jackson of Spokane, Wash., whom she had never heard of previous to that time. The couple were married at the home of Mr. and Mrs. B. J. Greenland by the Rev. J. J. Rives of the Methodist church.

Miss Hyatt's home is in Cincinnati but she was employed in a local millinery store. Jackson, whose present location is with the marine corps at Quantico, Va., was passing through here on a train when he threw a note off bearing his name. Miss Hyatt, finding the note, answered it briefly. This led to a correspondence which at the end of three weeks resulted in the wedding. Mr. Jackson coming here on a furlough for the event.

Harvest In France Worst in 50 Years

The difficulties of the food situation in France are described in a dispatch from Paris which says:

"An official estimate has now been made of the French harvest, and though the full figures have not been published the discouraging statement has been made in the Chamber by the Minister for Supply that it is the worst for 50 years. This has been due in part to the exceptionally severe weather during last winter, which did great damage to the autumn-sown crops, and even more largely to the disastrous spring. Almost till the end of April continuous snow and frost prevented any adequate work being done in the fields, and the consequent rush that came in the last few weeks could not possibly be coped with by the labourers and the women folk still left on the land.

"As in Britain, the Government had been late to realize how serious the submarine menace might become and it was not till in February —after the 'sink-at-sight' blockade began —that any effort was made to secure the release from the army of the older classes of farmers and agricultural labourers. Then, owing to the weather conditions, it was almost too late to effect any great improvement this year, and though something was gained in the increase of vegetable and late-grown crops the important wheat crop was already doomed.

The figures for wheat, maize, rye, barley, oats, potatoes and sugar beets show a yield of 777,000,000 bushels.

GREAT PICTURE AT THE EMPIRE

A big audience saw this wonderful screen production of "Baby Mine" at the Empire Theatre last night. To-night will be the last opportunity of seeing this remarkable picture, one of the finest ever screened. Those who have seen the stage version of the play are especially enthusiastic over the manner it is presented on the screen. Don't miss this opportunity.

WEDDING BELLS

BELL—NELSON.

The marriage took place yesterday in the manse of St. Paul's Church, of Mr. Allan C. Bell, of Dummer Township, to Miss Janet Nelson, also of Dummer. Rev. Mr. Pogue officiated. The couple, who were unattended, will reside in Dummer.

MARTIN—YOUNG.

A quiet wedding was solemnized at the Trinity Methodist parsonage last evening when Harvey Martin was united in marriage to Marguerite M. Young, daughter of Mr. Joseph Young, of Peterborough. The ceremony was performed by Rev. J. P. Wilson. The young couple were attended by Thos. J. Ball and Miss Annie Martin.

McAULIFFE—COSGROVE.

A pretty wedding was solemnised at Sacred Heart Church at seven o'clock on Tuesday, 27th November, when Miss Lizzie, daughter of Richard Cosgrove, of Ennismore, and Mr. Martin McAuliffe, son of Peter McAuliffe, of Emily, were married by Rev. Father McCauley, of Ennismore. The bride wore a brown suit, with a picture hat, and was attended by her cousin, Miss Ida Callin, who wore a blue suit and a picture hat.

Mr. Harry Maloney attended the groom.

After the ceremony, Mr. and Mrs McAuliffe drove to the home of the bride's aunt, where a dainty dinner was served, after which they left on the noon train for points west. On their return they will reside in Emily.

The bride received many presents. The groom's gift to the bride was a set of furs and to the bridesmaid a necklace.

Voice of The People

Editor of the Examiner.

Sir,—The people should know that Mr. Rowell is the man who made $100,000 out of the Consolidated Lake Superior when the old Ross Government guaranteed the bonds of the Lake Superior Company at Sault Ste Marie. Mr. Rowell got $100,000 for this job of putting through the deal. He is a Trust and Guarantee Company director, director of The Globe, and he is a rich man, just the same as all the rest of the members of the Union Government. No member of the Union Government belongs to the ordinary people. They are all either representatives of big interests or mixed up with the big interests, and Mr. Rowell is no exception.—Yours truly, An Ordinary Man.

Editor, Examiner:

Dear Sir,—I want to ask Sir Robert Borden why he has not conscripted the wealth of Sir Joseph Flavelle. I was returned from the front within the last few days, and I find that my family and the families of other soldiers have been pinching the last cent to clothe and feed the children, while Sir Joseph Flavelle and his friends have been wallowing in millions, squeezed from the pockets of poor people like myself. I hear that there has been an investigation and that Sir Joseph Flavelle has made over eighty per cent. profits every year during the war, and nothing has been done to make him pay these profits over to take care of poor suffering humanity who have been shot, gassed and maimed by the Hun. I saw a sign the other day, "Who Would the Kaiser Vote For?" and my opinion is that he would vote for Sir Joseph Flavelle as his greatest friend in Canada. Yours truly, Returned Soldier.

PARACHUTE LIGHTS IN TREE-TOP WITH BRITISH OBSERVER —Early in the battle of Menin Road, in Flanders, a British observation balloon and its observer got into serious difficulties. The observer to escape injury chanced his life in the parachute. This British official photograph shows the parachute carrying him to safety in a tree-top. The observer let himself down from the precarious position by means of a parachute ropes which enabled him to reach another truncated tree.

POOL BOARD HAS ITS FIRST MEETING

Is Dealing With Joint Use of Railways in War's Interests.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Nov. 28—Pooling of the equipment, including trackage, cars, locomotives and employees of the railroads of the eastern districts of the United States comprising the territory east of the Mississippi and north of the Ohio and Potomac Rivers, as agreed upon by the railroad war board a few days ago, was to-day placed in charge of a committee representing the principal eastern lines. The committee, which is headed by A. W. Thompson, vice-president of the Baltimore and Ohio, and comprised of the operating presidents and vice-presidents of the chief lines of the eastern district, held its first session here to-day.

Alleviation of the congestion on eastern lines, which is said to be hindering the war activities of the Government and interfering with business throughout the nation, is the problem before the committee, which is to be known as the Railroad Pool Board. To solve this problem the committee has been authorised to enforce the joint use by all railroads of the east of tracks, rolling stock and even employees. Upon the success of the committee in solving this problem, it is considered, depends whether the Government shall be compelled to take over the operation of the railroad systems of the country. By many railroad men and Government officials it is considered that the work of the Railway Pool Board alone can prevent Government operation.

"Pop, what's camouflage?" "It is the sort of stuff your Aunt Henny puts on her face to make her try and represent something young and pretty."—Baltimore "American".

CATTLE MARKET

Union Stock Yards — Receipts, 45 cars, with 500 cattle, 45 calves, 3,568 hogs, and 955 sheep and lambs.

There was a fair cleaning up market yesterday, anything with quality selling good and strong at the advanced prices. Poor quality cattle straight off the grass, not much in demand, and not so easy to sell. But the market is strong for anything good out of the stables.

Sheep and lambs barely steady under the continued heavy offerings.

BELGIAN ARMY IS READY TO DO PART

Will Aid in Offensive in Flanders Whenever Word is Given.

HAVRE, Nov. 15.—Ten divisions strong, the Belgian Army is ready to take its part in the offensive in Flanders whenever the word is given. The Belgian Minister of War today told the Associated Press that the Belgian Army was composed of 117,000 men at the beginning of the war, increased by 20,000 volunteers in August, 1914, and reduced to 60,000 men after the battle of the Yser.

Since then, by the enrollment of Belgian refugees and the enlistment of volunteers, who have braved the live wire barriers on the Holland frontier, it has been brought up to ten divisions of well-trained troops.

"If our Army has not undertaken operations of a wider scope up to this time," said the Minister, "it is because it does not devolve on it to decide the moment when these operations should begin. The army is only a part of the combined Allied forces acting in unison and in addition to the carefully developed plans. The Army has valiantly filled the role more ungrateful than glorious, that has been assigned to it. It has just proved by its brilliant participation in the last offensive in Flanders that it is ready to attack with fervour and awaits impatiently the hour."

New York Commercial: Washington is the only "dry" national capital unless Ottawa, Canada, is classed as such, and its aridity will attract world-wide attention. It is not quite "bone-dry," because Congress did not prohibit the importation of alcoholic beverages into the District of Columbia, but that will be attempted at the next session, when nation-wide prohibition will come to the front again.
